

White Christmas Early in Nebraska

Freezy Skid Stuff Sloshes Into State

Santa is probably revising his naughty and nice lists today if he was listening in on disgruntled motorists caught Saturday in Nebraska's first major snowfall of the year.

And before you relax over that Sunday morning cup of coffee, you would be wise to see which side of the street your car is parked on.

Mayor Sam Schwartzkopf has declared a snow emergency, banning parking today along residential streets on the side with odd-numbered addresses. The order also bans parking on both sides of city bus routes.

Lincoln police say cars that do not comply with the order will be ticketed and may be towed away.

There is a $10 fine for violations on residential streets and a $25 fine for violations along bus routes. The towing fee may run as much as $15, according to police.

Six inches of snow had blanketed the Capital City by midnight, with one to three additional inches predicted before morning, when the snow was expected to end.

Snow fell throughout the state, causing hazardous driving conditions. Sargent, Grand Island and McCook all recorded state highs of 10 inches.

Besides naughty words from motorists, the snow brought Christmas spirit to many folks and a general shopping slowdown to retailers.

On what is usually one of the biggest sales days of the holiday season, the manager at Lincoln's Montgomery Ward store in Gateway Shopping Center reported an overall decrease in the number of shoppers. Some merchandise was moving briskly, however.

One of the few things that could be described as hot during the snowstorm was the run on snow blowers and snow tires, he said.

The manager at Lincoln's Goodyear store also reported a large number of fire shoppers. "It was one of the biggest days we've had," he said. Noting that many motorists put off buying snow tires until the snow piles up, he said customers bringing their cars in at 4:30 p.m. Saturday would be back on the streets by 8.

Lincoln police reported 99 fender benders between 9 p.m. and midnight. No serious injuries were reported.

Street Supt. Lloyd Bomberger said 24 plows were clearing emergency snow routes Saturday night.

Towing services throughout the city reported business was booming Saturday, especially on the Interstate. One Lincoln towing service said trucks and buses were sliding crosswise on ramps and causing cars to become stuck behind them.

The State Patrol reported motorists "stranded all over the place" Saturday night but said no serious accidents had occurred. A Greyhound bus driver told the patrol it took him more than two hours to go from Kearney to Grand Island on I-80.

Visibility was reported poor throughout most of the state.

A desk clerk at the Lincoln Hilton reported an above-normal number of guests Saturday night. Many people checked out and later returned because of highway conditions, she said. And many out-of-city shoppers decided to spend the night rather than hazard the drive home.

Lincoln Municipal Airport was closed to air traffic Saturday afternoon, but no travelers were reported stranded at the terminal.

Bing Crosby's dream of a white Christmas came true a little early this year, and for some motorists it may have turned into more of a nightmare. A driver's view of Lincoln's O St.

shows the conditions which also cut down the number of holiday shoppers.

Withholding Action Set on Coffee to Hike Price

Puerto Ordaz, Venezuela (AP) — Five Central American countries and Panama agreed Saturday to hold part of their coffee crops off the world market to try to drive up prices. Oil-rich Venezuela agreed to back the countries financially.

The six countries exported $700 million worth of coffee in 1973 and, according to a recent statistic, between 80 and 90% of the exports go to the United States. Each country exports an average of 150 million pounds of coffee annually.

The action came 24 hours after major oil producers decided to hike their revenues by 38 cents a barrel. Oil company spokesmen indicated the increase probably would be passed along to consumers in the form of an increase of nearly one cent a gallon on petroleum products.

A declaration signed at the end of a two-day summit here called for limiting the supply of coffee to obtain "just prices." The national leaders did not say how much would be withheld but said their finance ministers would meet in Guatemala on Tuesday to work out arrangements.

Unofficial sources said Venezuela, which expects to have oil revenues this year of $10 billion, would provide about $80 million to finance the scheme.

Coffee prices have been falling on world commodity markets in recent months. Though the wholesale cash price in New York was just under 70 cents a pound last week, futures contracts for delivery next spring and summer are selling for 60 cents or less. The joint action is intended to halt that decline.

Attending the session were the presidents of Costa Rica, Nicaragua, Honduras, El Salvador, Guatemala and Venezuela and Panamanian strongman Gen. Omar Torrijos.

In the so-called Guayana Declaration, Venezuela also agreed to finance several investment projects in Central America and the six smaller countries agreed to buy a total of 66,100 barrels of Venezuelan oil a day at current market prices.

Under the financing mechanism for the oil-investment swap, Venezuela will set up a fund in its central bank from which the central banks of the six countries can obtain 25-year loans to buy the oil.

Charter Plane Hijacked

Tampa, Fla. (UPI) — A twin-engine charter plane was hijacked to Cuba Saturday night by a man who pulled a gun on the pilot in Tampa's Peter O. Knight Airport.

A spokesman for the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) in Atlanta said the unidentified hijacker, "tall and slender" and in his late 30s, had chartered a plane to Naples, Fla., but the Tampa tower reported after takeoff that the hijacker had demanded to go to Havana.

The FAA spokesman said the twin-engine Piper Seneca took off from Tampa at 7:34 p.m. (EST) and landed in Havana at 10:18 p.m.

The pilot, identified as Frank Haigney, a charter service employee, was reported unhurt, the spokesman said.

The FAA spokesman said witnesses in the airport reported seeing the hijacker pull the pistol on Haigney, apparently because the hijacker had first chartered a single-engine plane and then demanded a larger one, which he was told was not available.

"He pulled out a gun and said, 'I guess we'll just have to do it this way,'" the witness said.

The FAA spokesman said shortly after takeoff from Knight Field, Tampa's secondary air field, Haigney told the Tampa tower he needed to go to Miami and "possibly further south."

Haigney told the tower a short time later he was going to Cuba, the spokesman said.

Squeeze Is on Major Oil Companies

By Clyde Farnsworth
(c) New York Times

Vienna — The squeeze is on the major oil companies, whose costs for oil have risen as a result of Friday's pricing decision by the 13-nation Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC).

To the extent the companies are able, or allowed, to pass on their higher costs, the consumer oil bill, already raised 400% in the last year, will rise again.

The OPEC countries in their two-day meeting here have taken skillful advantage of the resentment in consumer nations against ballooning oil profits of the so-called majors.

The reference is to the eight multinational companies that control about three quarters of the non-Communist world oil trade — Exxon, Mobil, Texaco, Standard Oil of California and Gulf, in the United States, and the British Petroleum Co., Ltd., Royal Dutch-Shell and Compagnie Francaise des Petroles in Europe.

These are the companies that operate in concessions in the Middle East and elsewhere and generally get their oil cheaper than the independents and state enterprises that buy their oil at market prices fixed by the OPEC nations.

What's happened here is that the OPEC countries have lowered their market price for the latter group by about 3 1/2% and raised the costs to the majors by about the same proportion.

"This is a good decision for consumer countries because we are limiting the excess profits of the big companies," says Jamshid Amouzegar, Iran's chief spokesman on oil matters.

"We are trying to give the independents more power in the oil market so that the majors will have less to say," Khider Herzallah, the Saudi Arabian oil official, commented.

The thrust of these and other statements at the meeting wound up Friday night was consumer governments would have only themselves to blame if they let the decision lead to another increase in their bills.

Some countries will be better off than others. Austria is supplied, for instance, 70% by state-owned oil companies, which are, theoretically at least, in a position now to lower prices.

But with most of the industrialized world dependent in large measure on the majors, the question remains whether they will absorb the higher cost.

One of the complications is that the majors have been using some of their profits in expanding exploration programs outside the OPEC area.

In the last 12 months these programs have been relatively successful, with new discoveries expected to yield 3 million to 5 million barrels a day by 1990. This represents more than 10% of the current output of the OPEC group. OPEC itself produces 60% of the current output of the non-Communist world's oil.

The situation is complicated further by the process under way for some years in which producing nations have been acquiring even greater participation in oil activities in their territory.

Saudi Arabia, the biggest exporter, is now negotiating 100% participation with Aramco, the American-owned concessionaire controlled by Exxon, California Standard, Texaco and Mobil.

Present Saudi participation at 60% means Aramco can buy 40% of its crude oil at a concessionary price, which has now been raised 3 1/2% and 60% at the OPEC-set market price.

Participation at 100% means Aramco's concessionary rights would be withdrawn. But it doesn't mean Aramco would stop operating in Saudi Arabia. Aramco would become, in effect, a service company entitled to a fee for lifting oil.

The OPEC nations have said their new prices will stay in effect until next Oct. 1. In other words, despite the inflation that is eroding purchasing power of money in the west at the rate of 1% a month, they are promising relative stability.

Life Is a Bit Skittery for Ex-Prisoner, 89

By Dale Burgess

Michigan City, Ind. (AP) — He was treated with respect by both black and white prisoners because they saw in him a symbol of hope.

"He meant to them," said Mike Midkiff, a state ombudsman, "that if some judge sentenced you to 99 years in prison, by golly you might make it."

Now, at the age of 89, Johnson VanDyke Grigsby is re-entering the world he left 66 years ago when he was sent to prison for killing a man in a saloon brawl.

In his first few days of freedom, he is wary and afraid of automobiles, which he doesn't like or trust.

"Now horses," he said, "I love horses. Used to own one."

"Mr. Grigsby," as he was known to the other inmates during his later years at the Indiana State Prison, was paroled last week.

He shows no signs of "freedom shock" — despite spending 46 of his 66 years' imprisonment in wards for the criminally insane before a psychiatrist examined him and said he was sane.

His home, at least temporarily, is the Woodview Rehabilitation Center, an ultramodern convalescent home a few miles from the prison.

He has kept up with much of the changing world through radio and television, but he did have one problem when he left the prison: He couldn't understand why the new outfit of clothing given all departing prisoners didn't include garters.

The State Correction Dept. wants Grigsby to be exposed gradually to the outside world, which he left in 1908. But the elderly man doesn't understand why he can't leave the convalescent home and go anywhere he pleases. He wants to visit a niece in Anderson, Ind., his only surviving blood relative.

Racial Remarks

The niece is in her 60s and the department doesn't think it would be practical for her to take Grigsby into her home to live, as he would like.

Grigsby, a black man, was sentenced to life imprisonment for second-degree murder after killing a white man in a saloon at Alexandria.

The record shows the other man had a knife and made disparaging remarks about Grigsby's race after a poker game. Grigsby went out and got an "equalizer," a knife with a deerfoot handle. The white man threw a chair at Grigsby when he returned.

The black man, then and even now a powerful figure, lunged under the chair and stabbed the white man.

Judge John F. McClure of the Madison County Circuit Court, where Grigsby was convicted, wrote to the prison warden that the jury was about as lenient as it could be under the circumstances. He added that the victim "was not a man of high character."

'My God ...'

"That's probably why there wasn't a necktie party," said Midkiff, the state ombudsman who spends all his time listening to prisoners' grievances and trying to do something about them.

It was Midkiff who started the campaign for Grigsby's release.

Melancholy Mood

Daniel Moynihan, who is being replaced as the American ambassador to India by William Saxbe, who has resigned as attorney general, is leaving India in a melancholy mood. He said in an interview in New Delhi with the New York Times his own task — which was to improve relations with India — was finished and relations with India are now "in an equilibrium state." He said, however, that the U.S.' relations with India seem fragile, and that too little attention is being paid to her.

the State Department of Correction in Indianapolis," Midkiff said, "and when I saw Grigsby's folder I said, 'My God, this man has been in the state prison since 1908'."

Midkiff said he asked the prison warden, since replaced, what he knew about Johnson VanDyke Grigsby and the warden replied that he had never heard of him.

"Incredible," Midkiff said. He found that Gov. Otis R. Bowen and the State Clemency Commission were willing to parole Grigsby if he had somewhere to go. The search ended at the convalescent home.

Insane Section

"This was a classic case of a man being lost in an institution," Midkiff said.

In 1913, five years after Grigsby entered the prison, he was designated mentally disturbed and put in the criminally insane section of the prison. The records are meager but his file of that period includes pitiful letters from his mother, saying he was his parents' main support and they had nothing to eat half the time.

Grigsby stayed in the mental ward until 1954 when all of the prisoners in the ward were transferred to Norman Beatty Memorial Hospital, a state institution a few miles away at Westville, Ind.

A psychiatrist examined Grigsby in 1959, found nothing wrong with his mind, and he was returned to the Michigan City prison.

"The worst time I have had was the day I stood in court and was sentenced," Grigsby said last week. "I made a lot of friends in prison. But I don't want to go back even to visit. Why should I?"

Miss Picasso said she never dreamed of trying her hand at painting: "That would be too difficult because of my grandfather. But he did not make his original triumph in pottery," she said, and this gave her the courage to design 27 simple ceramic works in abstract or vase-like forms that she says do not echo her grandfather's whimsical ceramics.

Some Firms Planning to Revive Promotion Gimmicks

Trend Still Toward Fewer Gasoline Stations

By Peter Bernstein
(c) Newhouse News Service

Washington — A survey of 15 major oil companies shows they plan to close approximately 2,000 gasoline stations across the country early next year as part of a major effort to eliminate outmoded stations and boost profits. In addition, some firms are planning to revive sweepstakes and other promotional gimmicks.

The stations to be closed are in addition to about 9,000 already deactivated this year, and 15,000 the year before.

If the trend toward fewer stations continues, by this time next year there will be less than 200,000 stations, the lowest number since 1950, according to National Petroleum News, a weekly trade magazine.

The shutdowns were confirmed by a top official at the American Petroleum Institute

(API) public relations arm of the oil industry. "The construction of new stations is slipping and the deactivation of older, marginal units is still accelerating," said Bruce Cecil, director of API's marketing division. "The consensus is that we've been over-built."

Some oil firms are planning to revive the use of sweepstakes, premiums and other promotional schemes next year to boost their sales, particularly in the South. The promotions will be tested during the first few months of next year, according to industry sources, and then adopted on a permanent basis.

Cents-off Coupons
Likewise, a number of firms — Gulf, Exxon, Shell, Sun, Union Amoco and Arco — plan to expand credit-merchandising at the stations through cents-off coupons.

The oil firms insist credit-merchandising is not intended to boost gasoline sales. Rather it is designed to increase the sale of tires and other auto accessories, they say.

Some federal energy officials think otherwise. "From our point of view, all of these gimmicks are designed to get the motorist to buy more gas," a spokesman for the Federal Energy Administration (FEA) said.

But there is almost nothing the FEA can do about it, even though it runs counter to the administration's goal of reducing oil imports by 1 million barrels a day next year. "It's not within our legislative purview to tell a gasoline station owner how to run his station," the FEA spokesman said.

Recent projections indicate the South still has the greatest number of service stations — 81,000. But the individual states with the largest number of outlets are California, 19,179; Texas, 17,119; Ohio, 11,723; and New York, 11,356.

Station closings have been most numerous in California and New York — the two most populous states and the ones with the most cars. Other areas affected by station shutdowns have been New Jersey, Oklahoma, Missouri, North Carolina and the District of Columbia.

Profits Helped
However, the trend toward fewer stations has helped rather than hurt oil company profits. For one thing, many deactivated stations have been in areas where competition between oil companies has proven to be financially unproductive. Where some busy intersections once had four gas stations, there are now only two.

For another, marginal stations are being replaced in some cases by high-volume, self-service stations that hold five times as much gasoline and stay open around the clock. Gulf Oil Co. had 31,000 service stations in 1968, is now down to 21,000 and expects to be down to 15,000 by 1978. Of those, 2,000 will be self-service.

Several other firms — Exxon, Amoco, Texaco and Arco — are converting portions of existing stations to self-service.

Other changes are under way. The free road map — long a staple of the motoring life — is fading from the scene. Map producers like Rand-McNally, which supplies half the oil industry report that orders are off 20 to 50% since 1972. Some stations now charge customers for maps, while others no longer carry them.

At many gas pumps, particularly in big cities, service station attendants no longer have the time or the inclination to check the oil and battery or clean the car windows.

The upshot is that because there are fewer stations and less competition between them, motorists often have no alternative but self-service.

Fault Usually Two-Wheeler's Rider

Bike-Car Accidents Studied

(c) Newhouse News Service
Washington — Cyclists involved in a collision with a car are almost always injured, at fault, young and probably riding a bicycle too large for them, a new safety study contends.

Based on an analysis of police records by the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety, the study also found the majority of bike-auto accidents took place at residential intersections during the daylight hours of spring and summer months.

While offering no recommendations, the institute said the study "can be used as a guide in planning countermeasure programs."

After surveying 888 police reports over a year, institute researcher Dr. Allan F. Williams found bicyclists were "probably responsible for the initiating of 78% of the collisions studied. He also determined that the percentage of "probably responsible" bicyclists "diminished sharply with increasing age of bicyclists over 12," ranging from 92% among those through age 12 and dipping to 34% among those older than 24.

Although accidents with vehicles comprise less than 5% of all injuries to bicyclists in the United States and usually do not result in fatalities, they still account for 90% of all cyclist deaths.

Of the crash reports examined, "89% of the involved bicyclists were injured," said the study. "Twelve (1%) were killed, 345 (38%) were reported by the police to have received an A-type injury (bleeding wound, distorted member of had to be carried from the scene," 362 (41%) had less serious visible injuries and 153 (17%) had no visible injuries.

"Bicyclist age was the strongest correlate of collision responsibility found in this study, holding whether the collision occurred in daylight or in periods of twilight or darkness, and for both male and female bicyclists," the institute reported.

It speculated that in addition to having less strength, coordination and knowledge of safety rules than adults, children four to nine years old are "more likely to be new to bicycle-riding, riding a bicycle... that they are not familiar with, and/or a bicycle that is too large for them but that they will have to grow into."

After 25 Years of Negotiation in U.N.

General Assembly Agrees On Definition of Aggression

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — The U. N. General Assembly agreed on a definition of aggression Saturday after 25 years of negotiation. The United States and the Soviet Union backed it, but China complained that it contained loopholes favoring the superpowers.

The 500-word definition was adopted by consensus without a formal vote.

The United States and other major powers hailed the compromise definition, though Britain and France added that it was not binding on the U.N. Security Council.

The United States said the definition was "likely to provide useful guidance to the Security Council" and declared that "its adoption after so many years is in our view an historic moment."

The Soviet Union said it would "serve as a... deterrent to forces which are hatching plans for new militaristic adventures and planning to take the world back to the days of Cold War."

But China dissociated itself from the assembly's decision, declaring, "If it had been put to the vote we would not have participated."

Chinese delegate An Chih-yuan said the definition "still has serious loopholes and defects on key issues which might be used to justify acts of aggression." He said this was a result of sabotage and obstruction "by the two superpowers, meaning the United States and the Soviet Union."

In earlier debate, China had complained that the definition failed to mention subversion and economic aggression. It declared that the way to stop aggression was to struggle against it.

The definition was first announced last April by a 35-nation committee representing a cross-section of the world and all major powers except China. The announcement culminated almost a quarter century of stop-start negotiation, compromise and balancing.

The definition begins by saying aggression is the use of armed force by one state against another and that the one which uses it first in violation of the U.N. Charter is assumed to have committed aggression — although the Security Council could find otherwise.

It lists various acts of aggression such as invasion, occupation, bombardment and blockade and leaves it to the Security Council to find others.

While participating in the consensus, landlocked countries voiced dissatisfaction that interference with their access to the sea was not enumerated as an act of aggression. Because of this, Paraguay declared the definition contains a "congenital effect" and "will not have the firm support of all states."

Trudeau Limo

Ottawa (AP) — Prime Minister Elliott Trudeau has a new $90,000 limousine with armor plating, bullet proof windows and two telephones.

The silver-gray Cadillac replaces a similar black automobile that now will be used as a spare and for touring dignitaries such as British royalty.

"It's not my idea, driving through life with an armored Caddy — like a tank — that I lend to the queen when she comes," Trudeau complained during a recent speech in Alberta.

Talking Tough Turkey

Initial reports from the Vienna meeting of the oil cartel operators were confusing.

One flash had ministers of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) agreeing to raise the world price of crude oil by 3%, effective New Year's Day. Hours later, a New York Times writer called the price determination an effort to stabilize existing conditions while concurrently making a "gesture of collaboration" to the oil consuming countries. That gesture is an agreement the new, uniform price won't be further increased for at least nine months.

Assume for a moment what this all means is a dead level price until next September. What a strange pass it is that cheers would go up for simply stabilizing crude oil at price levels already so steep they are certain to bankrupt some resource-poor industrial nations.

Like it or not, the cheap oil, cheap energy era has permanently ended. For oil-importing nations, conservation and high prices are hallmarks of the new era.

Unlike prostrate England, the United States can go on meeting the OPEC oil tariffs for a prolonged period. That is not, immediately, the most tender spot. What can bring real terror are the things Connecticut Sen. Lowell Weicker was talking about the other evening.

Petroleum price increases in just the past year by OPEC nations have cost the U.S. $8 billion. If Saudi Arabia or Iran, for example, wanted to spend a piddling $190 million, it could gain 50% control of Boeing Aircraft tomorrow by buying 10.6 million shares of stock.

"For $190 million," Weicker observed, "you get over $3 billion in annual sales and, along with McDonnell Douglas, source of the world's greatest military and commercial aircraft know-how. . . . For only $165 million, McDonnell Douglas is yours. . . . Buy 5.3 million shares of General Dynamics at $17 a share and GD is yours, too, the world's premier builder of submarines.

"So for less than one-half billion dollars out of the $8 billion in the past year's increase, the Arabs could acquire well over 60% of America's defense industry, and with our money."

Weicker's tough response is a call for a total U.S. boycott of all OPEC oil imports and mandatory rationing.

Syndicated columnist Carl T. Rowan has an alternative conservation strategy but with the same end in mind. If rationing is rejected because of the inherent bureaucracy, Rowan's scheme involves an array of taxes. Stiff extra taxes for the person owning big cars. Stiff extra taxes for families with more than one car. A special energy tax on people whose homes have more than six rooms and an even-greater tax if a family maintains more than one home. All this, of course, would be coupled with rigid wage and price controls.

No amount of eye-closing and wishing will bring back the 50s and the 60s, when profligacy in resource expenditure was the style of much American life. That must be acknowledged by our citizens. And accepted.

Not unless the public has such a base of understanding can any kind of national program, whether proposed by Sen. Weicker or columnist Rowan or President Ford, have a marginal edge toward being successful.

Lippmann, Man of Reason

"I think the central and dramatic problem of our time is that the number of people who have to be governed and the number of people who take part in government has increased beyond what anybody expected. The great question of our time is whether this mass democracy, these masses of people, are capable of the foresight and the disinterestedness to solve the environmental problem of the human race in this era. And that's a question which I'll never see the answer to."

Walter Lippmann, September 1969

Lippmann was correct, again. Dying Saturday at the age of 85, America's foremost political interpreter framed the quintessentially right question and left answer suspended in turbulent, murky air.

Because he has not been an active writer for some years, Lippmann is neither well known among younger Americans nor profoundly appreciated. More seasoned readers knew his power, however. No other single journalist, it may be safe to say, exercised so determinative influence on national affairs in this century.

The brilliant Lippmann did it by being an interpretive reporter, applying intellect and knowledge in a critical, disciplined way. As Lippmann saw it, his mission was to "get the country to meet its challenges." His commentary carried weight with every President from Woodrow Wilson to Lyndon Johnson and every companion Congress.

If one believes reason and its application play a central role among humans in negotiating their life passage, Walter Lippmann stands as an American leader with few peers. He was an apostle of reason.

Enlarging Choices

Ashland — "Observer" (Readers Views, Dec. 1) is not correct in the statement "the women's movement used its influence to remove the important parent and family situation from the school textbooks" for the following reasons:

- National Organization for Women (NOW) has attempted to remove from the textbooks the view that the only roles open to women are those of a traditional nature; e.g., mother, teacher, nurse, librarian. Little girls ought to be made aware at an early age that they can be "doctors, lawyers, merchants, chiefs" if they want to be; just as little boys can be any of those things — plus being fathers.
- NOW is certainly not opposed to women in traditional roles or to "the important parent and family situation." In fact, five of our resolutions at the last national NOW convention concerned the need to take legal action against those laws and economic practices which are destroying the family and impoverishing women and children.
- One of our top priorities for this year is to attempt to raise the legal and economic status of women in traditional roles.

In the zeal of the movement to pry open non-traditional jobs for women, the erroneous impression has been created that the movement opposes marriage, the family and traditional roles for these women who choose them. The contrary is true. To enlarge choice of roles is not to decrease the number of roles.

More Critiques

Lincoln — It was interesting to note the day following the cry of Ms. McKnight (Sunday Journal and Star, Dec. 8) that Lincoln had no critiques of musical events, the Lincoln Journal and the Lincoln Star had three reviews in one issue.

It must be noted however that the reviews were principally of non-local talent; i. e., not professional Lincoln talent. While Ms. McKnight has a legitimate complaint, could it be our critics are too tender-hearted? Too tender-hearted to condemn what might be bad and afraid to be accused of bragging if they say something good — especially if the reviewer happens to be from the same musical establishment.

The University of Nebraska School of Music has good musicians; but so does Nebraska Wesleyan. Likewise Union College has musical events that are excellent, but no one would ever know it unless they went — they would never see the results in the paper.

I concur with Ms. McKnight; let's bring out our reviewers and give more critiques. We have many musicians in Lincoln of whom we should hear more about. We should stimulate our young, for applause is all they get.

Have NU critique Wesleyan and vice versa. Have someone from either of these schools do the same for Union College. We have a musical audience in Lincoln, so let's keep them informed.

MUSIC LOVER

Three Boos Coming

Lincoln — Three boos for Holly Spence and her comments on "The Trial of Billy Jack," (Lincoln Journal, Nov. 24). It's obvious she didn't bother to look at the meaning of the film.

If, as Ms. Spence suggests, the philosophical and religious aspects were cut from the film, there would be no "trial." For that is what this film is all about — Billy Jack trying to subdue his violence and, for him, he finds peace in the trials his religion asks of him.

And if violence is what Ms. Spence holds a gripe against, she could make a fortune pointing out the gory indecencies of violence in the news these days.

Also if one-sidedness angers her, I suggest she not read history books, for the one-sidedness on the dealings with Indians would really shock her. (Remember: The only good Indian is a dead Indian! Pretty darned one-sided, huh?)

"The Trial of Billy Jack" has shown me the qualities within myself. All I need to do is use the right one.

Talk To Santa

Lincoln — Is there a Santa Claus in Lincoln that the kids can talk to? Last year I took my nieces to see Santa at Gateway. They ran the kids in and out of there as fast as possible.

When I was a kid we got to tell Santa what we wanted for Christmas. Somehow I thought that was the idea behind the stores having a Santa Claus.

CHERYL NEELY

Legalized Homicide

Sutton — The abortion controversy illustrates the moral poverty of Western civilization. The Bible recognizes the rights of the unborn. Read Exodus 21:22: "If men strive, and hurt a woman with child, so that her fruit depart from her, and yet no mischief follow: he shall be surely punished, according as the woman's husband will lay upon him; and he shall pay as the judges determine."

Unfortunately, many interpret this as miscarriage. However the Hebrew word used is that for a normal child, and not the one for miscarriage. The phrase, "her fruit depart" would literally read, "her children come out" (see New American Standard, margin).

Some versions mislead by inserting other or further as, "there is no further injury." The original text uses no such word. Retribution is called for if any harm ensues to either mother or child.

The meaning is this: If two men fight and a pregnant woman is struck so that her child is born, but no harm follows (neither mother nor child is in-

Bill of Rights 183 Years Old, Growing in Value

By Dick Herman

Editorial Page Editor

No one really appreciates the police department so profoundly as the person with an immediate need for an officer's presence. No one fully grasps the value of the fire department until his home is flaming.

Just so, millions of Americans go years without thinking about, or in any way being comforted by, their Bill of Rights. Until . . . Until one of those dusty, presumptively archaic rights suddenly becomes a stalwart for individual personal liberty being threatened by an overpowering government.

One hundred and 83 years ago at this time, the first ten amendments to the U.S. Constitution — subsequently summarized as the Bill of Rights — were ratified. The stupendous gift of the Founding Fathers, and most especially James Madison Jr. of Virginia, was received. This is a work whose value multiplies with the ages.

The Bill of Rights was a natural sequence in the continuing process of expanding liberty begun when the barons confronted England's King John at Runnymede eight centuries before. But the direct genesis was citizen concern about a revolutionary new nation's even-newer Constitution.

Thinking in the envelope of their own historical environment, men of New Hampshire and Georgia and New York wanted fixed guarantees against the authority of the centralized national state. Well-phrased axioms of government conduct were fine. Written, legal, enforceable guarantees were better. And surer.

It all went so relatively smoothly in that First Congress the drama of the event has vanished.

In the House, Madison pulled together some 80 resolves from the state conventions in which the Constitution itself was ratified. Madison compressed those into a bundle of propositions. At their core, however, was a ten-clause resolution addressed to freedom of religion, speech, press and assembly; the right to bear arms; immunity from forced self-incrimination and double jeopardy; protection of life, liberty and property by due process; guarantees of a speedy and public trial, no cruel or unusual punishment, no excessive bail or fines and assistance of counsel and the reservation of undelegated sovereignty.

Some contended the whole exercise was unnecessary. The states had their own guarantees. Madison argued incorporation into the federal Constitution would lend greater force. He forecast "independent tribunals of justice will consider themselves in a peculiar manner the guardians of those rights; they (the courts) will be an impenetrable bulwark against every assumption of power in the legislative or executive; they will be naturally led to resist every encroachment upon rights expressly stipulated for in the Constitution by the declaration of rights."

Madison, of course, was correct. It took about 150 years to prove him so, however.

It is to the courts, not the executive or legislature, that citizens in the main now turn for enforcement of their constitutional rights.

Madison was rebuffed in two areas while framing the Bill of Rights. He desired the "right of conscience" be perpetually guarded in fundamental law.

Today, such a right may be described as more in the evolutionary stage than having arrived.

And Madison pleaded for an amendment — he called it the most important one in the whole list, according to historian Irving Brandt — forbidding states to violate rights of conscience, freedom of the press or trial by jury in criminal cases. The House agreed. The Senate did not.

ARTICLE I

Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances.

ARTICLE II

A well regulated Militia, being necessary to the security of a free State, the right of the people to keep and bear Arms, shall not be infringed.

ARTICLE III

No Soldier shall, in time of peace be quartered in any house, without the consent of the Owner, nor in time of war, but in a manner to be prescribed by law.

ARTICLE IV

The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects, against unreasonable searches and seizures, shall not be violated, and no Warrants shall issue, but upon probable cause, supported by Oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the place to be searched, and the persons or things to be seized.

Jemy Madison's dream had to wait until a post-Civil War America ratified the "gateway" 14th Amendment and a still later Supreme Court accepted, with some reservations, the continental philosophy of Justice Hugo Black.

The ten articles of the Bill of Rights are not of equal weight. Few today are concerned about the threat of having soldiers quartered in their private homes. Most consider obsolete the discretionary requirement of a jury trial in a common law suit involving more than $20.

But as for the majestic First Amendment, starting with the glorious phrase: "Congress shall make no law . . ."; as for the other great amendments, the Bill of Rights is of transcendent importance. The document bristles as the individual American citizen's mighty fortress.

ARTICLE V

No person shall be held to answer for a capital, or otherwise infamous crime, unless on a presentment or indictment of a Grand Jury, except in cases arising in the land or naval forces, or in the Militia, when in actual service in time of War or public danger; nor shall any person be subject for the same offence to be twice put in jeopardy of life or limb; nor shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself, nor be deprived of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor shall private property be taken for public use, without just compensation.

ARTICLE VI

In all criminal prosecutions, the accused shall enjoy the right to a speedy and public trial, by an impartial jury of the State and district wherein the crime shall have been committed, which district shall have been previously ascertained by law, and to be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation; to be confronted with the witnesses against him; to have compulsory process for obtaining witnesses in his favor, and to have the Assistance of Counsel for his defence.

ARTICLE VII

In Suits at common law, where the value in controversy shall exceed twenty dollars, the right of trial by jury shall be preserved, and no fact tried by a jury, shall be otherwise re-examined in any Court of the United States, than according to the rules of the common law.

ARTICLE VIII

Excessive bail shall not be required, nor excessive fines imposed, nor cruel and unusual punishments inflicted.

ARTICLE IX

The enumeration in the Constitution, of certain rights, shall not be construed to deny or disparage others retained by the people.

ARTICLE X

The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States respectively, or to the people.

A proposal to limit the state income and sales taxes but apply a levy to intangible property not now taxed caught the eyes of the state's editorial writers. The Grand Island Independent and the Scottsbluff Star-Herald found the idea of Sen. Orval Keyes of Springfield inept in some respects.

The Independent was more critical in its appraisal of Keyes' limitation of 2 1/2% on the sales tax and 10% on the sales tax. Although the newspaper approved of the goal, it noted "if some method is not found to shift additional school costs to something other than property, you only magnify pressures on property taxes."

"But to solve (the problem of pressure on property taxes) with an intangibles tax, to our way of thinking, is all wrong," the newspaper said. Like the Star-Herald, the Independent wondered whether such a tax on stocks, bonds and other such holdings would create a double tax.

"At face value he (Keyes) would seem to have a point, . . . so long as it doesn't constitute double taxation," the Panhandle newspaper said. "Bank deposits, for example, . . . might fall under double taxation because the person already might have paid taxes on income." It did recommend further investigation of some taxing power on what Keyes said was 45% of the valuation now in the intangible category.

Former Sen. Terry Carpenter found himself again of interest to editorial writers as he fought legal rulings against him in his unsuccessful write-in campaign to regain his Scottsbluff legislative seat. The Syracuse Journal-Democrat was critical of the rulings which offended its "sense of justice." Yet, the newspaper said, "laws are to be upheld — too often they are bent."

To solve this struggle between justice and strict compliance to the law, the Syracuse newspaper believes the Legislature should settle the question. "It seems . . . that logic is in the right in this case, and that the Unicameral should vote to allow Terry to resume his legislative seat. The voters have spoken and but for a technicality only, Terry would have his place free and clear," it said.

The newspaper further urged the Legislature to change write-in laws "to make easier and clearer the procedure for voting for write-in candidates."

The statehouse was not the only focus of editorial attention as the South Sioux City Star turned its attention to the courthouse. The newspaper took seriously a suggestion of some at the County Officials Assn. annual meeting for sharing courthouses in adjoining counties.

"We think the proposal has merit. For instance, we could see the possibility of Dixon County using the new Dakota County courthouse facilities, especially during warm-weather months when air conditioning would be an asset to good judgement," it said.

The Polk Progress editor recalled his last venture into a steak house, at Grand Island several months ago.

In an essay dealing with the world food problem, the editor said, "We were served more than we could eat. The price was high and we realized we had paid the place to waste food. . . . We realize we are trapped by society. If, at that steak house, we could have told the waitress, 'Here, take half this food and give it to someone who is starving' and it was possible for her to do it, we would have done so. But the distribution of food is not organized to be equitable at such a personal level. However there is a growing realization being served more than can be eaten because the diner can afford it is morally reprehensible."

"Dear President Ford: We are delighted to hear the country is not in a financial crisis. Promise you'll let us know when it is. Yours truly . . ."

jured), the man responsible must pay punitive damages. The verses that follow show that any real harm (to mother and child) must be avenged.

The passage refers to a normal, live birth, irregular only in that it is accidentally or maliciously induced. The unborn child is regarded as fully human, with all the rights of any other human.

Genesis 9:6 says, "whoso sheddeth man's blood, by man shall his blood be shed: for in the image of God made he man." The fetus from its beginning has its own bloodstream. The one who sheds that child's blood must answer for it.

Abortion is homicide. Situations in which it could be considered justifiable homicide must be rare indeed. People concerned about this casual acceptance of legalized homicide ought to flood their legislators' mailboxes with letters expressing their horror!

What if Mary had chosen an abortion?

LIFE OF MAN

Law and faith are jointly symbolized and celebrated — and even positioned next to each other — by two of the eight giant figures which jut out of the limestone at the base of the Nebraska State Capitol tower.

The sculpture of Marcus Aurelius captures the power of one of the most famous Roman emperors. His place in history is marked more by civilizing law than territorial conquest. The inscription proposed for this sculpture — but never put into stone — reads:

"His Fortress, He Founded in the Law, His Empire in Wise Administration, Perceiving That He Who Would Rule Also Must Serve."

Immediately to the east of the Roman figure, on the south side of the tower base, is the sculptural rendering of the Apostle John, signifying the glorification of faith, a keystone of western civilization.

"With the Eye of Faith He Gazed Within. He Sought Out the Spirit of Man. He Prayed That It Might Be Found Pure."

That is what the designers of the Statehouse envisioned as the timeless legend which should be associated with the St. John likeness.

Black Rule Accelerates in Africa

United Nations — The swift evolution of race relations in southern Africa continues to be one of the most extraordinary stories of our time. Now, the 4% white minority which has governed Rhodesia for 51 years, vowing never to release its grip, is preparing to share power with the 95% black majority — and perhaps, in the foreseeable future, to yield power entirely.

Not soon, and probably not without a struggle. It is a traumatic experience for Rhodesian whites to see their exclusive hold on the government slipping away. Some would die rather than give it up — and tragically some may do just that.

But a great many, including some members of the right-wing cabinet of Prime Minister Ian Smith, are coming to accept the inevitability of change. Having no practical alternative, they have entered negotiations to that end, hoping to control the timing.

It is very late for the whites of southern Africa to be envisaging a new deal for the majority blacks. In Rhodesia, it is so late that peaceful transition is by no means assured. Even now, Smith is dragging his heels, demanding more and offering less than his objective power justifies.

So it is still unhappily possible that race war will develop. But there is, at very long last, a real chance of avoiding it. And that is remarkable news.

What has happened is that two important conferences have been held in Lusaka, Zambia, one Nov. 8 and 13, the other Dec. 5-7. The immediate purpose was to seek an end to the guerrilla war which has tormented Rhodesia for nearly two years.

In return for a cease-fire, the blacks demanded a Rhodesian constitutional convention to arrange immediate majority rule. Smith's spokesman agreed to the convention, but said there could not be any "lowering of standards," which sounded to the blacks like tokenism. On this issue, the negotiations broke down Dec. 7.

The gulf between black and white in Rhodesia had been very considerably narrowed. At the end, it appeared to many to consist of bargaining postures adopted for tactical reasons, not disagreement over the real objective.

At several points in the past decade, Rhodesia's whites almost certainly could have negotiated a 10-, 15- or even 20-year transition to majority rule, many blacks welcoming it as a victory. Now, the process of turnover — by negotiation or by fighting — is likely to be much more rapid.

With Portuguese Africa on the way to independence,

LURIES OPINION

Rhodesia's whites are isolated in a virtually indefensible salient, with adversaries or potential adversaries on three sides.

It is, of course, precisely because the whites' position is so precarious that the blacks have been tempted to hold out for immediate majority rule, which is to say, unconditional surrender.

It would, however, be tragically illogical and unnecessary for more blood to be shed, when all that is really in dispute is the timing and method by which an implicitly agreed objective is to be reached.

Salute to Those Who Graced 1974

This column's annual awards, usually given at the end of the year, will be presented a little early.

The winners, chosen for their efforts in making 1974 the strangest year since 1873:

Business: To the Charter Arms Corp., of Connecticut, which makes guns. When a TV network aired a documentary on firearms, the commentator said the gun used to wound George Wallace was a "cheap handgun." The Charter Corp. indignantly informed the network that the gun wasn't at all cheap: it was one of their finest, most expensive models, selling for more than $100. The network apologized and Charter Corp. felt better.

Good Government: To Illinois Revenue Director Robert Alphin, who tried to bring decency to government by firing Mrs. Paul Fox, a state investigator, because she swore at fellow male employees. However, the State Civil Service Commission decided Mrs. Fox couldn't be fired for swearing, because the male employees admitted they also use the same kind of language. Alphin was so upset at being thwarted that he subsequently swore at the reporter who made the story public. Talk talk.

Law: Federal Judge William Lynch decided a teacher couldn't be fired for not wearing a tie to class. Lynch said:

"I am not going to permit this man to lose his job for refusing to wear a necktie." Then the judge noticed that the teacher hadn't worn a tie to court either, and he howled: "Who do you think you are? Come back at 10 a.m. tomorrow with a tie or I'll toss you in jail."

Sports: In this age of overpaid, cry-baby athletes, we need more sportsmen like David Rodgers, 28, an English rugby player. During a spirited contest, one of Rodgers' opponents bit off half of Rodgers' ear. Rodgers said: "I scarcely felt anything. Just a quick chop and it was over. You expect to get that kind of thing in a tough game like rugby."

Ad Award

By William Safire

This year's language pollution award goes to the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., which won it some years ago by forever blurring the distinction between "as" and "like." With "like a cigarette should," now, a drunken-lunatic model tarped on the language with: "If it wasn't for Winston, I wouldn't smoke." If it weren't for Winston ads, we wouldn't be so dumb, but that is what some advertising is all about.

(c) New York Times

Environment: To Prosecutor L. D. Engor Jr., of Huntington, W. Va., for his efforts in keeping rivers and streams clean. Engor did this by charging Robert E. Spears with littering the Ohio River. He said Spears littered the river with the bullet-riddled body of one Rocco Thompson. Well, we have to start somewhere.

Woman of the year: To Mrs. Michelle Gishof, captain of a female softball team. When Mrs. Gishof found a male team using a field for which she had a permit, she told them to leave. When the captain of the men's team refused, Mrs. Gishof allegedly struck a blow for female rights by hitting him with a bat. He responded by knocking the hell out of her, a softball tradition. How equal can you get?

Man of the year: Mrs. Louise Kubiniec sued a neighborhood widow for trying to steal the affections of her husband Albert. Mrs. Kubiniec said Albert was always going down the street to the widow's house on the pretense they were reading a newspaper together. She also said the widow gave Albert her dead husband's clothes. And Albert even took the widow on a trip to Hot Springs, Ark. Mrs. Kubiniec is 82. The widow is 61. And husband Albert, a retired cemetery worker, is 90.

Ford Advisers Closeted at Camp David Energy Problem Solutions Sought

CAMP DAVID, Md. (AP) — Top federal officials are spending the weekend secluded in the Catskill Mountains to wrestle with solutions to the nation's energy problems.

The meeting, at President Ford's Camp David retreat, was aimed at developing both short and long term energy policies for presentation to Ford. The discussions may also include quotas in oil imports backed up by some form of limits on the amount of gasoline and fuel oils Americans can use in 1975.

Near the top of the list for consideration will be short term policies for reducing U.S. dependence on oil imports for the next three years.

In public statements officials have been unanimous in saying the answer to the problem is conservation with the only question being how to do it.

President Ford repeatedly has ruled out the use of a stiff gasoline tax to discourage use.

Other alternatives which may be discussed include a return to the type of petroleum allocations used during the Arab oil boycott.

That system amounted to rationing fuel oils and other products but did not ration gasoline to individual motorists.

If adopted again it would probably include a deliberate and more careful return of such measures as odd-even gasoline sales and service station closings on weekends to reduce the chances of long lines.

Ford has also opposed rationing of gasoline to consumers, but his may be considered as a standby measure and possibly as a suggestion for an immediate program.

Other conservation programs considered likely for discussion include:

— Tax incentives or other aid for insulating existing buildings; — A mandatory program for industries to plan energy conservation and report to the government;

— The possibility of Ford using emergency powers to make sure that steel and other critical materials and perhaps shipyard space as well are made available for energy conservation and production activities as needed.

Still another possibility might be a program to make electric power plants which burn oil or natural gas switch to coal, although officials have indicated there may be serious obstacles to this.

Among those listed by the White House as attending the meeting were Secretary of the Interior Rogers C. B. Morton, Secretary of Transportation Claude Brinegar, Secretary of Commerce Frederick Dent, Assistant Treasury Secretary Jerry Parske, Federal Energy Administrator Frank Zarb, Council of Economic Advisers Chairman Alan Greenspan, presidential adviser William Seidman, domestic council member Mike Duval and Tom Enders of the State Department.

There were also members of the staff of the National Security Council, and the Council on Environmental Quality.

Rockefeller Expected to Play Big Role

By David Murray

(c) Chicago Sun-Times

Washington — As vice president, Nelson Rockefeller's first project will be an immediate campaign to use his "enormous friendship" with mayors and governors to smooth relations among, federal, state and local governments, a close aide to Rockefeller says.

"These mayors and governors know Rockefeller," the aide said Saturday. They don't know Jerry Ford.

The aide did not wish his name to be used since Rockefeller's public position is that he will not even think about what he may or may not do until after he is finally confirmed by the House and sworn in next Friday.

He has even refused, during 3½ months of shuttling back and forth between Washington and New York, to look at the space allocated the vice president in the new Senate Office Building.

But that public position is hard to square, in the opinion of those who know the 66-year-old perennial seeker after power, with the past performance and posture of a restless, boundlessly energetic, nearly compulsive mover and shaker.

"Take welfare," said the Rockefeller associate. "There are three branches of government screwing around with the welfare system and it's still fouled up. That's the sort of thing he'll be working on."

He also said Rockefeller, even more importantly, will bring "the executive state of mind" to the Ford administration — a mentality and modus operandi honed and polished in 15 years as governor of New York and nearly a quarter of a century before that in presidential appointments.

Ford, said the aide, "is a legislator. He doesn't have this kind of experience. What Rockefeller is really going to bring to him is a good junior-partner relationship. He's got executive experience and decision-making habits. He has no trouble making decisions."

(A former top adviser to Rockefeller during the ex-governor's New York days put it somewhat differently: "If you had to chalk an example of graft on a men's room wall, it could say: 'Rockefeller Bites Bullets.'")

To Keep Him Busy

But all these projections hinge on one thing — Ford is going to give Rockefeller something to do, and will keep him busy at it.

In the past, presidents such as Kennedy, Johnson and Nixon have promised great things for their vice presidents and they have considered themselves lucky to get a telephone of their own. How is it going to be different with Rockefeller?

In the first place, the aide replied, Ford already has said publicly that he intends to make Rockefeller the head of the Domestic Council. But, the aide said, Rockefeller knows "conflict is inevitable. He has, after all, known very well every vice president since Henry Wallace." President Roosevelt's running-mate in 1940.

"Rockefeller is going to have to avoid getting into a crossed-wire situation, either with the President or his staff," the aide said. "He knows the political limitations. You can't argue with presidential policies, once those policies have been set."

But Rockefeller, particularly on the domestic front, hopes to have a larger voice than previous vice presidents in formulating those policies.

Most of those who have known or worked with Rockefeller over a number of years also believe that he will help Ford in his relations with Congress. This is particularly true in the more sticky area of working with Democratic leaders.

While Ford is extremely good at shaping legislation among Republicans, many of these observers and officials say, Rockefeller has greater political charm. His name gives him automatic influence, as does his political record.

"When he wants to," says one Democratic congressman who has known him many years, "Nelson can whistle the birds right down out of the trees."

Rockefeller will also very likely be playing a wider foreign-policy role than did Ford in his relatively brief tenure as vice president.

Secretary of State Henry Kissinger wants to avoid further trips abroad of a purely ceremonial and hand-holding nature, and Ford is being urged to stay closer to home and pay greater attention to domestic problems.

Rockefeller can relieve Kissinger of these "morale missions," such as, perhaps, forthcoming visits to black Africa, which has been increasingly critical of the U.S. in the United Nations.

Supreme Court Has New Worry: 'Gutter Language' in Public Schools

(c) Washington Star-News

Washington — Now, the Supreme Court has to worry about taking something else out of the public schools: "gutter language."

With boldness and bluntness, an Indianapolis lawyer warned the justices last week they are risking the wrath of the nation's parents if they don't help get the "filth" out of high school newspapers.

"If you decide the schools can do nothing about this," the lawyer, Mrs. Lila Young said, "then students will use this language and say 'the Supreme Court said we could.'"

She foresaw dire moral consequences if school authorities were denied power to censor student publications:

"If we have to set aside a time and a place in our schools for the distribution of this filth, then we are contributing to the delinquency of minors."

The test case being argued before the court involves a student "underground" newspaper — The Corn Cob Curtain, which ran for five issues in several Indianapolis high schools in 1972.

Disgusted with authorized student newspapers, six students started their own. Some of the issues used four-letter words and what Mrs. Young called "filthy cartoons."

When school authorities told them the newspaper could not be sold or given away at the schools the students went to federal court with a complaint that their constitutional rights had been violated.

In a decision a year ago, the 7th U.S. Court of Appeals agreed, and told officials they could no longer enforce school board rules forbidding distribution of anonymous literature, publications not written by students or school employees, and any publications that were "obscene."

Transition Job Just Beginning for Rumsfeld

By Fred Barnes
(c) Washington Star-News
Washington — Donald Rumsfeld was visiting in the south of France when Gerald Ford sent him a message on Aug. 8, the day before Ford became president. He wanted Rumsfeld, then U. S. ambassador to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) to return to Washington immediately. Rumsfeld complied, though he did not know what was in store for him.

Arriving at Dulles International Airport two hours after Ford was sworn in, Rumsfeld was handed a note that spelled out his assignment, a seemingly temporary one: coordinate the transition to a Ford administration.

But for Rumsfeld, the transition job was just a beginning, the start of a precipitous rise to power in the new regime in Washington.

In the four months since Ford took over, Rumsfeld has become the undisputed boss of the White House staff and the most influential figure, after the president, in the Ford administration.

Access to the President means power, and Rumsfeld has greater access to Ford than anyone else, seeing the President four or five times a day.

As more and more Nixon holdovers departed, Rumsfeld assumed even more authority than did Alexander Haig, his predecessor as chief of the President's staff, White House aides say.

"Rumsfeld has his thumb on a lot more details than Haig did," one aide said. "Haig let other people have a piece of the action. Rumsfeld wants to be in on everything."

Evidence of Power
The evidence of Rumsfeld's power is everywhere at the White House:

— He is on the verge of reorganizing the White House staff along the lines that he helped devise as a member of the transition team. The reorganization will be completed by Christmas.

— He is in charge of gathering new talent for the President's staff, the Cabinet and other top administration posts, having installed one of his proteges, William Walker, in the job of White House recruiter.

— He is in charge of the President's schedule and thus is influential in deciding whom Ford sees and, just as important, whom he does not see.

— His quick rise to power has been accompanied by a loss of influence and access to the President on the part of Ford's other advisers, notably Robert Hartmann.

— He has slowly begun to emerge as a major force in policy-making at the White House, particularly in economic matters, after devoting himself at first largely to administrative chores.

The reorganization of the White House staff will have the effect of consolidating Rumsfeld's power. The staff is being divided into nine sections, each headed by a single chief.

And Hartmann, who has advised the President on virtually every matter at the White House, will have more limited duties.

Rumsfeld's relationship with Hartmann, a man who jealously guards his access to Ford, is a wary one, at best.

Until Rumsfeld took over, Hartmann was able to amble into the Oval Office to chat with Ford almost whenever he wished. His own office is right next door.

Schedule Tightened

But Rumsfeld has tightened the President's schedule considerably, and Hartmann has resorted to a regularly scheduled meeting with Ford daily — beginning at 9:15 a.m. and lasting 15 minutes — to keep up his contact with the President.

Many White House aides, remembering the campaign which Hartmann waged against Haig, expect a feud with Rumsfeld to break into the open soon. But it has not yet.

Rumsfeld, in an interview, seemed to emphasize Hartmann's only duty is to write speeches for Ford. "I'm not a speechwriter," Rumsfeld said. "Hartmann's got skills I don't have . . . and there haven't been problems."

Rumsfeld's acquisition of power has reached down to the minor details of White House life. For instance, he is the man who decides who eats in the White House mess and who gets a White House car.

Donald Rumsfeld

It is perhaps symbolic of the shift in power toward Rumsfeld that he took the mess chore away from Hartmann.

One element of Rumsfeld's authority is his use of long-time associates. Walker, the White House recruiter, worked for Rumsfeld when he headed the Office of Economic Opportunity (OEO) in the first Nixon administration.

In his first day at the White House, Rumsfeld hired Richard Cheney, a former investment banker, as his executive assistant. Cheney, like Walker, worked with Rumsfeld at OEO.

If Rumsfeld has a particular strength, according to White House aides, it is his

Blob's Okay

Sacramento, Calif. (UPI) — The California Fish and Game Dept. has decided against changing the name of the "blob."

Fifteen of the "blobs" have been caught in the Pacific off the northern California coast. The fish have fat lips, weigh about 10 pounds and are about two feet in length.

The agency said it knows for sure the fish are members of the family psychrolutidae. But, a spokesman said, the name "blob" is good enough.

ability to make decisions quickly.

"I know as soon as I get to Rumsfeld, I get decisions," said Warren Rustand, the President's appointments secretary. "He's excellent at making decisions. He obviously has influence with the President."

Uncertainty of Job

If Rumsfeld has a particular weakness, on the other hand, it is the uncertainty as to how long he will remain in the White House job.

"Everybody's trying to find out what Rumsfeld's game is," said one White House aide. "With his political ambition, he won't be staying where he is for long."

At 42, Rumsfeld is regarded as one of the hottest tickets in the Republican party. He is handsome, articulate and clearly ambitious, and some associates feel that his goal is the presidency.

Rumsfeld refuses to say how long he intends to remain as White House chief of staff. It has been rumored he would like a Cabinet post himself, possible defense, before returning to his home state of Illinois to run for governor in 1976.

However, Rumsfeld said he has no master plan for his political future. He conceded his White House job is not the best political stepping stone.

It is still uncertain what effect Rumsfeld's influence will have on policy at the White House. As a House member for six years, he was a conservative, a man dubious about the efficiency of government programs.

Rumsfeld's friendship with Ford goes back to 1962, when he was a freshman congressman and Ford was making his first move for a leadership position in the House.

Ford assigned Rumsfeld to drum up votes among Republican party freshmen for his bid to head the House Republican conference. Ford won, and Rumsfeld was one of his key backers three years later when Ford became House GOP leader.

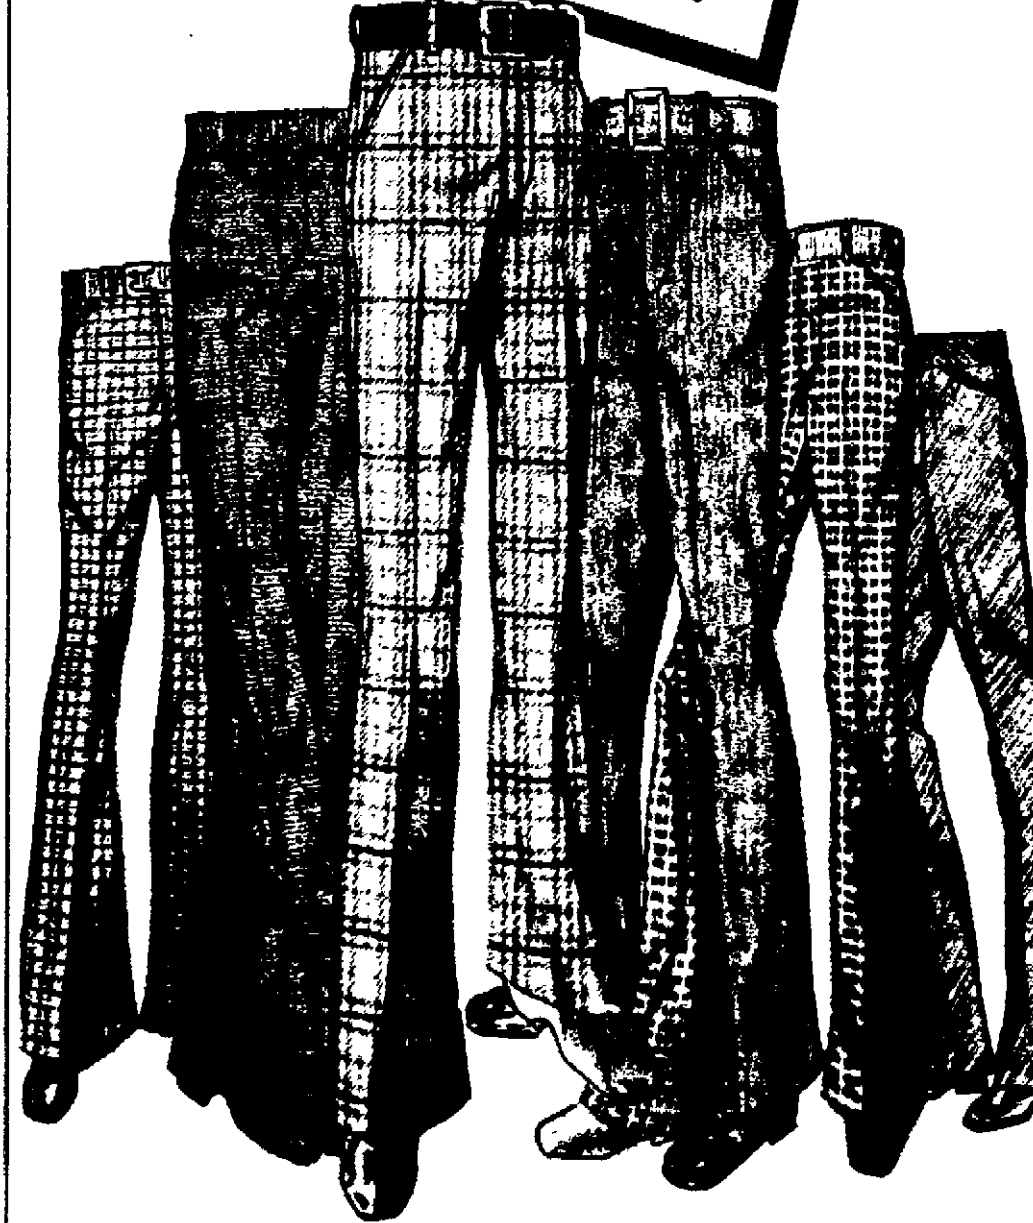

After Rumsfeld joined the executive branch in 1969 — first at OEO — he maintained his close relationship with Ford. Their mutual respect has blossomed, and has never been in fuller bloom than it is today.

Postal Service Fares Poorly in Test

By Rob Warden
(c) Chicago Daily News

Miss Rachael Thornton, executive secretary of the Chamber of Commerce in Carthage, Mo., has a theory about why postal rates are so high: the service is so slow, she says, that the post office has to charge for storage.

Think that's a joke? Consider that a package sent to Chicago from Bath, Maine, on Nov. 8 didn't arrive until Dec. 2. That's 24 days of storage!

The package from Bath was part of a comprehensive test of the U.S. mails conducted in recent weeks by the Chicago Daily News. In all, the paper sent 588 pieces of mail to, from and within seven cities — Chicago; Bath; Seattle, Wash.; Phoenix, Ariz.; Palm Harbor, Fla.; Columbia, Mo., and Kalamazoo, Mich.

The paper found:
—Roughly 7 in every 10 firstclass, zip-coded letters took 3 or more days for delivery between cities (61.9% took 3 days and 4.8% took 4 days).

—There is little relation between the distance the mail travels and the length of time taken for delivery. On the average, it took longer to get firstclass mail between Chicago and Columbia, Mo., than between Seattle and Palm Harbor.

—Special delivery letters, which cost 60 cents more than firstclass, are delivered faster than firstclass in about 4 of every 5 instances (77.8%). But, regardless of the extra 60 cents, special delivery was no better than firstclass in 12.7% of the instances, and worse in 9.5%.

—Zip-coded mail isn't appreciably faster than mail without zip codes, although postal officials say the prompt hand sorting of mail without zip codes is possible only because most mail is zip-coded and may be sorted by machines. The average delivery time for intercity firstclass, zip-coded mail in the sample was 2.7 days versus 2.76 days for mail without zip codes.

—Intercity parcel post on the average was delivered in 6.9 days, and 48% of the sample took a week or more to arrive. If the service is even this good during the Christmas rush, it means that if you mail your gifts by Tuesday you can expect about half of them to arrive before the big day.

—Although you might reasonably expect mail service to and from Chicago to be the best in the country because of Chicago's central location and unequalled transportation facilities, it isn't best. Mail originating in Kalamazoo, Mich., for instance, arrived faster on the average than mail from Chicago. The delivery of mail to Chicago was slower than mail to Palm Harbor, Seattle and Columbia. For mail within a city, the Chicago post office's performance was the poorest in the Chicago Daily News tests.

—One firstclass letter (mailed to Chicago from Bath, on Nov. 8) and one parcel (mailed to Kalamazoo from Phoenix, on Nov. 6) failed to arrive. Charles A. Ward, manager of quality control at the Chicago post office, contended this was a quirk that wouldn't be repeated if the survey were run again. If this were indicative of postal service, he pointed out, the Chicago post office alone would lose an "intolerable" 14.8 million of the 4.5 billion pieces of mail it processes annually.

—Proper packaging, as you would expect, makes a considerable difference in the condition of parcels when they arrive.

The parcel post sample was divided between wrapped boxes of Kleenex and light bulbs carefully packed in sturdy boxes. All but one of the light bulbs arrived intact, while 73.5% of the Kleenex boxes were badly damaged.

—Of $214.62 worth of postage used in the Chicago Daily News test, $13.06 came through without being canceled. That was 5% of the number of stamps used and 6% of the value of the stamps.

On the brighter side, it was found that the intricacy standard which is overnight for first class, was met in 95.2% of the instances.

And, having mentioned the 24-day Bath-to-Chicago parcel, it should be pointed out, in the interest of balance, that one special delivery letter, mailed Nov. 8 in Seattle arrived Nov. 8 in Palm Harbor.

Vancouver, Wash. (AP) — What may be the last photograph ever taken of Will Rogers and aviator Wiley Post has surfaced here.

The picture was taken in 1935 by Vern J. Fanuef and a friend who were prospecting near Fairbanks and hiked about 20 miles to the Fairbanks airport to see the famed humorist, newspaper columnist and rodeo entertainer.

Rogers and Post were in Alaska on a hunting trip.

The picture now belongs to Earl Taylor, an evidence and property officer with the Vancouver Police Dept. Fanuef is Taylor's stepfather.

Fanuef, now in a Vancouver nursing home, said Rogers and Post made a brief flight with the bush pilot Aug. 14, the day before they crashed near Point Barrow in a plane piloted by Post.

"My stepfather gave me the picture in 1950," Taylor said. "He said it was the last picture taken of Rogers and Post. I think he's right."

Wholesome colored comics, feature stories with plenty of pictures and the big entertainment section are a few reasons why nearly everyone reads the "Sunday Journal and Star."

Peru Takes Over
Telex

Lima, Peru (AP) — President Juan Velasco's leftist military regime announced Saturday the nationalization of all privately owned international Telex and telegraph services in Peru, including an ITT subsidiary, effective next March 1.

After that date, all communication facilities will be owned and operated by state agencies, a government resolution and a decree made public stipulated. The transmission of news was not affected.

The nationalization affects Cables West Coast Co., a subsidiary of Cable and Wireless Ltd. of England, and All America Inc., a subsidiary of the U.S.-based International Telegraph and Telephone Corp.

The Peruvian Telephone Co., another ITT subsidiary, was nationalized by the Velasco regime several years ago.

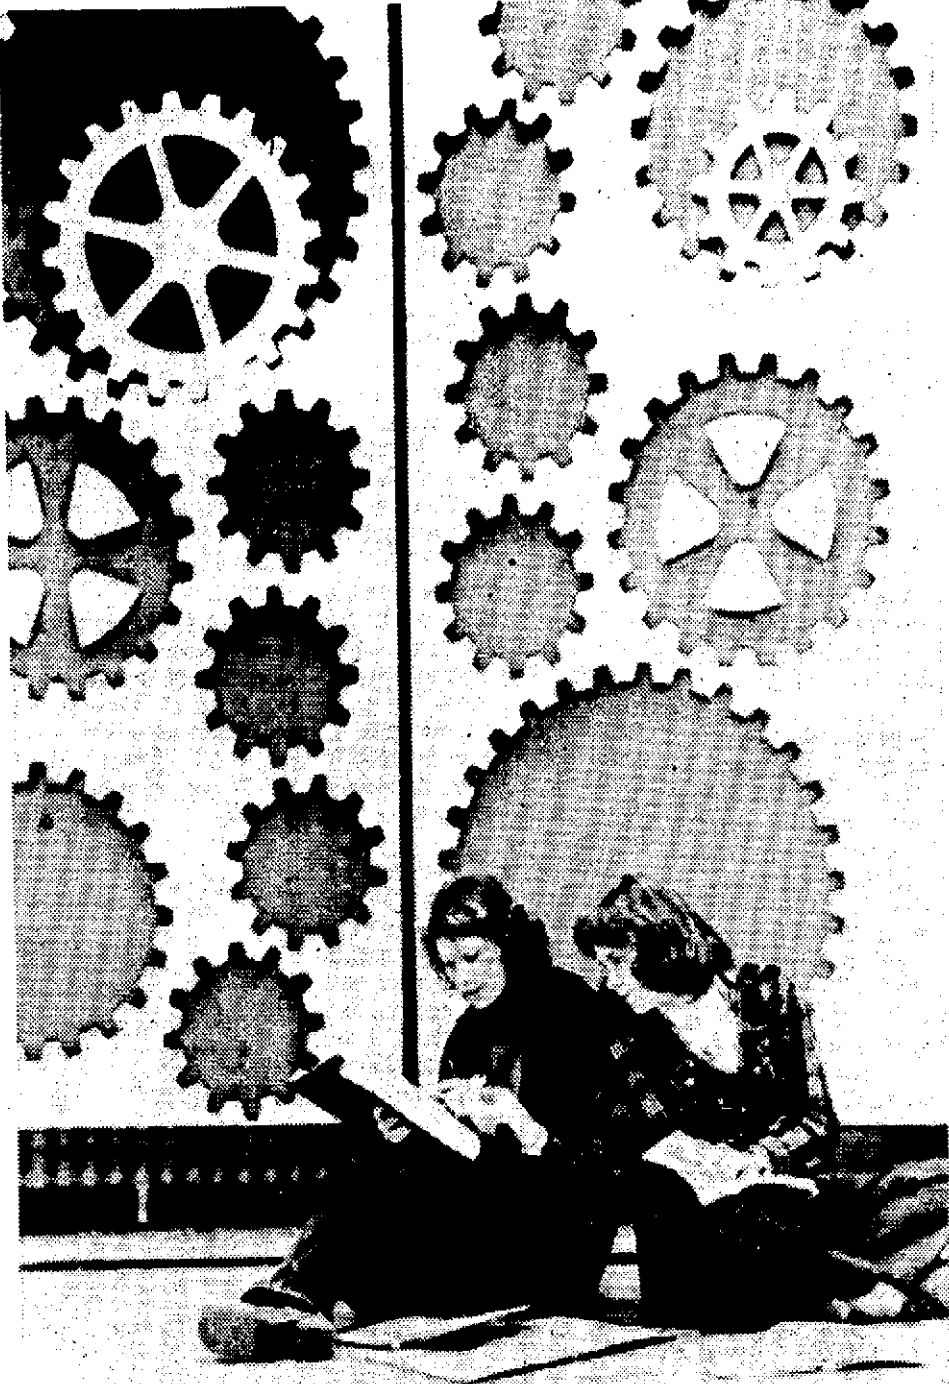

Also nationalized previously were the Swedish-owned National Telephone Co., and the South Telephonic Co., owned by Swiss interests.

Telephone services are now monopolized by Entel, the Peruvian state communications agency, which will also handle all Telex traffic — both national and international — as of next year.

The government's department of posts and telegraphs will operate telegraphic services.

Peru's move came several days after its neighbor, Chile, nationalized ITT's interests in Chile's phone company, and several weeks after Venezuela nationalized the U.S.-dominated iron ore industry in its country. Venezuela is also planning to nationalize its U.S.-dominated oil industry.

Mansfield Assures China on Relations

By Sam Jaffe
(c) Chicago Daily News

Peking — Senate majority leader Mike Mansfield says China's leadership is a little impatient "on the question of the improvement of Sino-American relations."

In an exclusive interview, Mansfield said Saturday the state of Sino-American relations "is about what can be expected, because the process of the normalization of relations can only reach a certain point before questions arise."

At the same time, Mansfield assured Chinese leaders with whom he met for intensive talks that Washington's policy toward Peking is "irreversible."

The Montana Democrat, a long-time friend of China, indicated Chinese leaders displayed some displeasure over the imbalance of Sino-American trade, now running in favor of the United States.

"It's an unusual situation for China to operate on an imbalanced trade ratio," he said. "Chinese-American trade has not reached the $1 billion mark this year, and some contracts for grain and other American commodities have been postponed until next year," Mansfield continued.

He said he assumed the Chinese postponed these agreements "to bring about some alleviation to this (trade) imbalance."

Mansfield noted the United States ranks second only to Japan as China's leading importer. He believes there is a "growing opportunity" for trade between China and America, "but it will have to come slowly, and be more balanced."

The Chinese don't like to be in debt, Mansfield emphasized. They don't like credit.

The senator, who arrived in China last Monday with Mrs. Mansfield and eight others, has had more than 15 hours of intensive talks with Chinese leaders.

The talks have ranged from Chinese-American relations to the growing detente between Washington and Moscow. America's domestic problems, inflation and unemployment, also were discussed, as well as China's internal situation.

During his five-day visit here in Peking, Mansfield met with Foreign Minister Chiao Kuan-hau, Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping and Premier Chou En-lai. Unlike Sen. Henry Jackson and a group of American governors who visited China earlier this year, Mansfield and his party have been accorded VIP treatment. While the others stayed in Peking's first class Peking hotel, the Mansfield entourage has been given a private villa.

The Chinese still feel a great debt of gratitude to former President Nixon for opening the door to better relations, the senator said.

He said he was told that Communist Party Chairman Mao Tse-tung was very much in the forefront in these relations because of an article that Nixon wrote in Foreign Affairs Quarterly before he became president. That article was the cornerstone to our present relations, Mansfield said.

Mao personally noted the article, but others in Peking's hierarchy did not, Mansfield said he was told.

Mansfield said he raised the possibility, as a next step in the improvement of relations between Washington and

Sen. Mike Mansfield

Peking, of setting up U.S. news bureaus in China. But he was told there is no possibility in the foreseeable future, as long as Washington maintains full diplomatic relations with Nationalist China. On this point, the Chinese are adamant, Mansfield said.

Regarding relations between the United States and the Soviet Union, Mansfield said he detected no concern on the part of Chinese officials with whom he spoke.

As for the possibility of a Soviet nuclear strike or a land attack on China, Mansfield said his talks with officials indicated that this concern has been largely mitigated. "It is not as apparent now as it was on my last visit 2 1/2 years ago," he said.

"Is Chou still the prime minister?" I asked Mansfield.

"Oh, there's no question that he is the prime minister," he replied. The people in the government... look to him for guidance and he's very much on the job, even though he's in the hospital at the present time."

Mansfield and his party were to leave Peking Saturday for a tour of three provinces, Honan, Yunnan and Kwangtung. In addition, he will visit the autonomous region of Kwangsi Chuanang, before his arrival in Hong Kong next month.

While in Hong Kong, Mansfield will complete his report on China, which he plans to deliver to President Ford and Congress immediately on his return to Washington early in January.

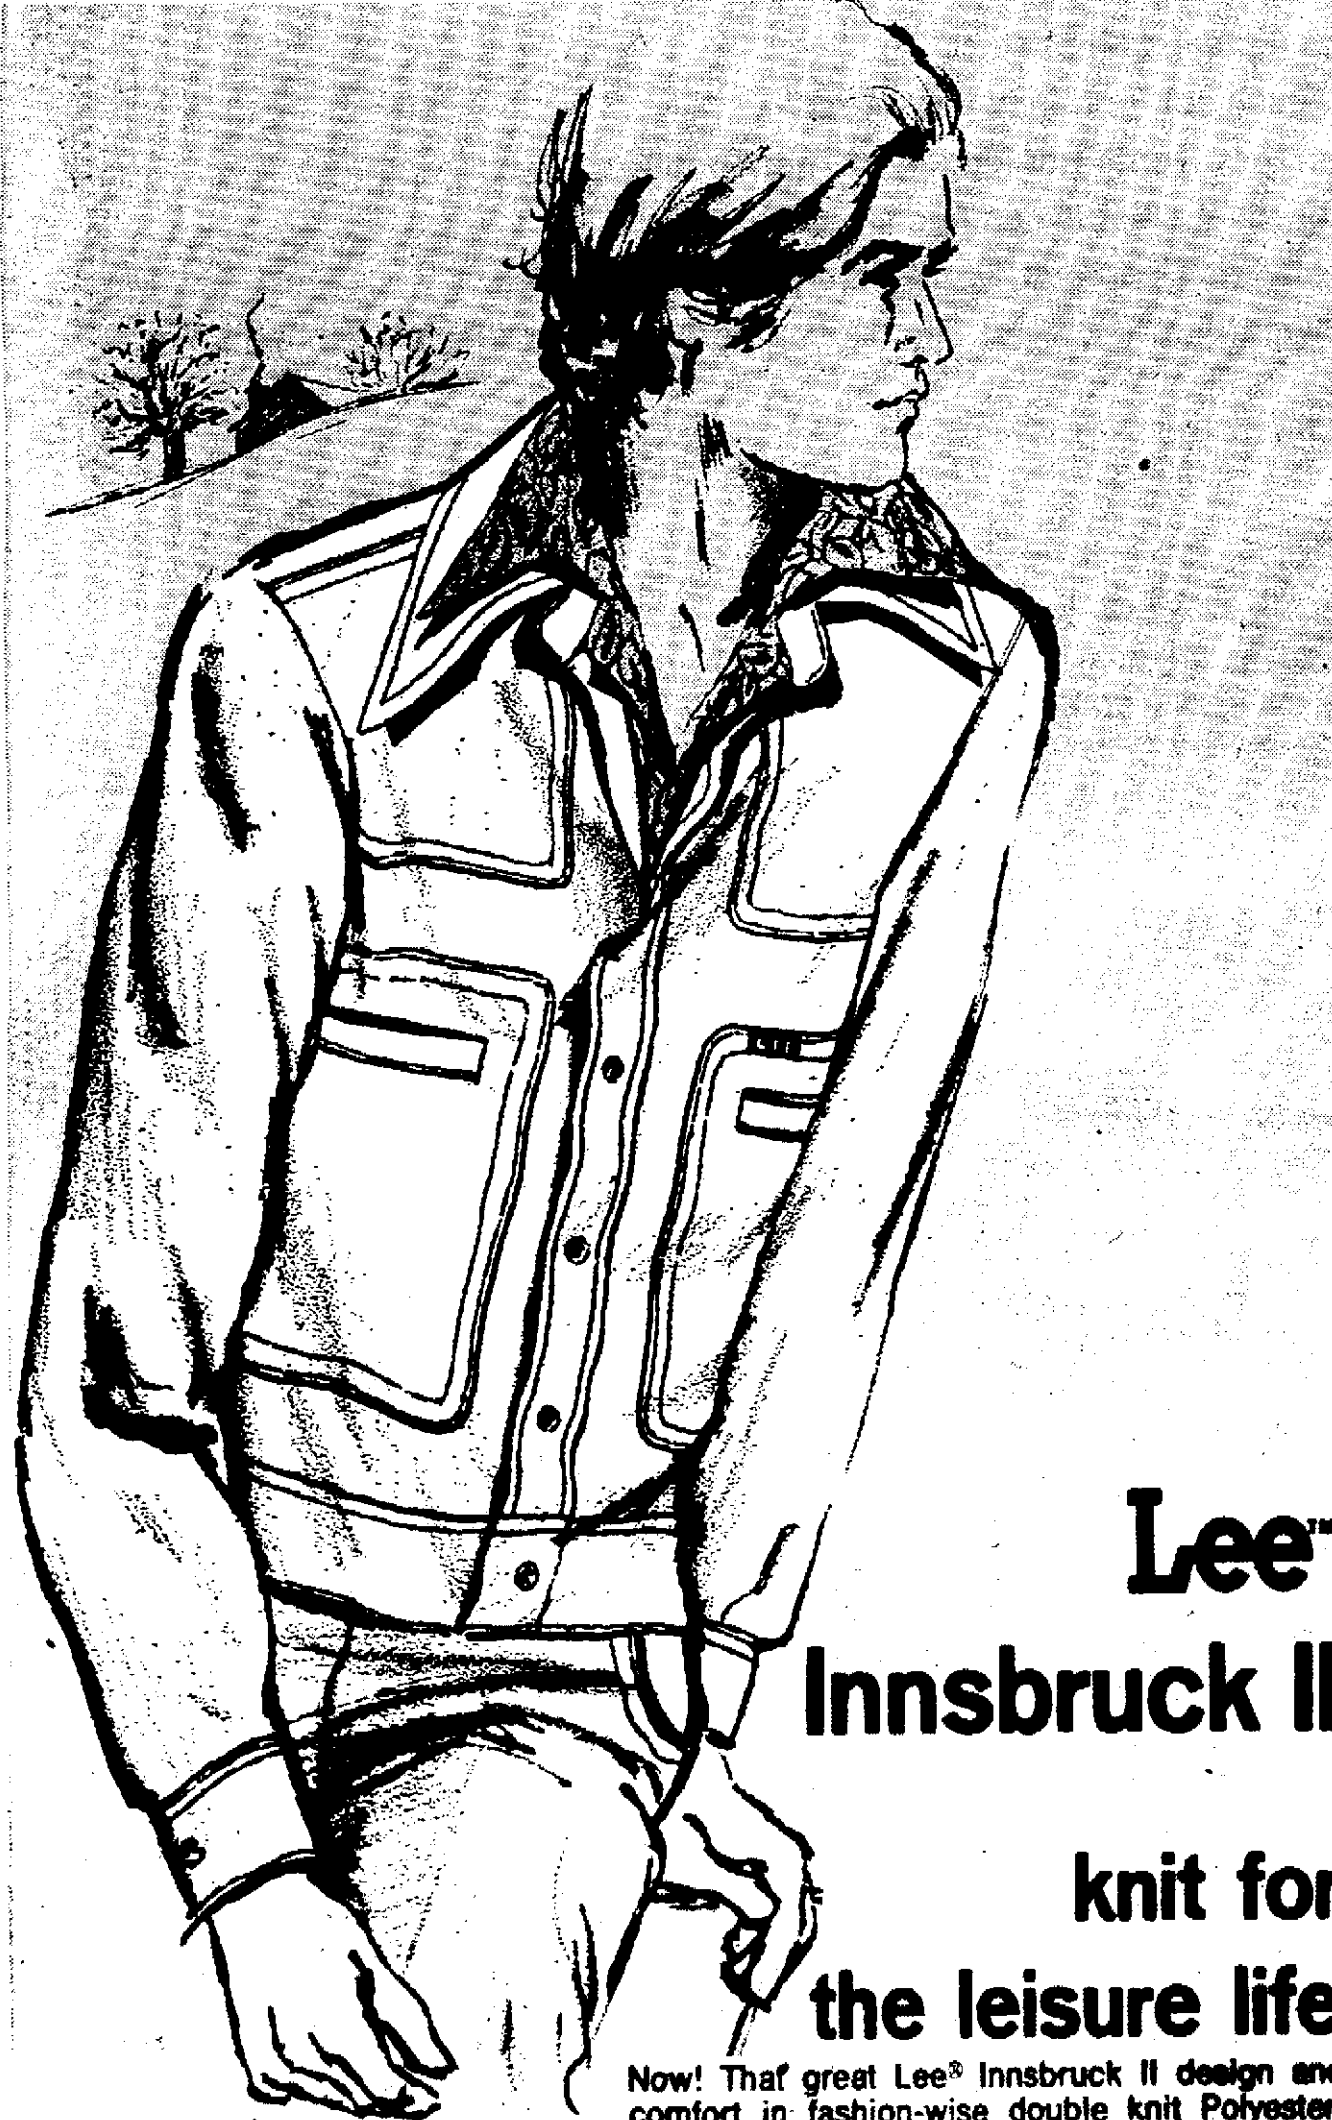

Mansfield plans no further talks or interviews until after he meets the President. He does not expect to meet Chairman Mao, whose whereabouts are unknown.

Brandt Likes Job As Party Leader

By Otto Doelling
Bonn (AP) — The ruggedly handsome passenger in the backseat of an unpretentious limousine is simply Herr Brandt now.

Willy Brandt

No motorcycle escort clears his way through heavy weekend traffic. No government helicopter or plane waits on a landing strip to whisk him away to his next engagement.

Willy Brandt, ex-chancellor and Nobel Peace Prize winner, did not give up all his power when he resigned in the wake of a spy scandal last May 8. At 60, he is still unchallenged chairman of the ruling Social Democratic Party (SPD) and a member of the Bundestag, the lower house of parliament. The new chancellor, Helmut Schmidt, is his party deputy.

A ranking party member says Brandt and Schmidt had some difficulty adjusting to the new political framework in which the chancellor was not also party chairman and the party chairman not simultaneously chancellor.

Discounting any aim of unseating the chairman, Schmidt is saying he could not effectively carry out the dual function of chancellor and party chairman.

Brandt makes it plain he is "concentrating more upon long-range problems... and I'm not in competition with the chancellor on the problems of the day."

Since returning from his Norwegian vacation retreat in September, Brandt has thrown himself into party work, traveling into the provinces to reassure the rank and file.

At a local party conference in the Hunsrueck Hills, Brandt admitted he occasionally complains to his wife about his busy schedule.

"She tells me, 'Be quiet. You wanted it no other way.'"

In a recent interview Brandt expressed no second thought about his resignation.

"The change of the chancellorship," he said, "made it possible for my successor to deal with these difficult problems unhindered by polemics, which inevitably would result from a case like the Guillaume affair." Last April Guenter Guillaume, a close aide to Brandt, was arrested as an East German spy and two weeks later Brandt resigned.

Brandt, who is conscious of his place in history, did not have to look to the past for an example of the divisive effects of domestic scandal. Across the Atlantic, Richard Nixon's executive energy was draining away in the quagmire of Watergate.

The scandal seems to have left no tarnish on his standing within the Social Democratic Party.

At a regional party conference in the small Rhineland town of Simmern, the rank and file demonstrated they were not awe-struck in Brandt's presence, offering praise and blame alike. Brandt accepted both with a poker face, making occasional notes and munching on meeting-hall fare of roast pork and potato salad.

Brandt draws no salary as party chairman. He receives a comfortable 10,000 marks ($4,000) a month in chancellor's pension and another 4,000 marks ($1,500) as a member of parliament.

Even among his most fervent supporters there is no movement to bring Brandt back into office.

"I'm quite happy with the position I have," Brandt has said, "so I'm not aiming at some kind of government responsibility. The leadership of the party gives me work, but also influence. I have every possibility of giving advice where I think advice should be given to those who are responsible."

Gallup on Political Reform Drastic Measures Favored by Public

Princeton, N.J. — The recent conferences by both major parties reveal that party leaders are far from instituting the kind of drastic political reforms long favored by the American people.

Ample evidence of the public's distrust of politics and politicians was provided Nov. 5 when one of the lowest voter turnouts in American political history was recorded.

Republican governors, their ranks depleted by the mid-term elections, were warned by their new chairman, Missouri's Christopher Bond, that Watergate would continue to haunt the GOP unless the party takes the lead in political reforms. Bond, who said the GOP was "obviously gravely wounded by Watergate," called for a reform in election laws, tightening financial disclosure and conflict-of-interest laws, as well as other reforms.

A post-election Gallup Poll indicates that one key reason for the near record low turnout in the November congressional elections (only 4 in 10 of those of voting age voted for candidates for the House of Representatives) is the low opinion Americans have of politicians and the political process.

A key reason given by survey respondents for not voting is disgust with the political scene in general. The same survey shows that 65% would like to see changes in the way political campaigns are conducted. Equal proportions of Republicans and Democrats call for changes.

All persons in the survey were asked this question: "Would you like to see any changes in the way political campaigns are conducted?"

Here are the national results:

National	65%
Men	49%
Women	42%
Republicans	62%
Democrats	63%
Independents	72%

Nearly half of all responses deal with some aspect of campaign spending, and favor a reduction in the amount being spent, having the federal government set limits, and public disclosure of campaign contributions. Other reforms sought include: "cleaning up campaigns," reducing "mudslinging," changing the way candidates are selected, greater discussion of the issues, shortening the campaign period and limiting the terms of legislators.

All persons in the current survey who indicated they had not voted in the Nov. 5 elections were asked why they didn't.

Reasons for Not Voting in '74 Congressional Elections

Didn't bother to register or prevented from registering by residency requirements	40%
Not interested in politics; discouraged by political process (just didn't vote)	26%
Didn't like the candidates	12%
Sick or disabled	8%
Could not leave job or working two shifts	7%
Away from home/traveling	6%
Other reasons	4%
Don't know	2%
(Total adds up to more than 100% due to multiple responses)

The results reported today are based on in-person interviews with 1,557 adults, 18 and older, in more than 300 scientifically selected localities across the nation, Nov. 8-11.

Family Trees
Is there anyone in Lincoln who researches family trees?
—Montie Goecke, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: Ann Reinert of the State Historical Society library described researching family trees as "a complex and time-consuming project."
However, she said the Historical Society, 15th and R Sts., could offer certain Nebraska records to help you get started. For further genealogical assistance, Ms. Reinert said the society could recommend professional genealogists near Lincoln.

Kick-a-Poo Juice
Is there any place in Lincoln where I can buy wine and beer bottles for storing homemade beverages?
—Carol Nelson, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: Short of buying a crock jug for your homemade kick-a-poo juice, you might check the offerings of Cornhusker Wine Making Supplies, 700 Sierra Drive. The store stocks wine bottles priced at $2.50-$3 for a 12-bottle case.
The Cornhusker shop doesn't carry beer bottles, but a store representative said it's possible the containers could be special ordered for you.

It's a Lemon
I recently purchased two items at a local store that fell apart within two months. The store won't take the items back. Is there anything I can do to get a refund?
—Pam Gillispie, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: If you're stuck with a lemon, you might just be out of luck. Even though it doesn't apply too often, Better Business Bureau of Lincoln says stores are under no obligation to take back merchandise or refund money unless store policy explicitly outlines such a service.
Signs such as "Absolutely No Refunds" or "Satisfaction Guaranteed" are one way a customer can gauge a store's policy.
If you're not satisfied with merchandise, the BBB suggests you go straight to the store manager. Often clerks may not be familiar with store policies and steer you wrong, the BBB warns.

Cookbook Blues
A year or so ago I entered the Roberts Dairy Cookbook Contest and won a cookbook with my recipe. Now I notice the cookbooks are advertised on the milk cartons as being available by mail or from the route man. But I'm still waiting for mine. Please help.
—Mrs. Harry DeBus, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: You should be cooking up a storm by now, Mrs. DeBus. Florence Buchanan of the Roberts Dairy Co., 220 So. 20th St., said your name was checked off the cookbook delivery list last Friday.
Mrs. Buchanan said the first printing of the books "didn't turn out too well," so a second printing was requested. "That's what caused the delay," she said, "plus we've been having a terrible time catching you at home."

Regents Try End Run, OK Faculty Pay Hike

By Jack Kennedy
"I want an institution that the football team can be proud of," former Big Red football player Ed Schwartzkopf of Lincoln told fellow members of the University of Nebraska Board of Regents Saturday.
In an attempted end run around Gov. J. J. Exon, who urged in a letter, reread to the regents Saturday that budgets be held down, the regents approved faculty and staff salary increases totaling between $8.8 million and nearly $10 million. The exact dollar amounts remain to be determined.

Schwartzkopf, head of the regents' academic committee, said the state must be willing to support academics as well as it does football.
"It is imperative that we be competitive," said NU President D. B. Varner. For that reason, he recommended a 9% across-the-board salary increase for all University employees as a cost-of-living adjustment; a three-year plan to make faculty salary increases of 3 1/2% beginning in 1975-76; increased graduate student stipends; retirement pay, and a 1% chancellor's merit of adjustment discretionary fund.

$7 Million
The 9% general increase could cost about $7 million, the adjustments for the first year of the three-year plan about $1.5 million and the discretionary fund approximately $1 million.

There should be a clear public commitment on the part of this board "to finance academic excellence," Varner said. Sources of revenue should be set after needs are determined, he added, not before.

The state decided to reduce income tax rates to 11% before all program needs were met, Varner noted. The "Toward Excellence" five-year plan approved by the regents Saturday must be more than "simply a hollow proclamation," he said.
The 3 1/2% increase would bring 1975-76 NU salaries up to the average of Association of American Universities (AAU) members of the Big 8, Varner said. Besides NU, other Big 8 AAU members are Iowa State, Colorado, Missouri and Kansas.

He is not asking to go to the top of the AAU scale, he said, but the nationwide salary average of all AAU institutions should be NU's three-year goal. NU is now in the bottom 10% of that ranking, Varner said, I don't believe the citizens of Nebraska want that."

The Omaha campus salary scale must be comparable to Lincoln's, Varner said. A new study of how the two campuses' salaries compare will be initiated. "The treatment given to Lincoln ought to be extended to Omaha," he said.

"We are not a poor state in per capita income," Schwartzkopf said. "We have the ability to generate needed university funding."

2 Studies Made
Lincoln Chancellor James Zumberge reported on detailed studies conducted by his staff and by a faculty committee headed by Prof. Donald Haack. Most NU faculty members who leave go to AAU member state universities, Zumberge said.

The five-year plan, Zumberge noted, described the faculty as the university's principal resource. About 38% of its members have been added in recent years, he said. When the older faculty leave, the University does not have funds to replace them at the same salary level and hire inexperienced staff at a lower scale.

Since 1969, there have been resignations by 80% of the architecture faculty, 37% of dentistry, 80% of law and 47% of the library staff. Only home economics and Teachers College salaries now are comparable to those at the four Big 8 AAU schools, Zumberge said.

The pay proposal for the governor and the Legislature passed the regents with the notation that it is not the board's responsibility to find the money only to state the problem. Nonteaching employees need the salary increases they will get under the overall 9%, it was said.

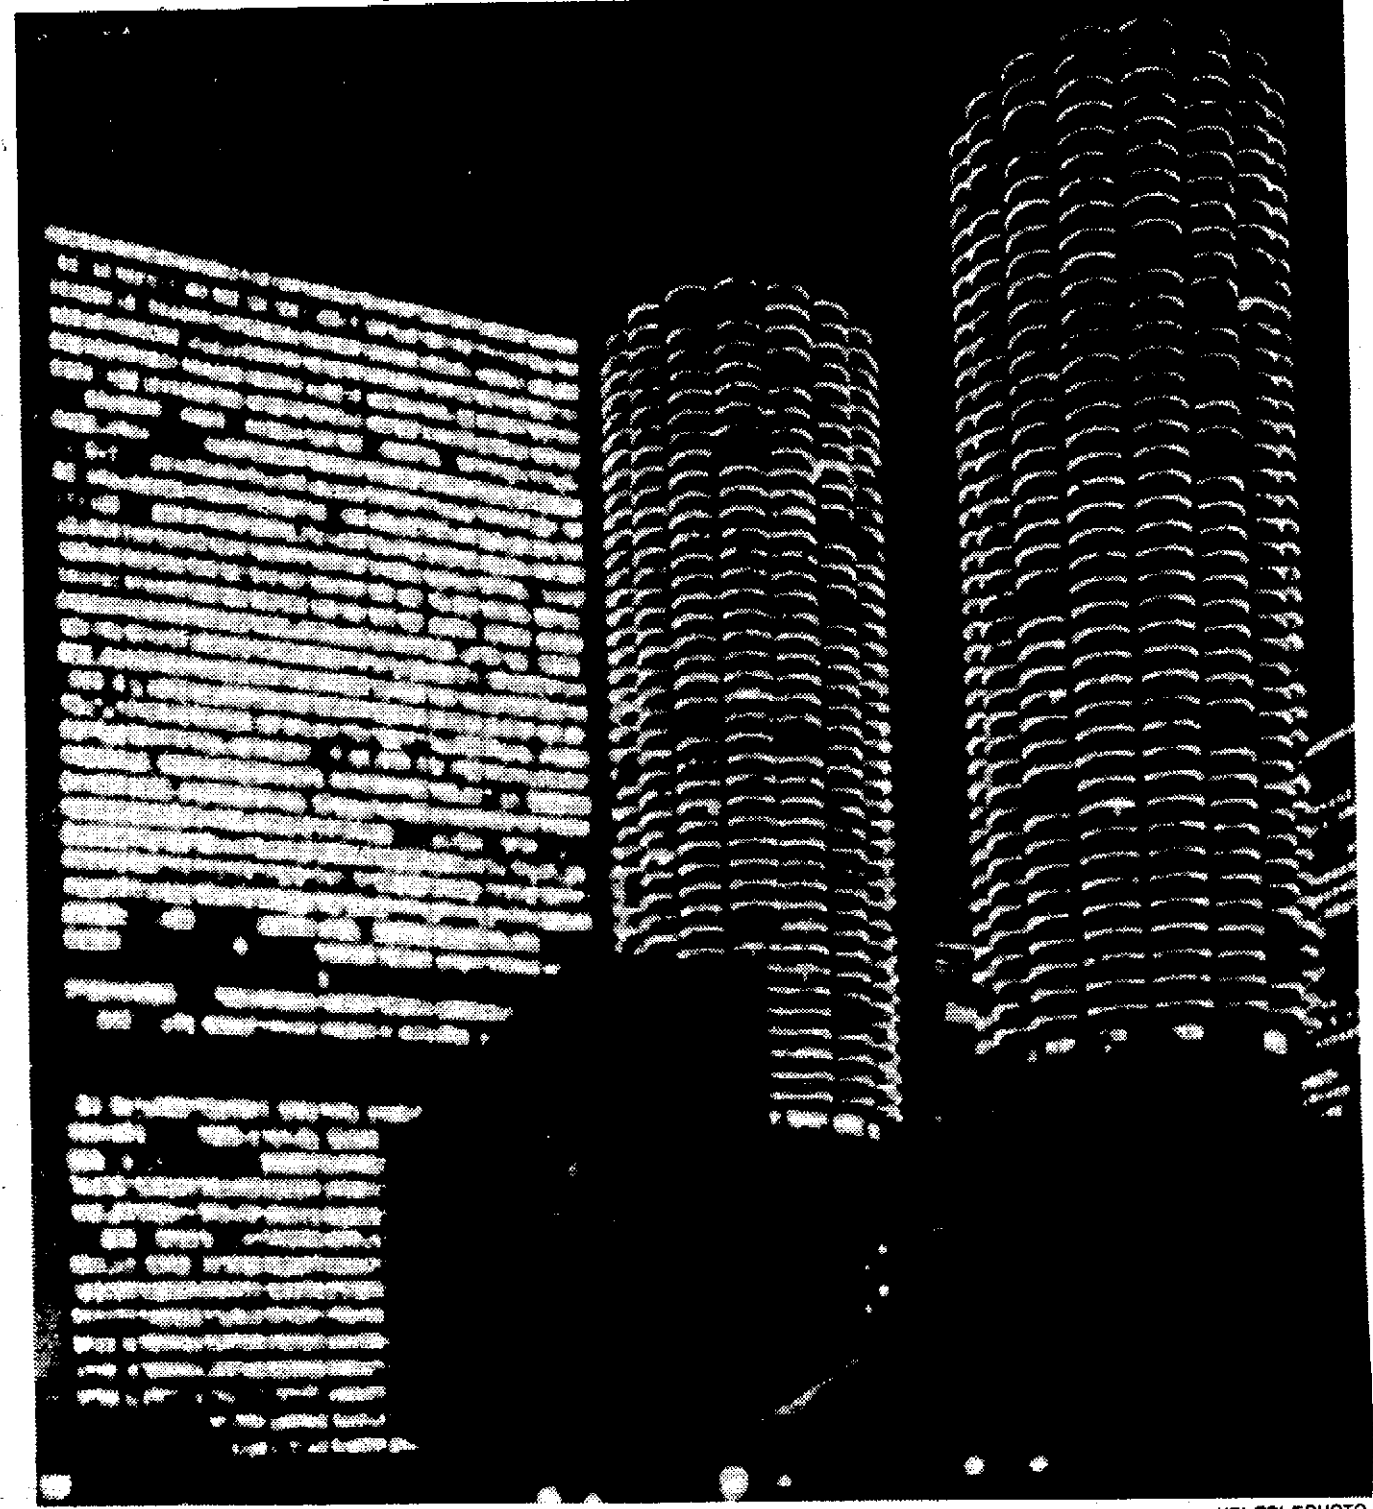

In other business, the regents approved cut in the UNO capital construction request from $5 million to $1.8 million for the proposed downtown UNO center. The $10 million for the proposed downtown project would be financed half by local donations. UNO Chancellor Ronald Raskens said the full $5 million state financing is not yet needed because construction will not start until 1976.

Tract Defined
As shown by the map on Page 3B the proposed UNO development would limit land acquisition next year to an area bounded by Dodge, Douglas, 12th and 14th Sts. where the building would be located. A central park mall would separate this tract from a parking area — bounded by Farnam, Harney, 12th and 14th — to be acquired later.

The regents also approved a UNO request to the Legislature for $217,275 to make up for an anticipated tuition income loss in the 1975-76 budget.

Regent James Moylan of Omaha moved and the regents passed authorization for a voluntary dues checkoff if requested by members of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees and the Nebraska Association of Public Employees. NU attorneys had recommended that all dues checkoffs be halted. The unions threatened to sue, saying the right is guaranteed by state law.

From News Wires
Washington — The Senate Finance Committee, meeting Saturday behind closed doors to rush through a tax bill before the end of the congressional session, approved noncontroversial sections but left out provisions that would have afforded some tax relief to 38 million Americans and eliminated the oil depletion allowance.

The committee also refused to include a provision sought by the Ford administration that would eliminate withholding of taxes on the earnings of foreigners on investments in the United States. The Treasury Dept. had sought this change as

Senate Actions:

Washington (AP) — Legislation on which the Senate took action Saturday included:
School Busing — Senators voted 56 to 27 to shut off debate on the issue and followed with a vote of 55 to 27 to water down a provision curbing federal power to enforce desegregation laws. The busing provision was part of an $8.6 billion school and housing money bill that was sent back to the House.
Strip Mining — Floor action on a compromise package imposing stiff controls on surface coal mining was put over at least until Monday in the face of a veto threat. The House ignored President Ford's veto warning, passing it Friday.
Export-Import — A move to force final action on extending lending authority of the Export-Import Bank failed by a vote of 49 to 35, seven short of the needed two-thirds. In dispute are low interest loans to the Soviet Union. A new attempt will be made Monday.
Military Construction — By voice vote, a $3 billion military construction measure was sent to the White House. A provision delays until next year a final decision on the Navy's plans for an expanded base on the Indian Ocean island of Diego Garcia.
Rocketeer — By voice vote, senators approved a resolution authorizing radio-television coverage for the swearing in of Vice President-designate Nelson Rockefeller, if the ceremonies are held in their chamber. There has never been a broadcast from the Senate chamber.

Turkeys Bringing in 'Chicken Feed' As Consumers Gobble, Growers' Profits Drop

By Dean Terrill
Southeast Nebraska Bureau
Oxford — Talking turkey here these days just about equates with giving somebody the bird.
Local growers claim they've lost $1 to $2 on every gobbler they put on this year's holiday platter. In this "Turkey Capital of Nebraska," that totals out to much more than chicken feed.

Though there are only three big raisers left in the Furnas-Harlan Counties area, they marketed some 150,000 turkeys this year. That's down substantially from a peak production of 250,000 a decade or so ago, but still well above any other community in the state.

Hitting hardest, according to veteran poultryman Milton Thulin, were soaring feed costs laid alongside a sharp decline in wholesale turkey prices. An excessive carryover of frozen birds from 1973 compounded the problem.
Anticipating the high inventory to some extent, local growers had cut their flocks at least 20%. But that strategy helped only to the extent of trimming the losses.

"We got as high as 45c live weight in the 1950's," reflected Thulin, who also happens to be Oxford's mayor. "Now the 30c a pound we get cannot possibly pay for the $3 corn we put into the birds."

As the owner of the only commercial hatchery remaining in the state — only eight years ago there were 13 — Thulin is up a taller tree than he is were only a raiser. Two years ago he expanded the operation to a capacity of 104,000 poulters per week.

He had gained encouragement through the supplying of hatchery stock to a huge turkey business on the old ammunition depot at Hastings. Amerline Corp. of Oakdale, Calif. The sudden closing of that operation was thus a blow — but also a temptation.

Thulin decided to take a further plunge of leasing of the depot operation himself. Various aspects of his expansion have the help of sons Bruce and Tom, 23 and 19, and wife Phyllis.

Their 18-year-old Oxford Hatchery last year produced a quarter-million poulters, sold mostly in Nebraska but some to surrounding states. Its future now seems as uncertain as that of the struggling industry overall.

A substantial investment in the hatchery points up the need for a quick solution. Even the fate of some 5,500 breeding hens is a question mark, what with losses at the highest ever.

"We can't afford to stay in business, yet we can't afford to quit," said Bruce. "I suppose we'll just have to keep going and hope this is just the down part of a cycle which will improve."

Milton and his sons accounted for approximately 100,000 of the turkeys maturing here this year. His brother, Tony, has a separate business which raised 20,000. Walter Rankin, with 10,000 birds, is the only other holdover from some 20 growers when the industry was at its strongest here about 1960.

In 1961 the market hit the skids and the number of growers has been dwindling ever since. A good many have switched to pork production.

The holiday birds were introduced to the area in the 1930s by Milton's father, the late G. R. Thulin. By 1942 he had built to a flock of 3,000, then went all-out upon the return of his sons from World War II.

Practically all the Oxford turkeys are shipped to Gibson, which now has the only processing plant in the state. Although peak retail sales coincide with the holiday season, freezer processing gives the growers more scheduling flexibility than in bygone days.

Incidentally, the big strutting bronze turkeys of yesteryear exist only in memories. Practically all the birds sold commercially now are whites.

"It's all a matter of pinfeathers and the selective housewife," explained Bruce. "She didn't like those black pinfeathers on the bronzes. Of course they are still there, only they are white and she can't see them."

And every one's a loser . . . Bruce Thulin with breeding hens.

Hearing May Mark Indian History

At 9 a.m. Monday, U.S. District Judge Warren Urbom will begin a two-week hearing in Lincoln that will undoubtedly find its way into Indian history books of the future.

At some point following the conclusion of that hearing — after all of the pros and cons of the Treaty of 1868 have been aired — he will make a decision that will start a chain of legal moves which quite likely will culminate before the U.S. Supreme Court.

Whichever way he decides on the key issue of whether the U.S. government had jurisdiction on the Sioux Indian Pine Ridge Reservation in South Dakota during the occupation of Wounded Knee, the losing side is not apt to accept the ruling without a further legal fight.

The thrust of the Indians' case will center on their contention that they are the real owners of the land as specified in the 1868 treaty, and, as such, constitute an independent nation not subject to the "white man's law" on land which they say they own.

The government, on the other hand, will point to past court rulings which held that the Indians are dependent citizens as a result of treaties subsequent to 1868 and other laws of Congress. It will be argued, therefore, that when they violate the law, they must answer for it.

Should the question of jurisdiction be ultimately decided in the Indians' favor, the next step would be to obtain compensation which the Sioux believe is due them.

John Thorne, their chief attorney at the treaty hearing, has said this could be done by the government condemning the land, paying the present owners fair value for it, and returning it to the Indians. An alternative, he suggested, would be to allow the present owners to retain title until their death, at which time the land would revert to the Sioux.

Thorne has also said that additional compensation would have to be made for the depletion of natural resources such as gold taken from the Black Hills after abrogation of the 1868 Treaty.

That abrogation, the Sioux contend, was illegal.

On Proposed David City Structure Nursing Home Meeting Set

The task force assigned by Southeast Nebraska Health Planning Council (SeNHPC) to review and comment on a 90-bed nursing home project in David City will meet at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the Seward Civic Center.

Dick Weatherford, SeNHPC health planner, said the task force will attempt to answer questions about a proposal calling for 10 beds for mental patients at the nursing home.

The questions arose last week at a community meeting in David City.

There was no opposition to the project, Weatherford said, though nursing home operators in Columbus, Schuyler and Wahoo had questions.

He said the directors were concerned the size of the facility may affect their populations. Their homes are not filled currently.

They also believe developer Bob High may find it difficult to recruit registered and licensed practical nurses for the nursing home.

High and Dr. Stephen Scott, psychologist in charge of the seven-county Pioneer Mental Health Center, are expected to attend the Thursday meeting to discuss the issues introduced last week.

Attorney Dick Hansen of the council said the changes involved requests for extensions of the July 1976 deadline for complying with the federal Clean Air Act. Hansen said from now on extension requests must go to the Environmental Protection Agency, rather than being granted or denied at the state level.

According to Hansen, the rule changes directly affect three

Nebraska firms which "are acting in good faith," but apparently can't get the needed air pollution control equipment from manufacturers before the 1976 deadline.

The companies are Ideal Cement of Superior, the North Omaha power plant of the Omaha Public Power District and the City of Fremont's electric utility plant.

Hansen said the council also gave feedlot operators an extension on their deadline to comply with the federal water act. The compliance date was changed from Dec. 31 of this year to July 1, 1977, Hansen said that change still fits under the federal water act.

Chief spokesman for revising state office fund-raising activities was Wyman Kenagy, a retired Lincoln mulling company executive, who is finance chairman.

Hamilton County Getting New Museum

By Joel Thorson

Outstate Nebraska Bureau

Aurora — After more than 35 years, the Hamilton County Historical Society museum is about to find a fitting home.

Not that the ninety-year-old T. E. Williams house didn't serve well in its time. But with every corner chock-full of prairie relics and Indian artifacts, there's hardly room to change your mind, let alone change displays.

"There's so little room there's no way to properly sort and display things," laments historical society president Wesley Huenefeld, noting that toys, dishes and clocks can be found in every room of the pioneer banker's home. Besides, the old building has no workroom, office or restrooms.

This winter or early spring Huenefeld and fellow society board member Jack O'Brien will supervise the Aurora Chamber of Commerce tourism committee in the particular work of moving the society's collection into the boldly designed Plainsman Museum located on Nob. 14 just southeast of town.

The 25,000-sq. ft. structure, erected and furnished at a cost of some $300,000, is being funded entirely with private gifts and pledges — Hamilton County has no historical society levy.

Workmen have the spacious steel-and-brick building enclosed for winter, and are finishing the wiring, heating and other interior work. When completed and occupied, it will be one of the more impressive museums in the state.

Entering beneath an imposing rusted-steel canopy, the visitor can walk through a lobby (surrounded by the curator's office, concessions room and restrooms) into a central rotunda featuring special exhibits. Around it will be the display areas, which will likely be walled with movable partitions for versatility. Workrooms will be in the rear.

The museum will be manned at first with volunteer labor — including that of Huenefeld and O'Brien, who have jointly kept the old museum open on a regular schedule for years. "But we'll have to go to a paid curator-attendant," Huenefeld said.

"We hope to have it open every day," explained O'Brien. The present collection will be but a small part of the new museum, Huenefeld said, because "there are some rather extensive collections throughout the county that will go to the museum."

He declined to say what collections are involved. But one will be O'Brien's own extensive collection of musical devices: 35 old radios, various phonographs, some 1,500 78-rpm recordings, many kinds of recording devices, player pianos and a calliope.

"I enjoy collecting," said O'Brien, "but I tell you, my house and garage are full." ("We're looking forward to this stuff," gloated Huenefeld.)

Notable items already in the historical society collection include:

—A large assortment of Indian artifacts assembled by the society's founder, Joe Gunnerson.

—The telephone switchboard from the old Phillips exchange.

—A coin-operated telephone with an armrest for long calls.

—A "prairie sodbuster" made in the county, circa 1870.

—A child's coffin, with window.

—A miniature replica of a wood-burning cookstove, awarded to a girl who won a local popularity contest in 1904.

—A fossil mammoth tusk found near Marquette.

—A 1920 painting by Auroran Edwin Tuepker of the Twin Sisters, two tall cottonwoods which marked the site of the Hamilton County seat-to-be in 1870.

—A broad assortment of frontier pottery, utensils, tools, furniture, housewares, and farm equipment.

"I don't see how museums starting out today can build collections," said Huenefeld. "A lot of these items would have been tossed out without the foresight of a few people."

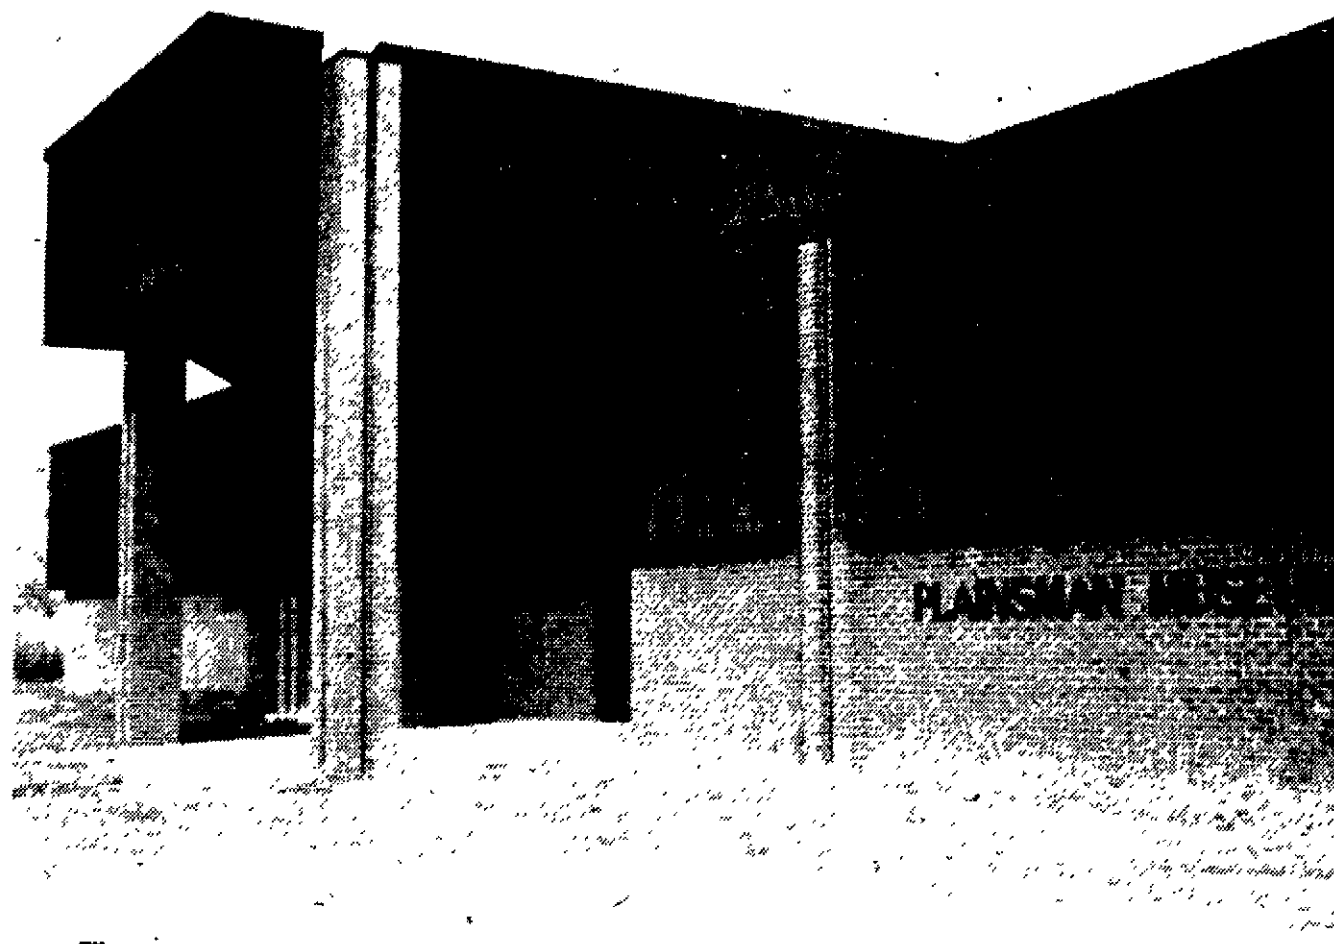

The society, he said, was organized in 1936 by Gunnerson, P. J. Refshauge and Frank Edgerton. Edgerton, the first president, was also the father of a renowned Auroran — Harold Edgerton, an MIT professor emeritus who invented high-speed photography using strobe lighting. "Some of his things will be in the new museum," Huenefeld said.

First housed in the basement of the courthouse, the collection outgrew its quarters — so in 1943 the county bought the Williams house at a tax sale.

The society was revived by the local State Centennial Committee in 1965, with the goal of building a new museum. Huenefeld has served as president since then.

The old home will be sold, O'Brien said. If the new owner chooses not to restore it (it stands on a choice property near the square), the society will salvage its beveled glass windows and old-fashioned light fixtures. They will become historical displays in the new museum in their own right.

The new Plainsman Museum will have plenty of room for Hamilton County's history.

Senators Seek Bill Acceptable to House an incentive to oil-producing nations to invest more of their money here.

The measure approved by the Finance Committee preserves beyond the present Dec. 31 expiration date some special tax advantages accorded to the railroad, coal and real estate industries. It also makes a number of other changes in the tax laws, including some involving contributions to political candidates or parties as well as the taxable status of the parties themselves.

Most of the proposals approved by the committee were contained in a bill that had been approved earlier by the House Ways and Means Committee and which had been killed, on Thursday, by the House Rules Committee. A majority of the Rules Committee opposed bringing any new major bills before the House between now and the time Congress adjourns, which probably will be Friday.

The Senate committee had hoped to pass a bill that could get through the House, either through some procedure that bypasses the Rules Committee or by using the argument that the provisions of its bill were not major or controversial.

Thus, it left out of the bill both of the two major provisions of the Ways and Means Committee version. The first of these would have provided a small amount of tax relief for 38 million low-and-moderate-income families and individuals. The second would have reduced the 22% oil depletion allowance to 15%, retroactively to the start of this year, and eliminated the allowance altogether at the start of next year for the larger oil companies.

The committee also approved Saturday a $600 million-a-year program of special government assistance to the working poor.

State GOP Backs Partisan Unicameral

Omaha (UPI) — The Nebraska Republican Central Committee voted Saturday to push for a partisan legislature as "the most workable method of developing and supporting principles and legislative issues."

The vote came as the committee concluded its winter meeting with a round of reports and a brief address by state GOP National Committeeman Dick Herman of Omaha.

The recommendation for a partisan unicameral said a two-party system of government "has provided us with a most effective system of checks and balances between the legislative and executive branches of government."

"The party system helps voters in their choices of candidates," the proposal said. "Historically it has been proven that the voters identifying candidates has been difficult enough under the two-party system and that a nonpartisan system makes the choice that much more confusing."

Neither Herman nor other GOP leaders brought up the demand made last month by Rep. Dave Martin, R-Neb., that Herman be ousted from his post for alleged failure to support all GOP candidates Nov. 5.

Glenn Wilson, Lincoln, executive director of the state party, officially submitted his resignation. Wilson said he wanted to establish a career for himself and his family, but would continue to be active as a party volunteer.

The committee members also rejected the concept of open primaries, contending it would be "unwise to disregard the voters' political party affiliations in selecting candidates for public office."

Another point in the legislative program was a recommendation that county clerks be required to establish registration facilities on a periodic basis in towns other than the county seat. The move would help the elderly and handicapped keep their registrations up to date.

The some 200 committee members supported the concept of full disclosure of all campaign contributions and expenditures a candidate acquires or incurs. The proposal called for "a reasonable ceiling on contributions... applied equitably to individuals and organizations."

The committee also adopted a proposal to eliminate the filing of periodic campaign reports for the hundreds of candidates for director of natural resources districts. The approach was designed to save the state money.

Another proposal reaffirmed the basic requirement of a filing fee for public office. However, further study was recommended as to the amount of the fee.

Also reaffirmed was the present system of electing delegates to national conventions. The committee said individual voters and not the political party should determine representatives to the national conventions.

Nonelection proposals adopted were support of the right to work law, determination of proper usage of land and water and close monitoring of welfare programs.

Palestinian Camps Are Self-Sufficient

EDITOR'S NOTE — On Saturday, Israeli soldiers again intercepted Arab terrorists they said infiltrated from Lebanon. Many such incursions come from Palestinian refugee camps. Here is a look at the camps.

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Fifteen Palestinian refugee camps dot the Lebanese coastline between the Syrian border in the north and the barbed-wire fence that separates Lebanon and Israel in the south. Most are clusters of new single-room dwellings gradually replacing rows of tin and cardboard shacks or tents provided by UNRWA, the United Nations Relief and Works Agency.

They are situated near major Lebanese cities but are closed, self-sufficient communities. They have their own groceries, cafes, primary schools and guerrilla police squads. Even the accent of Arabic spoken inside the camps differs from that of the Lebanese.

Over the years since they were set up by the partition of Palestine, the camps have become spawning grounds for guerrilla movements. At night, the camps become virtual armed fortresses as armed men guard the entrances and patrol the muddy alleyways. Few outsiders venture nearby. Boys and girls attend indoctrination sessions supervised by guerrilla organizations.

In many camps more than one group, sometimes rivals within the movement, have schools where cub guerrillas learn to handle light arms and the rudiments of guerrilla warfare. But repeated Israeli raids have forced the guerrillas to move training facilities for veteran guerrillas to olive and pine groves near the campsite to other Arab countries.

There are six refugee camps in the Beirut area and the surrounding mountains, housing better than 22,000 Palestinians. More than 18,000 live outside the camps, holding down jobs in banks, with foreign companies and private enterprise, or as laborers for builders or farmers.

But in the camps, most Palestinians live on doles from the UNRWA. Each refugee receives a monthly ration of 22 pounds of flour, about a pound each of rice, sugar and oil, about 15 cents worth of food a day.

In several camps refugees have staged sitdown strikes protesting the allotments, but UNRWA says it has insufficient funds to provide more.

UNRWA figures list around 100,000 refugees in the 15 camps, but the total is thought to be much higher.

While the younger children go to UNRWA schools and the teenagers become guerrillas, almost all refugees entertain hopes of returning some day to their homes in what is now Israel.

Pollution Extension Requests Will Go Directly to EPA

By The Associated Press

The Nebraska Environmental Control Council Saturday acted to bring the state's clean air guidelines into line with federal law.

Attorney Dick Hansen of the council said the changes involved requests for extensions of the July 1976 deadline for complying with the federal Clean Air Act. Hansen said from now on extension requests must go to the Environmental Protection Agency, rather than being granted or denied at the state level.

According to Hansen, the rule changes directly affect three

Nebraska firms which "are acting in good faith," but apparently can't get the needed air pollution control equipment from manufacturers before the 1976 deadline.

The companies are Ideal Cement of Superior, the North Omaha power plant of the Omaha Public Power District and the City of Fremont's electric utility plant.

Hansen said the council also gave feedlot operators an extension on their deadline to comply with the federal water act. The compliance date was changed from Dec. 31 of this year to July 1, 1977, Hansen said that change still fits under the federal water act.

Chief spokesman for revising state office fund-raising activities was Wyman Kenagy, a retired Lincoln mulling company executive, who is finance chairman.

Musical Retread

New York (UPI) — That Old James Stewart Movie, Mr. Smith Goes to Washington, will become a musical retread starring singing star John Denver.

made Saturday in Omaha by National Committeeman Richard Herman, who reported on a recent Republican survey which showed party membership sharply down in most states.

"We are down to 19% nationally," Herman said. "We're losing those under 30 and in this age group the membership is lower than 19%."

Herman said unless the trend is changed among younger voters, "the Republican party in a few years will not be a viable, effective party nationally."

Putting together a budget was the most time consuming job for the 100-member governing body of the state party. A $99,200 budget was adopted after considering previously proposed totals of $67,000 and $79,223.

State Chairman William Barrett and William Morrow of Omaha presented the budget proposals. Both described as unworkable any budget of less than $99,200, a figure about $10,000 less than the party spent in 1974.

Morrow was campaign chairman for Rep. John Y. McCollister's successful reelection campaign.

Chief spokesman for revising state office fund-raising activities was Wyman Kenagy, a retired Lincoln mulling company executive, who is finance chairman.

tion showed sustaining memberships paid $53,120 of the party's expenses in 1974 and fund raising dinners supplied much of the remainder.

Current party net worth was listed at $1,689, most of it in a savings account.

The central committee accepted with a resolution of commendation, the resignation of Executive Director Glenn Wilson, who said he was leaving to enter private business. Wilson, who was paid $18,000 a year, said he may announce his new position about the first of the year. No successor was named.

Sioux City Educational Channel Behind Schedule

Des Moines (UPI) — The Iowa Educational Broadcasting Network (IEBN) will not begin operation of Channel 32 in Sioux City Sunday as originally planned, officials announced Saturday.

However, IEBN spokesman Mark Douglas said Channel 32 in Waterloo will sign on the air Sunday as previously scheduled, giving the network three stations. The others are Channel 11 in Des Moines and Channel 12 in Iowa City.

Douglas said technical problems and the weather forced the delay in activation of the Sioux City channel — KSN-TV.

A transmission line had to be brought down from the 1,000-foot tower and repaired, Douglas said, but weather conditions have prevented workmen from returning the line to its place.

Douglas said workmen tried to replace the line early Saturday but were prevented from doing so by icing on the structure.

Varner Lauds Progress Made By NU's 'Excellence' Program

The University of Nebraska's five-year plan "Toward Excellence" has "produced more positive results in a short period of time than I would have anticipated," NU President D. B. Varner said Saturday as the Regents approved an amended version of the document.

It is "a truly cooperative effort" among the three campuses, he said.

Steven Sample, academic vice president, noted more than 60 pages of changes had been made since a faculty hearing at Lincoln Wednesday.

"There is no way to satisfy all parts of the institution," Varner said. Regents stressed in passing the revision of the 1973 plan that its proposed areas of excellence for special funding can and will be revised. "This is not set in concrete," Varner said.

Regents Robert Raun, Minden, and others emphasized that it will be updated constantly. The board called for periodic progress reports so it would know if the university is making its way toward excellence.

No Dollar Amounts

Regents chairman Kermit Hansen, Omaha, noted that no dollar amounts are assigned long-range goals, but those figures will come as the plan is implemented. Input from faculty, citizens and interest groups will be sought constantly, the regents said.

During informal discussion of the plan Friday night, Regents said duplication of graduate programs will be checked.

The Omaha campus has no desire to proliferate graduate programs, Chancellor Ronald Roskens asserted. The Lincoln campus faculty had been critical of graduate growth at UNO.

The plan notes that PhD. programs in administration and in criminal justice may be considered in the future, with some other areas.

Roskens said he is not ready now to propose them. Regents urged that any UNO graduate programs be developed systemwide.

UNL Chancellor James Zumbeke said earlier in an interview that a major purpose of the five-year plan is to prevent one campus from acting independent of others in development of programs.

No Duplicates

Some doctoral program bases might ultimately be shifted to Omaha, it was said, but would not be duplicates and would be systemwide degrees.

It is time now, said Regent James Moylan, Omaha, to shift emphasis from student body counts to quality of programs.

There are "valid criticism" of the timing and lack of sufficient faculty input, Varner said — and subsequent revisions will be done in a more leisurely way.

Vice President Sample said the revisions, most of them minor, were a direct result of the Wednesday faculty hearing at UNL.

Regents expressed concern that too many areas of excellence would dilute available dollars. Officials said this will not happen, and it is the state's responsibility to fund needed improvements in quality.

The plan was mandated by the Legislature. Varner noted that in recent years NU has not ranked high in many national surveys of graduate programs. If those surveys are accurate, he said, the university must continue to upgrade graduate study.

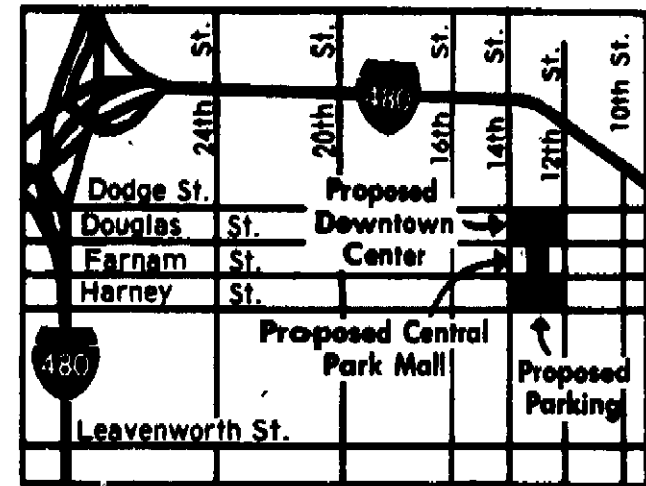

Ag. Law, Arts

New student Regent Jim Sherrets, UNO student body president, said quality graduate programs attract students and upgrade undergraduate programs.

During the planning period, the amended plan states, UNL will attempt to improve agriculture, law, the musical arts, life sciences and the library.

Affirmative action enrollment and hiring plans, outreach and service to the total state will be stressed, the excellence document says.

Regents emphasized that the entire state is the University of Nebraska campus and responsibility, with all three branches are working together.

Map shows proposed $10 million downtown center area for University of Nebraska-Omaha. Upper area for the building itself would be acquired next year. A mall separates it from parking area, lower half.

Sex Discrimination Hearings Conclude

Omaha (AP) — The Banking, Commerce and Insurance Committee concluded a series of hearings here Saturday into credit problems resulting from sex or marital status discrimination.

Among those testifying at the hearing in the Douglas County Courthouse was Doris Capps, chairman of a credit task force of the Mayor's Commission on the Status of Women in Omaha.

Mrs. Capps told senators that group advises women rejected for credit to seek an explanation from the top management of the firm involved. Often, she said, misunderstandings and problems can be resolved in that way.

Several persons testified about difficulties in obtaining credit and complained that married women are sometimes required to have their husbands co-sign credit applications.

State Sen. Steve Fowler of Lincoln said he wants to study a new federal law on credit which bans discrimination because of sex or marital status before deciding whether additional state legislation is needed.

KC Man, Wife Robbed, Shot, Pushed Off Cliff

Kansas City (AP) — A couple was robbed, pushed off a cliff in a remote part of the city and shot late Saturday by two men who drove off in their car, police said.

Donald D. Jones, 31, and his wife, Shirley, 29, both of Kansas City, were taken to a Kansas City hospital. An investigator said Jones was shot in the right side and left chest. His wife, shot twice in the buttocks, did not appear to be seriously hurt, the investigator said.

A spokesman at Osteopathic Hospital, where the couple was taken, said late Saturday night that Jones was in surgery and his wife was about to undergo surgery.

The Jones' car had not been located by police about four hours after the incident. The men took Jones' billfold and his wife's purse.

Police said the two men got into the Joneses' auto in the northeast part of the city and ordered them to drive to Cliff Dr., a sparsely populated wooded area on the Missouri River bluffs.

The police spokesman said the two were pushed from a cliff, then shot. "They said they fell 30 to 40 feet," the investigator said.

Mrs. Jones reportedly climbed back to the road and flagged down a passing motorist.

Cupcakes Hide Silver Dollars For Winner

Kansas City (AP) — Greg Goldberg, winner of a bet that had to do with losing weight, got paid off by one of his buddies Saturday night with 25 cupcakes, each with a silver dollar baked inside.

"It may not do anything for my weight, but I sure can use the money," Goldberg laughed.

He related that he and three friends thought up the weight-losing scheme during a breakfast they shared last Jan. 1. The weigh-in day was to be June 1.

"We had the weigh-in at a cookout at my place. I won $25 from each of them. I lost about 25 pounds," Goldberg said.

Denny White was late with his payoff, but delighted Goldberg and other guests at a Christmas party.

Murder Rate To Decline In 1980s?

Washington (AP) — The record-setting U.S. murder rate is not likely to decline until the 1980s when post-World War II babies have matured, a new government report says. The National Center for Health Statistics, an arm of the Health, Education and Welfare Dept., based that prediction on homicide trends dating back to the 19th century and on the statistical fact that persons between 15 and 29-years-old are more likely to be involved as assailants or victims than any other age group.

Statistical expert A. Joan Klebba said an estimated 20,518 persons were murdered in the United States last year, a rate of 9.8 deaths per 100,000 population.

Ballet Fan Almost Saw Last Dance

Hartford, Conn. (UPI) — The Soviet Georgian ballet was a big hit. One man in the audience was almost hit by a flying 12-inch dagger that missed its stage target.

A performer had been trying to "jackknife" six daggers into the floor of the stage when one missed and landed in an aisle, inches away from Klaus Wiebusch, of Coventry, Conn., sitting on a third row aisle seat.

Wiebusch used the dagger to buy his way backstage after the performance at the Bushnell Memorial and emerged smiling with an autograph of the ballet's choreographer. He said he had "no hard feelings."

Tourists Spend

New York (UPI) — More than $400 million was spent in New York City in 1973 as a direct result of conventions, according to a survey by the International Association of Conventions and Visitors Bureaus. The survey also said the typical out-of-town delegate spent an average of $113, while metropolitan-area delegates averaged about $50 each.

Reactions To Merger Of Colleges Sought

By United Press International
The presidents of Nebraska's four state colleges will be asking faculty members and citizens what they think of merging the colleges with the University of Nebraska system or the technical community college system.

The order to seek reaction to the merger ideas was issued Saturday by the Board of Trustees of the Nebraska State Colleges with the adoption of a resolution offered by William Colwell of Chadron.

The resolution said the Chadron, Peru, Wayne and Kearney presidents are to report their findings to the board on Feb. 10 of next year. The presidents are to report not only on reaction to mergers but also on the feeling for retaining the colleges as a separate system of higher education.

In offering the resolution, Colwell said "There exists today in this state widespread wonder and anxiety with regard to the administrative structures of public institutions of higher learning."

A merger of the state colleges with the university was brought up during this year's session of the Legislature but was not approved. A merger with either the University or the technical community colleges would require a change in the constitution.

A faculty committee already has been established on the Kearney State campus to study the implications of a merger.

Marcos Frees 454 Prisoners

Manila (UPI) — Philippine President Ferdinand E. Marcos has ordered the release of an additional group of 454 political prisoners jailed under martial law.

The government said the new releases bring the total number of prisoners freed to 1,076. A government spokesman said most of the prisoners were arrested after Marcos declared martial law in September, 1972.

College Trustees OK $1.5 Million Pay Hike Plan

A $1.5 million salary increase plan was approved Saturday by the Board of Trustees of the Nebraska State Colleges. It will now be recommended to the Legislature for the 1975-76 fiscal year.

The plan includes a provision that requires board approval of any salary increase of more than $2,000. It asks a $500 increase for all personnel, plus a 5% increase for support personnel and a 9% increase for professional personnel. This provides an average increase of 12.8% to support personnel and about 12% for professional staff.

The board also endorsed a plan to head off financial problems connected with bonds issued to build dormitories on state college campuses. Introduced by Robert Walker of Kearney, the proposal includes a constitutional change that would affect not only the four state colleges but also the University of Nebraska.

It calls for the creation of a state agency that would be able to take over the bonds, using state cigarette tax money in part.

Walker noted that some of the state colleges are having problems keeping the dorms occupied and generating enough revenue to keep pace with bond payments. There are enough reserves now to cover payments, he said, but these funds could run out.

Although the proposal would not alleviate the responsibility of paying off current bonds with dorm revenues, it would allow for flexibility in making payments if revenue should drop too much.

The trustees also voted to appeal to the Nebraska Supreme Court a case involving the firing of a Chadron State instructor. In the case of Dudley Chase, the Lancaster County District Court ruled invalid a board decision to uphold his firing.

Chase headed Chadron's one-man foreign languages department until the college decided to drop the program because of steadily declining enrollments.

Bomb Shelter Food Could Aid Starving

Hannibal, Mo. (UPI) — The Hannibal city council suggests bomb shelter supplies be used to feed starving nations.

"This food is needed in the bellies of human beings, not in the bins of forgotten storage sites," said Dr. E. W. Harder, president of the Chamber of Commerce.

The city council voted to make eight tons of high-carbohydrate candy and high-protein biscuits available, if it receives written verification from the state that the city can do so.

The food has been stored in Hannibal's 12 bomb shelters since the early 1960s as a precaution against nuclear attack.

Ambitious Plan For Conductors

Washington (UPI) — A major long-range program to develop directors for American symphony orchestras has been announced by the National Endowment for the Arts and the Exxon Corp. Six outstanding young conductors will be placed

Statehouse Perspective

By John Barrette

Exon Have the Fever?

For some time now there has been speculation in the public prints that Gov. J. J. Exon is catching a case of Potomac fever.

That peculiar malady strikes public officials with regularity and can linger for years. It is difficult to detect because the official contracting the disease almost always protests he has escaped its clutches.

Exon's latest pronouncements on the state of the state, however, make it seem that he's copying a favorite executive sport played in Washington.

Even though he is suspected of keeping one eye on the U.S. Senate races in Nebraska two and four years hence, the governor's latest talk of declining state revenue and the need for a tight budget is mindful of the high-handed presidential impoundment game.

Hollering

No one has hollered longer and harder about the impoundment of congressionally-appropriated funds by former President Nixon than has J. J. Exon.

The key to Exon's non-program on roads, for example, is his insistence that the lawsuit to dislodge impounded federal dollars must be pressed until Nebraska is victorious and receives the money it deserves.

Presidential action to impound funds appropriated by a Democratic Congress presumably was motivated by conservative impulses within former President Nixon.

Now comes the governor of Nebraska, a man who has projected a conservative image himself at the state level, but has also joined fellow Democrats in branding impoundment as wrong.

The message is different, however, when it concerns capital construction in Nebraska. Exon, citing a revenue crunch for the state, said he may seek a moratorium on new capital construction and halt projects authorized but not yet off the drawing boards.

Empty Till?

If Exon wants to try a halt on new construction by the state because he fears fiscal fallout that could drag Nebraska government toward an empty till, that is his prerogative.

Halting construction authorized in previous years both by the Legislature and the administration, however, would bear a suspiciously close resemblance to the federal practice of impoundment.

If the governor wants to avoid the charge that he is employing a double standard — a charge Republicans in Nebraska would use with a vengeance — he may have to look somewhere else to make financial ends meet.

Halting construction, or even delaying it while costs increase because of inflation, would open the gander in Nebraska up to scrutiny and comparisons regarding his criticisms of the goose who formerly resided in the White House.

Trial Balloon

Exon's comments could have been a trial balloon to see how a non-program on general construction would fly alongside his non-program on roads.

If those are the non-building blocks he is using to get to the U.S. Senate, perhaps Nebraskans should send Exon there when the time comes.

Exon could then get a look at frustration over impoundment from the lawmaker's perspective.

Nebraska's Credit Rating in Jeopardy?

Would the credit rating of the state of Nebraska be jeopardized if a controversial lease with an Omaha firm were canceled by the Unicameral?

At this stage, there is no firm answer to that question, but there are indications some officials are still thinking about the problem.

The lease is between the state and JADO Investment Co., a firm that built a three-story office building in Omaha to house regional Labor Dept. offices.

The rent of more than $130,000 a year is paid with federal funds, but must be appropriated each year by the Nebraska Legislature.

Under Fire

The lease came under fire prior to the Nov. 5 general election. A special subcommittee of the Appropriations panel held several hearings and the subcommittee chairman concluded the rent was too high.

Sidney Sen. Robert Clark, that chairman, thinks the lease can be canceled without jeopardizing the state's credit rating.

The lease is for 15 years, but contains a cancellation clause that can be invoked in any year by legislative refusal to appropriate rental funds.

The opinion that the state's credit rating would remain good despite cancellation may be the only area of agreement on JADO for Clark and Gov. J. J. Exon.

The Exon administration, because of the criticism by Clark and his panel, is currently soliciting bids from potential JADO competitors.

A Change?

Those bids are to be opened at the Lincoln office of the State Labor Dept. Dec. 20. If comparable property is available at a lower price and federal officials agree, Exon may urge a change.

Stan Matzke, director of the Exon administration's Administrative Services Dept., also discounts the possibility of a lowered credit capability.

"We have cancellation clauses in all of our leases," he said. "I don't see this as having a real effect on the credibility of the state of Nebraska."

Lincoln Sen. Shirley Marsh has raised the question regarding a lowered credit rating for Nebraska government.

She raised that question in an Appropriations subcommittee meeting earlier this month and again in a letter to Exon.

Exon, answering Sen. Marsh, referred to her missive calling competitive bidding at this juncture an "unprecedented action" that could "jeopardize the credit of the state."

His reply: "Not so senator." His reasoning was that leases in earlier administrations were canceled, apparently without credit problems.

Sen. Marsh, however, said such a cancellation has never come in the manner contemplated.

"The Legislature has not ever been requested to break a lease by not appropriating funds," she said.

"It was on this basis that I

Breast Exam Clinic Friday

thought a word of caution was in order."

'Couple of People'

She said she has talked with "a couple of people" in the bonding and investment business who said the state's credit should at least be considered before action is taken.

She said those people would rather not be quoted by name.

A representative of an investment firm in Lincoln contacted by a reporter, however, said he thinks cancellation of the lease would have no adverse impact on the state's credit.

"No," said the senior representative of the Lincoln firm who also requested anonymity, "that shouldn't hurt the state a bit."

He said projects such as the State Office Building in Lincoln and another in Omaha, although negotiated as lease arrangements, are "a different ball of wax."

'Not Reneging'

Bonds to finance such projects are sold in a competitive manner or, even if negotiated, are near market rates on interest.

Of possible JADO cancellation, he said: "They're not reneging on anything there because it has a one-year cancellation clause."

If the issue came down to possible cancellation by the Unicameral, bonding and credit specialists might be called in to testify on the record.

"I think that would be an excellent idea," Sen. Marsh said. Bond ratings regarding credit carry various ratings and in the public arena generally are high for a government entity such as the state.

The reason is such bonds have the taxing authority of government behind them. Nebraska's $16 million in road revenue bonds, for example, are rated "AA" or double A, the second highest rating possible.

21 Juvenile Cases Heard

The Separate Juvenile Court of Lancaster County heard 21 cases last week.

The court directed the probation officer to make disposition investigations in six of them and placed 13 juveniles on probation.

In the other cases, a girl was placed in a foster home and a three-year-old youth was placed in the physical custody of her mother but under the supervision of county welfare officials.

UNL Graduation Set Friday

A reception for approximately 1,000 first semester graduates at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln will be held at 3:45 p.m. Friday in the Centennial Room of the Nebraska Union.

Graduates, their parents and members of the faculty are invited to the reception, at which Chancellor James H. Zumberge will recognize students graduating with honors. Deans from each of the colleges will be on hand to greet students and their guests.

Diplomas will be distributed to most graduates in the Nebraska Union ballroom following the reception. Students in the School of Journalism, however, will receive their diplomas at a dinner to be held at 6 p.m. in Room 243 of the Union.

The dinner is for the 29 Journalism School graduates, their parents, and members of the School of Journalism faculty. Afterwards, an open house will be held at the School of Journalism in Avery Hall.

Aliens Must Tell Addresses in January

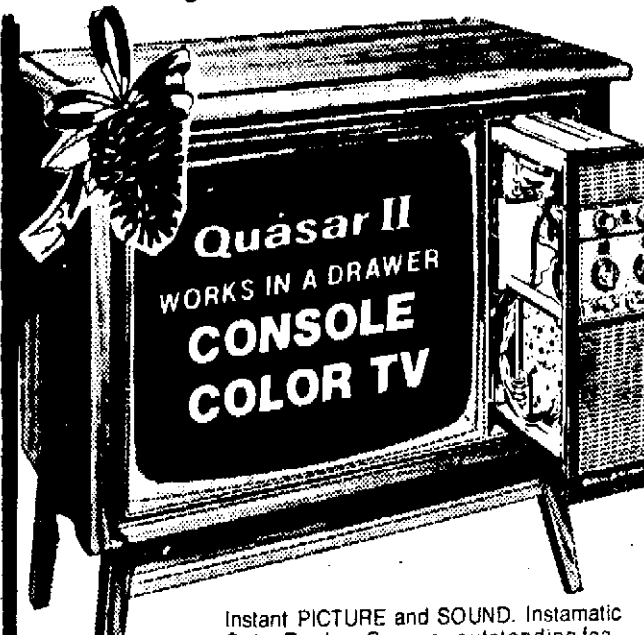

All aliens in the U.S., with few exceptions, must report their addresses to the government during the month of January, according to Lee T. Hoppes, U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Forms with which to make the report will be available at all Post Office and offices of the Immigration and Naturalization Service during the month of January, Hoppes said.

Wilmington, Del. (AP) — An early morning fire in a dormitory at Brandywine College sent at least 14 students and one fireman to area hospitals for treatment of injuries, including two girls who jumped from a third-story window.

'How-to-Do-Its' Currently Outselling Other Books

By Steve Kadel
Whether it's how to stuff a tidewater terrapin, bake Bavarian black bread or simply get rich quick, Lincolnitans want to learn.

Reports from local bookstores indicate "how-to-do-its" are out-selling all other categories, with price seemingly no object.

"Just tonight a man asked for a book on tanning hides," said Leslie Roper of Miller and Paine. "He wanted one on taxidermy, too, but we didn't have it."

Specialty books on houseplants, cooking, quilting and the revised Whole Earth Catalogue are also popular. Ms. Roper said quilting "is definitely the biggest craft going now."

Kids Asking
"There's a Sherlock Holmes revival. Young kids are asking for that now. People are generally buying more than we expected this season, but less than last year. I think people are going on one last buying spree before things get worse."

At most stores non-fiction is selling better than fiction, as usual, but the single top-seller is James Michener's novel Centennial.

Hahn Will Name Kontos As Deputy

Kandra Hahn, who was recently elected clerk of the district court, says she will appoint Ronald Kontos as the chief deputy in that office.

Kontos, 28, has been a deputy clerk of the district court for five years.

Hahn will be sworn into office Jan. 9. She defeated Otis Nelson in his bid for reelection in the general election last month.

cial. Set mostly in Colorado, it is a history of movement along the South Platte River.

"It isn't your general run of the mill fast-read fiction," said Linda Baker, Nebraska Bookstore manager.

Although that store has noticed an upswing in hard-cover fiction, which Mrs. Baker calls "unusual, considering our predominantly student market," paperbacks have been in demand at Miller and Paine.

An Exception
"You can't blame them," said Miller's Doris Leikam. "Customers are looking at a book's price now and putting it down more often than in the past."

Centennial, at $12.95, is an exception, she said.

Price apparently isn't important in the "how-to" market. Mrs. Behar said customers are glad to pay $30 or $40 for some technical books dealing with electronics or engineering.

"It used to be a rule of thumb that books over $10 weren't popular sellers. But "America" and "Civilisation" broke that barrier," she said.

Large art books have suffered a sales slump. One exception, at least at B. Dalton Bookseller, is Dali.

Still No. 1

The thirst for political non-fiction continues unquenched, with Watergate a money-maker for those with even a slightly new angle. Retailers say All the President's Men is still No. 1, with The Palace Guard by Dan

Dental College
Out-of-state Enrolment
Minimal

Out-of-state enrolment in the university of Nebraska College of Dentistry is still minimal, a breakdown of the four current classes indicates.

In fact, it is down, based on the 16 from South Dakota, Colorado, Arizona, Iowa, Kansas, Utah and Washington, in the senior class, compared to nine in the junior group and 12 each in the freshmen and sophomore classes.

The nine juniors come from Montana, Iowa and South Dakota. The 12 freshmen are from South Dakota and Wyoming. So are the dozen sophomore class members.

Dean Richard Bradley emphasizes that the classes will be held at their present strength — 56. There is no room physically for expanded enrolment at this time.

Also, in Dr. Bradley's opinion, increasing the size of "our classes just to obtain more federal money is a vicious circle. If it were continued, it would create monstrous problems for the college."

Dr. Bradley said it is to the credit of the university and the 1974 Legislature that they supported this concept.

"They awarded the college funds equal to that which we had previously received from federal grants," he said.

There would be no problem as far as applicants are concerned to expansion of the dental college, says Dr. Bradley. There are 18 applicants every year for a single spot in the 66-student limit.

Dr. Bradley also assured any alarmed dentist or citizen that the college is not even contemplating shortening its professional education to three years, as NU College of Medicine has done.

Education Log

Lincolnite Escapes Arrest in Moscow

Lincoln educator Ron Brandt almost came back from the Soviet Union with a criminal record.

Only charm and circumstances saved the smiling, affable Lincolnite associate superintendent for instruction from a crisis — qualities which often save educators from crises, come to think of it.

Brandt spent two weeks in the USSR. He thinks U.S. schools still do a better overall job even though surface discipline may be better and the kids get more rigid academic training.

His brush with the police state came when Brandt had extra time on his hands before leaving Moscow for Leningrad one Monday morning.

He took camera in hand and entered a meat market with long lines. Interesting, he thought. As he attempted to defog his lens, he felt a tap on his shoulder.

A policeman motioned him to the sidewalk. "I didn't have my phrase book with me," Brandt said. A language barrier developed. Arrival of a second policeman only added to the confusion.

So Brandt and one policeman got on a city bus (the Russian didn't pay) for a trip to the police station.

More confused conversation followed. The police superior was called in. Brandt offered "nyet" and "da" and a feeble "professor" or two.

He waved his hands furiously. That did no good. Finally someone noticed his passport said he was bound for Siberia (on the tour, that is).

They gave in and gave back his passport, apparently figuring that ex-Lincoln radio broadcasters turned administrators are harmless creatures.

Brandt happily went on his way. He assumes that Russians oppose taking pictures which might show people jamming up to get food in short supply.

"There is no such thing as false arrest" or a warning of rights in Russia, Brandt added. He saw a chase and attempted citizens' arrest in Russia and said he understands such actions are not unusual.

American Secrecy

Almost as difficult was this reporter's attempt to get salary figures out of the Omaha school system.

No police state was involved, just bureaucracy American style.

A Nebraska State School Board Assn. report on salaries excluded Omaha, so the reporter called the Lincoln Education Assn. They didn't have the figures.

Neither did the Lincoln public schools' administrative staff. "We don't exchange information with Omaha" was the reply.

Lincoln Education Assn. had suggested a call to the Nebraska State Education Assn. A clerk there didn't have the information, and a staff member never called back with it.

A public relations clerk at the Omaha Public Schools said she had been on the job but a month and didn't have the figures. Two other persons in the office were unavailable.

On the clerk's advice the business office was called. They referred this reporter instead to the personnel office — which finally confessed the starting salary is $7,900 and the top pay for a teacher with a doctorate is $17,380.

Pity the parent who tries to get similar information.

TKE Officer

Another Omahan, University of Nebraska at Omaha business college head Dr. William Muse, is a national officer of Tau Kappa Epsilon fraternity.

TKE, the largest of all U.S. social fraternities, is feeling a resurgence of interest in fraternities, Muse says.

Muse and others are concerned about recent deaths or injuries (not in Nebraska) resulting from hazing. TKE has had a long-standing ban on any injurious or demeaning activities.

It has reaffirmed that stand in a strongly-worded note to Nebraska and other chapters.

Bridge Corrosion
Said Preventable

Ames, Iowa (UPI) — The Iowa Highway Commission has developed a technique that could save millions of dollars by preventing salt from corroding and destroying bridges.

Robert Given, director of operations for the commission, says the technique is known as the "Iowa Method" and involves installation of a two-inch layer of specially formulated cement mix on the road surface of a bridge.

The layer prevents salt from seeping through the concrete in a bridge floor and eventually corroding the steel reinforcement.

Given said the Iowa Method is rapidly gaining a reputation with other state highway departments as the most workable and best method of combatting the problem, which has been costly across the nation.

Salt corrosion causes the road surface portion of bridges to break and crumble, Given said. However, he said the rate of salt penetration is slow. It takes about 8 to 15 years for the salt to reach the reinforcing steel.

American Beef
USDA Trade Complaint Dismissed

Washington — An administrative complaint charging American Beef Packers, Inc., of Omaha of violating fair trade practice requirements of the Packers and Stockyards Act has been dismissed, the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) announced Saturday.

The firm, which also does business at Fort Morgan, Colo., had been charged with failing to deliver meat as specified by contract to a Jersey City, N.J., firm.

USDA's Packers and Stockyards Administration said that the respondent has entered into a satisfactory monetary settlement with the purchaser of the meat, and has submitted affidavits from its treasurer and president outlining procedures it has established to avoid recurrence of the practice.

The agency said it is satisfied that the respondent has taken appropriate action to prevent a recurrence of the practice in issue, and believes that a formal order to discontinue the practice will not be required to ensure compliance with the Packers and Stockyards Act.

TREATY OF 1868

Articles of a Treaty made and concluded by and between Lieutenant General William T. Sherman, General William S. Harney, General Alfred H. Terry, General C. C. Chace, J. B. Henderson, Samuel G. Taylor, John B. Sanborn and Samuel J. Gayman, duly appointed Commissioners on the part of the United States and the different Bands of the Great Northern Indians by their Chiefs and Head men, whose names are here subscribed; they being duly authorized to do so by their promises.

Article I. From this day forward all war between the parties to this agreement shall forever cease. The Government of the United States does so and likewise solemnly pledges to keep it. The Indians thus give and they now pledge their hands to maintain it. If bad men among the whites or among other people, subject to the authority of the United States, commit any wrong upon the person or property of the Indians, the United States will upon proof made to the agent and forwarded to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs at Washington City, proceed at once to cause the offender to be arrested and punished according to the laws of the United States and also to reimburse the injured person for the loss sustained. If bad men among the Indians shall commit a wrong or depredation upon the person or property of anyone, white,

NATIONAL ARCHIVES

The portion of Nebraska (above) AIM hopes to regain for the Sioux includes principal towns, recreational areas and agricultural and ranch land covering about 14 million acres.

A reproduction (right) of the beginning of the Treaty of 1868 which gave, among other things, certain lands for "the undisturbed use and occupation" of the Sioux.

By Bill Kreifel
Nearly one-third of the state of Nebraska should be returned to the Indians, says Robert Yellow Bird of Gordon.
At least that's what the coordinator of the state's American Indian Movement (AIM) organization hopes will happen.

The Sioux Indian Nation, Yellow Bird claims, owns all of Nebraska north of the North Platte River and west of a line running southwest from northeast Keya Paha County to the city of North Platte.

Within these boundaries are such attractions as Lake McConaughy, Halsey National Forest and Ft. Robinson State Park.

The historic park is where the Indians will concentrate their initial efforts, according to Yellow Bird. If they are successful in getting court action to return that property to the Sioux, a large chunk of the state will be the next target.

Were the Indians to be successful, Yellow Bird says, all occupants of that part of the state, whether private citizens or government agencies, would have to leave the property they occupy from the Sioux Nation, presumably at rates based on actual land value plus improvements.

How would persons who have purchased land in the area and improved it recover their investment?

By putting the moccasins on the other foot.

They "would have to sue the federal government" for return of their investment, Yellow Bird says.

Yellow Bird acknowledges that the Indian effort to recover the land won't be easy, and he predicts a long battle. He believes the Indians will prevail.

Ft. Robinson

Yellow Bird says an AIM lawsuit involving ownership of Ft. Robinson will be ready for filing in two or three months.

The planned AIM action, he says, will raise the question of whether the possible expenditure of nearly $500,000 to further develop Ft. Robinson represents a wise investment or simply additional improvements on which Nebraskaans continually will be paying more money in the future.

Buoyed by two 1973 legal opinions — including one from Atty. Gen. Clarence Meyer — Game and Parks Commission Director Willard Barbee is confident of the propriety of the move. He says plans are proceeding to develop the historic outpost and its 25,800 acres of state-owned parkland into what many people believe will be the No. 1 outdoor tourist attraction in Nebraska.

Improvements under way or planned include a study and upgrading of water and sewer systems, construction of a swimming pool and renovation of buildings. (The Game Commission also has been advised by the federal Bureau of Land Management that exploratory oil drilling may be conducted at the fort.)

AIM Fights Sandhills Battle in Court

Barbee's confidence in moving forward stems from a pair of legal opinions issued after a similar dispute over ownership of the state park occurred in November 1972.

At that time, some 30 Indians, including Yellow Bird, occupied the fort's museum but later vacated it without causing any damage. As a result, Yellow Bird and Lefty Casados were sentenced to five days in jail.

Subsequently, the late Clarence Davis, Lincoln lawyer and former undersecretary and solicitor for the U.S. Interior Dept., offered the opinion that the land around Ft. Robinson never belonged to any Indian tribe.

Public Domain

After extensive research, Mr. Davis concluded that the land "was a part of the public domain of the United States going clear back to the Louisiana Purchase."

He provided that opinion in connection with state acquisition of additional parkland from the federal government in January 1973, bringing the state-owned total to 25,800 acres. Today, only the fort's timber reserve of some 11,000 acres remains under federal control.

There followed in June 1973 an opinion by Atty. Gen. Meyer holding that the Indians' claim to Ft. Robinson was rejected in a 1942 decision of the U.S. Court of Claims.

Furthermore, Meyer said, the U.S. Supreme Court refused to overturn the action of the lower court in turning down a Sioux claim for $739.1 million. That sum had been calculated as compensation due the Indians for U.S. takeover of 73.7 million acres of western land — including 14 million acres in northwest Nebraska — in alleged illegal abrogation of Indian treaties, including the well-known Treaty of 1868.

The Claims Court held that Congress passed a law, based on a new treaty signed in 1877, acquiring the land and making annual subsistence payments to the Sioux. Even though three-fourths of the adult male Indians never signed the 1877 treaty, as was required in the 1868 agreement, the Claims Court ruled, the congressional action was valid.

Through its action in 1877, the federal government acquired the gold-rich Black Hills of South Dakota and established freer white access to areas formerly established for "the undisturbed use and occupation" of the Sioux.

Less Signatures

The government's failure to obtain the specified number of Indian signatures on the 1877 treaty is still cited by AIM and others as the paramount reason they are entitled to benefits accruing from the Treaty of 1868.

Although the latter treaty established the northern border of Nebraska west of the Missouri River as the southern boundary of the Great Sioux Reservation, Yellow Bird says Sioux claims to all of northwest Nebraska are based on sections of the 1868 document that provide:

- The Indians "reserve the right to hunt on any lands north of North Platte . . . so long as the buffalo may range thereon in such numbers as to justify the chase."
- The country north of the North Platte River and east of the Big Horn Mountains "shall be held and considered to be unceded Indian territory, and . . . no white person or persons shall be permitted to settle upon or occupy any portion of the same; or without the consent of the Indians . . . to pass through the same."
- All U.S. military posts and roads leading to them and to the Territory of Montana "shall be closed."

NEBRASKA STATE HISTORICAL SOCIETY

U.S. Peace Commission members and representatives of Indian tribes at Ft. Laramie, negotiating the Treaty of 1868.

Yellow Bird admits that there aren't enough buffalo left "to justify the chase." But, he says, the Indians are legally entitled to roam on their old hunting grounds and to decide which white men may pass through or settle thereon.

He believes the 1942 Claims Court decision upholding the validity of the 1877 treaty was purely "a matter of money" because of the staggering amount the United States would otherwise have to pay.

Attitudes are different today, he feels, citing huge expenditures on such things as defense and space exploration which, he says, aren't needed. "We don't want the money, though. We just want our land back," he offered.

The AIM leader also pointed out that Sen. Ernest Chambers of Omaha plans to introduce in the 1975 Legislature a bill giving Ft. Robinson back to the Sioux.

'Lost Causes'

Chambers has predicted his bill will face an uphill struggle, saying: "I suppose this is another one of 'the lost causes' which people tend to bring to me when everything else has been tried." He added, however, that it is his understanding the land in Dawes and Sioux counties belongs to the Indians under terms of the Treaty of 1868.

Also fueling the Indians' fire, Yellow Bird indicated, was the Ft. Robinson Centennial Commission's rejection of all proposals offered by Indians concerning Indian participation in last summer's event.

After a meeting in Chadron, the Indians suggested permanent establishment of a 1,000-acre "mini reservation" where such things as an Indian cultural school and a clinic for Indians living in the Panhandle could be constructed.

The Indians also were interested in establishing a junior college there, "and we wanted one of the (fort) buildings for a cultural museum and center that would be run from an Indian point of view," Yellow Bird said.

All of these propositions were rejected, he said, along with a request for a tent arrangement where the Indians could sell native arts and crafts.

"They (commission members) just wanted the Indians to dance for the tourists," Yellow Bird declared angrily. "We just wanted 1,000 acres when we talked to them first, but now we're going to take the whole damn thing."

Based on information from the Indian Claims Commission in Washington, AIM's chances of success in that venture don't appear too great.

Commission attorney Donald Hyde says that of the numerous attempts by Indians to regain possession of lands, he knows of only two cases where that occurred. One, he said, involved some 48,000 acres in New Mexico returned to the Taos Indians. The other involved 21,000 acres in Washington State given back to the Yakimas.

Most claims are for money settlements, he observed, and in that regard, the Indians have fared much better. Of 613 claims filed with the commission, 249 have been awarded in amounts totaling $533.7 million, 184 have been rejected and 180 are now pending.

Among the latter, Hyde noted, are two claims of the Sioux Nation: one for the Black Hills and the other for some 48 million additional acres of land which the Indians say was taken from them wrongfully. Hyde says he believes the land would include the portion of Nebraska about which Yellow Bird is talking.

The Claims Commission attorney said no specific dollar amount was requested in the latter claim, nor has the commission arrived at any preliminary estimate. In the Black Hills case, however, the commission found that the action of the United States in acquiring the land in 1877 was unilateral, and it awarded the Sioux $17,640,000 plus interest that would have accrued over the years.

Hyde said it has been estimated that this might bring the total to $100 million, less any legitimate claims by the government regarding things it has provided Indians during that period. Because of action by Congress, expenses for food, rations and provisions may not be included in any attempt by the government to gain settlement credit.

The government, he added, is appealing the commission's ruling in the matter to the U.S. Court of Claims.

Hyde noted that an earlier Black Hills claim made by the Sioux was rejected in Claims Court in 1923 but the Indians were permitted to raise the issue again because the law that created the Claims Commission in 1947 "provided broader remedies" to them.

Reopening Doors

It is for that reason as well, he indicated, that the door which Atty. Gen. Meyer believed was closed by the 1942 Claims Court action could again be opened.

Hyde pointed out that if AIM does sue to gain ownership of Northwest Nebraska, it would be directly with the U.S. Court of Claims. He explained that all matters being adjudicated by the Claims Commission had to be filed by August 1951 and that after these cases are completed, the commission will cease to exist.

Yellow Bird says he believes impetus for the suit also will come from a hearing on the Treaty of 1868 which will begin before U.S. District Judge Warren Urbom of Lincoln on Monday. The central issue of the Urbom hearing doesn't involve an Indian quest to obtain title to lands, however, but deals with who has jurisdiction on the Pine Ridge Reservation.

Because of that fact, Ken Fields, a member of the government team at the upcoming hearing, says he doesn't feel the 1942 Claims Court action will have much bearing on the case.

More important, he believes, will be a 1912 U.S. Supreme Court decision which held that Indian nations are dependent nations and that Congress can deal with them as such. Fields noted that the 1912 opinion, which also involved a question of property rights, additionally established that in construction of the law, "you must favor the Indians."

"Where an ambiguity exists," he said, "it must be decided in their favor."

Police Pay Incentive Drops Orange, Calif., Crime Rate

Patrolman Bob Reifeiss (left) and master patrolman Bill Yackle are members of the Orange, Calif., police force which is paid bonuses for every drop in crime in that city.

Orange, Calif. (AP) — Crime may be increasing elsewhere, but in this sunny suburb of Los Angeles the bad guys are losing ground, squashed by an unusually zealous police force.

What secret weapon is behind this year's 16.28% dive in Orange's crime rate?

Any local officer knows. It's money.

Since January, the city has been rewarding its policemen with pay raises for each drop in the crime rate. The bonus increases have meant as much as $80 a month added to base pay.

"It's working indeed," says police Chief Merrill Duncan who reports receiving hundreds of letters from departments across the country and abroad inquiring about the innovative program.

The program's success is dramatic compared with the two cities that border Orange. Santa Ana's crime rate has jumped 17.1% in the past year and Anaheim has had 17.6% more crime.

Neither city plans to adopt Orange's wage incentive program, unique in the nation. Duncan says because of the program officers from other departments are showing interest in transfers to Orange.

"We're attracting experienced men," the chief says. "There's a waiting list of people wanting to come on the force."

But Duncan adds that with the crime rate down there is little need to add to the present complement of 116 men — about average for an American city of Orange's size. The city has 19.6 square miles and a population of 85,000. So far, the city has paid $80,000 in bonus increases to policemen, far less, Duncan says, than it would cost to hire more personnel.

The increases remain a permanent part of each man's salary, even if crime in Orange starts to rise again.

The highest ranking officers in Orange's department — lieutenant, captain and chief — do not participate in the wage incentive program. They are classified as managerial personnel and are exempt from the bonus.

The wage incentive program was born during bargaining with the city over police salaries in 1973.

"They kept telling us how they were the best police force around," says city spokesman Gifford Miller. "We wanted them to prove it."

So the city decided to add 1% to salaries for every 3% reduction in rape, robbery, burglary and auto theft, the most prevalent crimes in this middle class community 36 miles from Los Angeles. The program would not encourage bounty hunting because arrests would not be rewarded. It was a proposal to stop crime before it happens.

With the motivation of increased pay, policemen have devised many preventive measures. Officer Emil Galbraith, a training officer in the community services division, outlined some of the new tactics:

—A program called "The Watchful I" teaches crime prevention to housing development and apartment dwellers through films and lectures by policemen. The officers demonstrate security devices and urge residents to call police whenever they think a crime might occur.

—The "neighborhood officer" concept has been reinstated, allowing an individual officer to stay assigned to the same neighborhood indefinitely. "He learns where his problems are and is able to take precautions," says Galbraith.

—To stop auto thefts, police prowls parking lots looking for unlocked car doors and open windows. In such cars, they drop a flyer reading, "If I were a thief, I would have stolen your unlocked car." A similar practice is employed at unlocked garages. Owners find a flyer reading, "If I were a thief I would have carted away half your garage."

—The police department has proposed a bill to the city council which would require builders to install better locks on houses and apartments.

—Officers are taking time to talk to apartment managers about installing brighter bulbs and informing tenants about the crime prevention program.

The 16.28% drop in Orange's four major crimes contrasts with a 7% rise in all major crime in California during the first six months of 1974, the latest figures available. Only one other California city — San Francisco — has reported a crime drop this year. It was 6%. Nationwide, the FBI reports that major crime has increased more than 15% this year.

Galbraith said there were 2,400 rapes, robberies, burglaries and auto thefts in Orange last year compared with nearly 2,100 this year through November. Other types of crime were negligible both years, the police reported.

Until this year, crime had risen annually in Orange in recent years.

Ne Win Maintains Burmese Control in Face of Rioting

By The Associated Press

Long-haired youths jammed barber shops Saturday in Burma's capital of Rangoon, seeking to escape on-the-spot haircuts by soldiers. It was one of the few remaining signs of President Ne Win's tough crackdown on antigovernment rioting last week.

Travelers from Rangoon said the shabby capital of 2 million was returning to normal. Cars and pedestrians were venturing onto the streets. Fewer soldiers with fixed bayonets were visible.

What soldiers remained, mostly from rural districts, had taken to forays into city buses to pull off long-haired youths for summary haircuts. One intersection was reported almost covered with shorn black hair.

Burmese sources and Western diplomats agreed that through the rioting Ne Win retained the almost absolute control he has exercised for a dozen years and that nothing short of death will unseat him.

Westerners generally felt the government was more restrained than expected in its swift and violent martial law repression of two days of violence over funeral plans for Ne Win's old enemy, former United Nations Secretary-

General U Thant.

They pointed out that the admitted toll of nine dead and 74 wounded by soldiers was lower than in previous disorders.

Last week's violence broke out after government agents seized Thant's remains from students and Buddhist monks, destroyed the makeshift mausoleum they had built for Thant and reburied the body downtown.

Diplomats said it was the spark that touched off simmering unrest over economic conditions, and diplomatic dispatches reaching Bangkok, capital of neighboring Thailand, said the government was facing a food crisis that could unleash a popular uprising.

Observers pointed out that Ne Win's army of about 140,000 men is trying to control a dozen insurgencies in the countryside. This leaves little time for suppressing unrest in the 30-60 per cent of Burma's territory reported to be under government control.

Still, there were rumors that 800 protesters rallied at a pagoda in Mandalay, northern Burma. In the capital, the dissident students and monks elicited massive public support.

A response to the trouble also was reported in the marketplace. Since the dissidents captured U Thant's body on Dec. 5, rice prices in Rangoon markets have doubled and prices of other foodstuffs have risen by 50 per cent, according to reports in Bangkok. The price of a gallon of gasoline sold on the black market jumped from $3.50 to $5.

As it embedded U Thant's coffin in tons of cement pending completion of a new mausoleum, the government ordered food shipments from the countryside to resume and riot-sacked markets to reopen.

Despite the government's corrective actions, some diplomats and observers in Thailand feared the recent events will make it even more defensive and suspicious. This would reverse a recent trend away from Burma's traditional international reclusion.

Others noted that the government-controlled radio did not blame any organized entity for the disorders, an apparent sign that momentum and economic necessity will preserve the trend away from isolation.

MONTGOMERY
WARD

Washington Perspective
By Andy Montgomery

No Punch in Passage

Washington — The Senate, on Nov. 25, approved by voice vote an amendment by Democrat Dick Clark of Iowa.

It was simple and direct, urging the U.S. government to give the highest priority in allocation of funds under our food aid program — P.L. 480 — to those nations most seriously affected by the current food shortages.

Unfortunately, the amendment was meaningless, hardly worth the $2,502 the taxpayers had to shell out for printing the nine pages of debate and supporting documentation in the official Congressional Record.

Eight days later, the Senate adopted a sense of the Senate resolution introduced by Illinois Republican Charles Percy.

The resolution was intended "to express the sense of the Senate that . . . the United States should cooperate fully and energetically with other nations to implement effective national and international policies on food production, storage and distribution and on population growth."

It also stated that "the United States should contribute to meeting the immediate threat of famine where it exists, should contribute its fair share to helping poor countries increase their food production . . ."

Printing Costs

The printing costs were not as great, only $371, but the resolution was just as much an exercise in rhetoric as the Clark amendment.

The reason: In neither case did the Senate action bind the Ford administration to increase food shipments overseas.

Both Clark and Minnesota Democrat Hubert Humphrey, another sponsor, wanted to put teeth in the amendment, specifying that at least one million tons of additional food aid would be diverted to needy nations.

But they knew too well that the present mood of the Congress and the administration doomed such efforts, forcing them to settle for making a public record only. The Percy resolution was even less meaningful since it lacks the force of law.

A between-the-lines reading of the debate points up the dilemma confronting the new 94th Congress which convenes in January: Whether to continue its food aid programs and, if so, how much should the United States contribute?

Its resolution will have a direct bearing on the Nebraska farmer who exports much of his production.

Programs To Be Reviewed

The only thing certain is that the new Congress will review the programs and establish new guidelines for its future operations. Beyond that, it's anyone's guess.

The key to continuation appears to center on the capital-rich (read: oil-producing) nations and their willingness — or unwillingness — to help foot the costs of feeding poorer nations.

This debate will spill over onto the 94th's plans to revamp the present national farm programs, again affecting the Nebraska farmer.

The shape of the controversy to come was pointed up in recent statements by Humphrey and conservative Republican Sen. Clifford Hansen of Wyoming.

"It is simply a question of what policy we are willing to pursue as a government," Humphrey asserted. "Are we willing to share a part of our reserves for humanitarian assistance instead of using entirely all of it for commercial exports?"

"There apparently is a belief in this country," declared Hansen, "that the United States can feed the world. We have the greatest agricultural production in earth's history. And we have the capability to feed a great part of the world."

'Not for Free'

"But we cannot do it for free — any longer."

It would be an injustice to say that Humphrey — or Clark, for that matter — believes the United States can or should feed the world — he doesn't. It also would be unfair to finger Hansen as uncaring and mercenary — he isn't.

Both feel other nations have an obligation to help out. But the issue boils down to this: How much over the halfway mark should the United States go if others turn their backs? And can we afford to go that extra mile?

Oly Recycling In High Gear

Leopold F. Schmidt, 34, Olympia Brewing Co. president, said the West Coast's largest brewing firm paid out more than $4.7 million in its "total-container" recycling activity from Jan. 1 through Oct. 31.

Volume for the nine months represents about 210 million glass containers and 20 million aluminum and steel cans, he said.

"Six out of every 10 Oly glass containers are now finding their way back to the brewery here (Olympia, Wash.) for recycling. Our new $2 million bottle recycling plant, which began service in May, has already achieved break-even volume," according to Schmidt

Venezuela Hunting Witches, Warlocks

Caracas (UPI) — Venezuelan police have launched a campaign called "Operation Devil" aimed at rounding up hundreds of witches and warlocks who extort money from the superstitious poor.

One raid at a suspected witchcraft center in the capital of this oil-rich nation turned up a live 12-foot-long snake used in casting spells on customers seeking help.

Other material seized in the raids included love potions, herbs, tobacco, pillows stuck with pins, cologne water, charms, crucifixes and paintings and reproductions of various personages venerated in Venezuela.

Spokesmen for the organized crime division said police expect to arrest some 300 witches and warlocks in the campaign. They said the practitioners mainly operate in the slums and make money from the poor who go to them to cure ailments, solve romantic problems and rid them of spirits.

The first raid resulted in the arrest of a man and two women who said the potions they prepared were for the prevention of cancer.

Although Venezuela is nominally a Catholic country, there are many believers in the occult. Cigar-smoking high priestess Beatriz Veit Ane claims one out of every 12 Venezuelans is a believer in the Maria Lionza cult she heads.

A likeness of Maria Lionza has been found at most of the raided witchcraft centers. According to legend, Maria Lionza was an Indian princess with supernatural powers who escaped from the Spanish conquerors.

Patty Hearst

Mrs. Randolph Hearst

Letter: Patty, Come Home!

San Francisco (UPI) — Patricia Hearst's mother pleaded with her fugitive daughter Saturday to give herself up and come home for Christmas — in a front-page letter in the family's San Francisco Examiner.

"I spend many hours a day praying that God will inspire you to come back to us — hopefully, for Christmas," said Mrs. Randolph A. Hearst in a typewritten letter reproduced in the newspaper's Sunday edition.

"It breaks my heart that you cannot see that you will have no real problems if you will only come in of your own accord. It is so safe and simple. All you have to do is go to any lawyer, radio or television station or newspaper."

Patricia, 20, the granddaughter of publishing empire founder William Randolph Hearst, has been missing since last June with the two remaining known members of the Symbionese Liberation Army which kidnapped her Feb. 4.

In April she made the shocking announcement that she was joining her captors in one of the most bizarre cases in U.S. history.

Her captors demanded a $2 million food ransom, and after the Hearsts complied Patricia was photographed participating in an armed bank robbery in San Francisco with the kidnapers.

Joblessness Probably Put More Students in Colleges

NEW YORK (AP) — An unexpected surge in college attendance pushed nationwide enrollment past 10 million this year for the first time in history. The poor job market was a factor, say educators, but many admit they don't know why so many people showed up on campus.

The U.S. Office of Education says 10,137,065 students enrolled this fall on the nation's 3,000 university, college and junior college campuses, an increase of 5.5 per cent over last year's 9.6 million enrollment.

An increase of 1.3 per cent had been forecast by the National Center for Educational Statistics, a federal agency.

"I don't quite know why this has happened," said Frederic Ness, president of the Association of American Colleges. "One reason may be the economy. If jobs are hard to find, and a family still has some money, there is some inclination for the student to go to school."

"I really don't know why more kids are in college," said Ralph Huitt, executive director of the National Association of State Universities and Land-Grant Colleges, "but I appreciate it."

This fall's enrollment surge came after several years of declining enrollment increases. It was largely the result of more women and part-time students on campus, and a booming 11.6 per cent increase in junior college attendance.

The upturn comes at a time when colleges are contemplating substantial enrollment drops in the next decade. As the population swell produced by the post-World War II baby boom moves past the college years, officials in some states are predicting the large-scale closing of private colleges and consolidation of public campuses in the 1960s.

April Dates

NEW YORK (UPI) — Tennessee Williams' "Cat On A Hot Tin Roof," initially revived at the Anta theater for a limited engagement, has extended the run.

Enrollment was up 6.3 per cent this fall on public campuses and 3 per cent at private colleges. The Office of Education had predicted enrollment increases of 1.4 per cent at public colleges and 0.9 per cent at private institutions.

In addition to the crumbling job market, college officials said the unusual enrollment might have resulted from stepped up student recruitment, the increasing availability of tuition loans and grants in some states, and the establishment of new career-oriented courses.

The return of students who dropped out in recent years accounts for part of the increase, said Morgan Odell, executive director of the Association of Independent California Colleges and Universities.

"In a sense we have a windfall with these people coming back who dropped out when that was the in thing to do," said Odell.

What many educators hope is that this year's figures represent a renewed judgment by young people and their tuition-paying parents that college is worth the effort and money. Since 1969, the percentage of 18- and 19-year-olds attending college had declined from 50.3 per cent to 43 per cent, a reversal of an historic trend of ever-increasing college attendance.

"My own instinct is that it represents a judgment by American parents that a new car is worth very little in 10 years while a decent university education for their kids increases in value," said Stephen Trachtenberg, a vice president of Boston University.

Battle of Bulge Still Vivid Memory

Bastogne, Belgium (UPI) — Even today in the Ardennes Forest, rusted tank turrets and gun emplacements lie only half hidden in the thin underbrush.

These corroded souvenirs, plus the still-vivid memories of the soldiers and civilians who went through it, are all that is left on this 30th anniversary of the Battle of the Bulge.

The Bulge pitted more than a million American and German soldiers in a battle that began at 5:30 a.m. on Dec. 16, 1944, with a thunderous German attack across the 85-mile "ghost front" dividing Luxembourg and Belgium from Germany. It ended Jan. 28, 1945, when the Germans finally fell back behind this line again.

Hitler code named the attack "Watch on the Rhine" and planned it as the counterattack that would reverse the six-month Allied push from Normandy, drive a German wedge all the way to the North Sea and split the British-American alliance.

At its worst, the German attack pushed a huge wedge into American lines, advancing as far as 55 miles to Celles, Belgium — more than halfway to the sea. But its failure meant the failure of Germany. V-E Day came four months later.

The Battle of the Bulge left nearly 50,000 dead — 35,000 Germans, 12,000 Americans and 2,000 Luxembourgers and Belgians caught in its path.

Great commanders — Bradley, Eisenhower, Montgomery, Patton, Von Rundstedt and Von Manteuffel — led it.

Famous soldiers — Creighton Abrams, Maxwell Taylor, Matthew Ridgway, James Gavin — fought in it.

Obscure towns — St. Vith and Vielsalm, Wiltz and Clervaux — are forever linked with it.

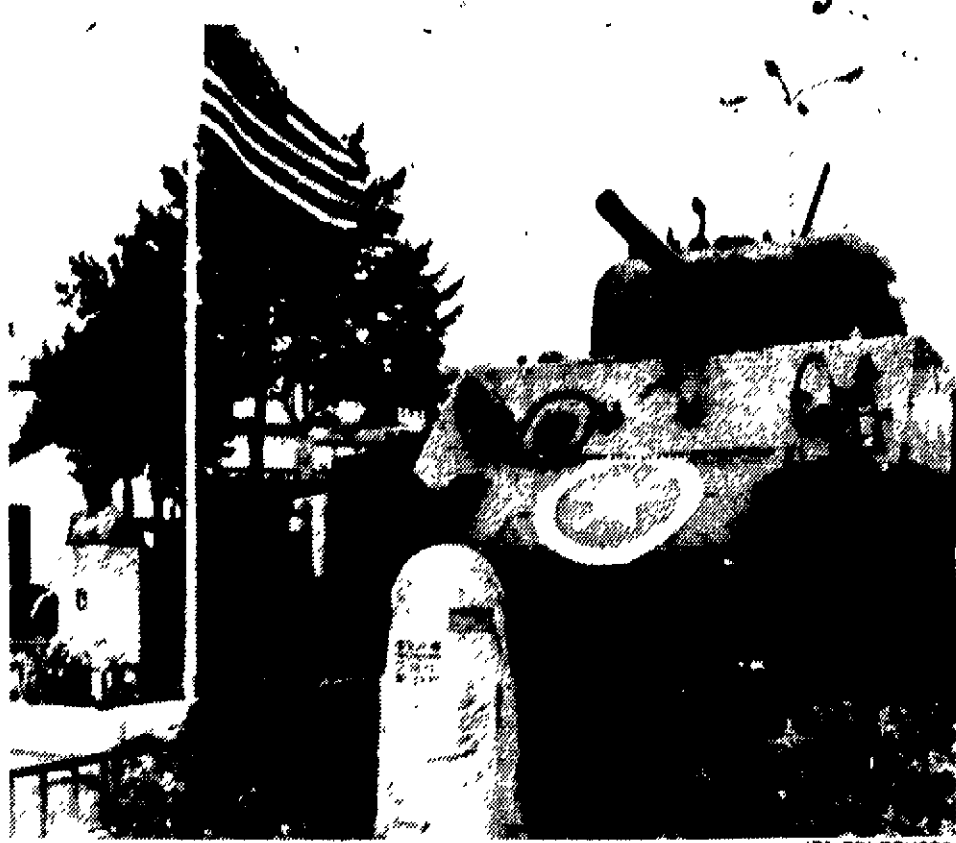

For many, the Bulge is memorable for Bastogne, capital of the Belgian Ardennes, and the courage of its defenders, who withstood a six-day siege and two weeks of German artillery battering. At the depth of the siege, the Germans demanded surrender and the U.S. commander in Bastogne, Brig. Gen. Anthony McAuliffe, issued his famous one-word reply.

"Nuts."

"But what does it mean?" the Germans asked Col. Joseph Harper, who delivered it.

"Go to hell," Harper explained.

There are few scars now — just mementoes and memories.

A Sherman tank, American flag and bust of Brig. Gen. Anthony McAuliffe mark Place General McAuliffe at Bastogne, Belgium.

Bastogne has made the siege a tourist industry. The former main square, leveled in the bombardment, is Place General McAuliffe. Most of it is a parking lot, with a Sherman tank and a bust of McAuliffe in the corner and a "nuts museum" on its fringe.

"When the Americans first liberated Bastogne in September, may sisters painted welcome signs in black paint on the walls," recalled Joss Heintz, son of a Bastogne druggist. "When the Bulge began, they began scraping them off, because the neighbors said we would all be shot if the Germans ever saw it."

Heintz, 48, is a Bastogne newspaperman and the town's leading historian of the battle. One of his sisters is his devoted assistant.

Nicolas Engle, whose Cafe Schumann stood at a strategic crossroads near Bastogne, remembers Christmas Day, 1944.

"Christmas was a night full of shells," he recalled sourly. "We left and hid at another house for two nights and a day. When we came back, there were as many dead as trees. For three months we slept without a roof, windows or doors."

Engel, 78, is slow of speech and reluctant to reminisce. His son was killed in Russia, fighting for the Germans. The cafe was rebuilt and Engel has a special table in the corner, beside the bar, where no one bothers him. Bastogne is building a new museum and hopes McAuliffe, now in delicate health, will return next year to help dedicate it. Outside the town stands the Mardasson, a beautiful pentagonal monument dedicated to "The Memory of the American Liberators."

Fresh flowers and wreaths arrive regularly at the Mardasson. One recently was a gift of the "Paratroopers Fraternity" of Aachen, Germany.

The German attack stretched from Monsechau, Germany, on the Belgian border, in the north, to Echternach, Luxembourg, in the south. One reason it eventually failed was the five-day initial stand by defenders at St. Vith, Belgium.

The battle destroyed St. Vith, utterly. It is a bustling, clean, prosperous market town now, but in a region of 200-year-old villages, St. Vith is all new. Nothing older than 30 years stands there.

Luxembourg has recovered more gracefully. There is a Bulge memorial in Ettlebruck. Bulge museums in Wiltz and Clervaux, and active Bulge Society.

Clervaux, a beautiful town now, suffered terribly from the defense put up by the U.S. 28th Division. By the time Germans captured it, much of Clervaux was destroyed, including the 12th century castle once owned by the De Lannoi family, ancestors of Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

The castle, like the rest of Clervaux, is rebuilt now and houses the city hall, a bar and a Bulge museum.

Of all the Bulge memorials, the most hallowed are to cemeteries — one American, one German — just east of Luxembourg City. At the American graveyard, 5,076 GIs lie beneath white crosses and Stars of David. Among them are the bodies of 101 unidentified soldiers — and of Patton, who died in an auto accident later in 1945.

Ford Foundation to Cut Grants 50%

(c) New York Times
New York — The Ford Foundation, the wealthiest philanthropic institution in the country announced Saturday that it would reduce its annual grants over the next four years from $208 million to $100 million.

McGeorge Bundy, the foundation's president, said "important" programs in each of the foundation's six areas of interest "will be put out of business" as a result of the cut, but the foundation would remain active in each of the fields. The fields are international affairs, national affairs, education and research, humanities and the arts, resources and the environment, and communications.

The foundation's trustees, Bundy said, have not yet decided on which programs to reduce or eliminate, but all current commitments to grantees, he added, will be honored.

Bundy had said three months ago the foundation, squeezed by falling capital markets and mounting inflation, was considering a cut of as much as 50% in its annual grants. However, the decision to impose such a reduction was not made by the foundation's trustees until their quarterly meeting on Thursday and Friday.

Bundy said Saturday the trustees wanted to "get down to a level of grant support that we can sustain indefinitely." But he said the new "target figure" of $100 million was subject to increases or decreases if economic conditions affecting the foundation changed significantly.

Although the market value of the foundation's assets declined from $3 billion to $2 billion last year, total returns on the foundation's diversified investment portfolio — dividends and interest plus capital gain or loss — were somewhat higher than Standard and Poor's 500-stock index.

But Bundy said a critical factor in the foundation's decision to impose a 50% cut in grant expenditures was the desire of the trustees to "move away from our long-standing practice of using a portion of our capital assets for annual grants."

Planners to Consider Proposed Health Pact

The City-County Planning Commission is scheduled Wednesday to discuss a proposed agreement of cooperation between the commission and the Southeast Nebraska Health Planning Council.

The agreement is aimed at insuring closer cooperation between the two agencies, since the planning commission has been serving as the clearinghouse for federal applications, as required by the Office of Management and Budget.

Under the plan, the health planning council will submit its plans to the planning commission for review, while the commission will request the City Council's comments on any planning matters affecting the environment. The council will comment on the health implications of such a project.

The commission also is slated to hold public hearings on:

- Application by Rollie Woodruff for adjustment of the front yard, at 135 S. 27th.

- Preliminary plat of Country Acres 1st Add., south of Old Cheney Rd. and west of S. 56th.
- Preliminary plat of Highland North Industrial, at Fletcher and south of the Kawasaki plant.

- Proposed sale of property, at 43rd and Huntington.

- Proposed county minimum standards for acceptance for maintenance of roads and streets.

- Application of the planning director for a change of zone from C Multiple to A-2 Single Family and from C Multiple to B-Two Family, between Harrison and Park Ave. and 10th and 11th.

Frontier Says Passengers Off In November

Denver, Colo. (UPI) — Frontier Airlines said Saturday that November was the first month this year the airline failed to surpass 1973 performance levels.

Frontier said after adjusting for unusual traffic gains from the 1973 Trans World Airlines strike, Frontier registered a 4% decline in revenue passenger miles last month, compared with 1973.

So far this year, however, revenue passenger miles were ahead of 1973, Frontier said, with more than 1.2 million for the first 11 months, compared with 1.19 million miles in 1973.

Fair Loses $500,000

Spokane, Wash. (UPI) — Season ticket holders visited the Expo '74 world's fair three times as often as fair officials anticipated, but the fair still wound up $500,000 in the red.

Outgoing general manager Peter Spruney said fair attendance exceeded five million, but the figure was inflated by season ticketholders who visited the fair an average of 15 times, instead of five times as anticipated.

Young Maestros At Work

The orchestra moved as fast as the kids — almost — during an appearance Thursday by the St. Paul Chamber Orchestra at Mae Morley Elementary School, 68th & Monterey.

With skill and sensitivity, the orchestra shifted its grouping and its program to suit various moods.

During the finale some students tried their hand at leading an orchestra. Conductor John DeMain turned the podium over to these young maestros — with some help occasionally — so they could really get the feel of a Scott Joplin turn-of-the-century ragtime melody.

ment, but the Lincoln-Lancaster Health Dept and its board have some suggestions, too.

These relate primarily to problems in having solid wastes (including garbage) removed from various properties throughout the city.

Jan Gauger, county commissioner on the health board, recommended that proposed legislation to correct this deficiency be forwarded to the City Council for its consideration.

The proposal would permit primary class cities to remove garbage, refuse and other solid waste material from the premises and provide for an assessment against the property owner for such removal, Environmental Health Division Chief Orville DeFram told the board.

DeFram said the unsanitary conditions continue to exist because Lincoln has no legal or physical means to remove solid wastes after due notice.

"Neighborhood tempers occasionally flare up and the city is placed in an unnecessarily difficult position of authoritative service," said DeFram.

A panel of judges now faces the task of selecting from the many nominations those Lincolns to be honored Jan. 22 as the Jaycees Outstanding Young Individuals.

Those nominated must be between the ages of 19 and 35 and have an outstanding record of civic contributions. They must also possess the qualities of professional success, leadership and moral conviction.

Ceremonies for the awards dinner will be held at the Lincoln Hilton.

The City Council is expected Monday to set the mayor's salary for the new four-year term beginning in May.

There is a proposal before the Council to set the salary figure at $28,000.

At present the mayoral salary is $26,875 annually.

Other items on the Council's agenda during its 1:30 p.m. Monday meeting include

Their Own Kind of Music

It was during a prayer when heads were bowed and eyes were closed that little Russell Blackmer Jr. squirmed out of his Sunday seat.

He crawled under the rows of church pews, made his way to the church organ and plopped himself up next to the organist.

That was years ago and miles away, back in Worcester, Mass.

Later, Blackmer found his way to Lincoln. Now, he sits every Sunday, and almost every day, at the mighty pipe organ of Lincoln's First Presbyterian Church.

He's one of four professional music directors who chose to make music fulltime in a Lincoln church after graduating from the School of Sacred Music at Union Theology Seminary in New York City.

Besides Blackmer, there's Jack Levick at First Plymouth Congregational and Ken and Ellen Hart at Westminster Presbyterian.

Levick, a 30-year-old bachelor found his way to First Plymouth in 1972 after working as a "wandering minstrel" in a Virginia grade school.

With no place to call his own, music teacher Levick loaded a cart with records and song books and moved from crowded classroom to crowded classroom.

Meanwhile, the Harts, both 34, found their way to Westminster back in 1971, "anxious to be a team and terribly anxious to try a job where we could be together," he said.

Hart had come from nearby Ottumwa, Iowa, his wife from faraway New Zealand.

As a team, they take turns playing the organ, divide the choirs, accompany one another and share babysitting duties for their infant son, Justin.

"It's unusual," Hart explained, "for Ellen and me to be apart four or five hours a day."

"We love being together and don't like it when we're apart," Mrs. Hart added. "If we have a day when we're not together much, we end up talking until two or three in the morning."

Together

Such togetherness seems to have worked for the Harts, throughout five years of marriage.

Why? "Love," the husband responded quietly, smiling.

"We do our best to understand one another, to be sensitive to one another," he said.

"There's never the problem of coming home at the end of the day and your spouse not understanding what you've been through," he confided. "We've both been through it."

Blackmer, Levick and the Harts tell different stories about how they got into church music, how they made it to Lincoln and how they handle their jobs.

But they share a genuine love for the organ and an absorbing commitment to the sacred music that explodes from the organ pipes.

"Somehow music should enhance the worship experience," First Presbyterian's Blackmer commented.

He said there are great possibilities for church music in Lincoln, basically because of talent from three local colleges.

Really Caring

For instance, he said, it is easier to assemble a quality orchestra in Lincoln than on the East Coast. There, professional musicians "could care less about church music" and merely play their instruments, take their money and go home.

"Out here, people are more willing to do a good job for the church," he added.

First Plymouth's Levick, meanwhile, had some other thoughts about church music. "Its heritage is second to none. Some of the greatest music in the world was written for the church," he explained.

Like God, church music moves people in mysterious ways, Levick continued.

"Some are moved by music's artistic nature. Some are moved by its emotional impact. And others are moved just because they like the sound."

As Levick put it, "Never underestimate the power of the Holy Spirit working through music."

Without singing, Levick said, Protestant congregations would have died years ago because "music is the only way the man in the pew can express himself in a service."

Ecumenical Role

In Levick's life, music also has played an ecumenical role. Reared a Presbyterian, the young organist has made music in Lutheran, Episcopalian, Methodist and Congregational United Church of Christ structures.

When Hart, meanwhile, talked about music, he talked about art and claimed it "is food for the soul."

"My first commitment is to the arts," he explained. "My commitment to religion is through the arts."

One-half of the Hart team, saw church music as an educational experience. In addition to performing, the musical groups learn liturgy of the church, history of worship and a repertoire of new songs.

Mrs. Hart, the other half of the team, saw music as "the creative spirit working through bodies," a spirit she believes comes from God.

"There are a lot of things we dabble with in this world that don't last. But things like music and art go on forever."

It's possible, she admitted, that the church and society don't give high priorities to music and arts.

"It's easy for the average man to think of music as something you can put off, something you can have if you can afford it," she noted. "But we both believe, and I don't think it's a rationalization, that arts make people more human, more aware of each other, more aware of themselves."

Integrity

As for the quality of church music, Mrs. Hart said today's great plea is for integrity. For a long time, she said, standards for church music have been lower than standards for secular music.

"If it had a good beat, a reasonable tune and mentioned God," she went on, the arrangement was called sacred.

That resulted in "a tremendous number of anthems and songs which no serious musician, outside the church, would touch ... anthems and songs which don't honor the musical or lyrical art," she said. Also as a result of the double standard, she noted recent great composers have avoided writing for the church.

The Lincoln organists also share certain peculiarities, as well as a certain temperament, common to professional musicians.

Blackmer, for example, bites his lip when he's nervous or tense.

Sometimes, he gets his mind so set on the upcoming Sunday service that he's likely to forget the other, more mundane, things that any husband and father of two young children should remember.

Levick hates mornings, something of a handicap on Sundays. Before a service, he loses his appetite and wants to be left alone. After a service, he's physically and emotionally drained and goes home for a big meal.

The Harts avoid social engagements on Saturday nights. They, like Levick, are night people and find it a little difficult to be up and about on Sunday mornings.

The Harts said they are meticulous, adding "any artist has to be sensitive to be successful." But along with that sensitivity go "feelings that get hurt easily."

Therefore, Hart has found it "hard to build up a shield against the average criticisms."

While the fulltime professionals do their work at First Presbyterian, First Plymouth and Westminster, there are countless unpaid volunteers and paid part-time professionals who make music in other Lincoln churches.

It's those people, Levick said, whose "love and dedication shine through."

Fat, Jolly Santa Unplanned Success

Newport, R.I. (UPI) — It was on a snowy December night 152 years ago that Santa Claus became the jolly figure Americans recognize today — "Dressed all in fur from his head to his foot ... and a round little belly, like a bowl full of jelly."

On that wind-whipped evening a serious scholar named Clement C. Moore sat down at his desk in his snug, candlelit study to compose a verse he had promised to recite to his children on Christmas Eve. Its title was "A visit from St. Nicholas."

Moore wrote his poem in New York City in 1822, but he later moved to Newport with his wife and nine children, and it will be read there again this year in a ceremony that has become tradition. Each Christmas season for the past 20 years Newporters have recognized Moore's accomplishment with a reading of the poem.

The man who has portrayed Moore for most of the readings is James H. Van Allen, one of Newport's most noted citizens. Up to a thousand children this year are expected to hear Van Allen read:

"Twas the night before Christmas, when all through the house, not a creature was stirring, not even a mouse."

The words, by some unexplained inspiration, came to Moore with great ease. Today it is difficult to think of Santa Claus except as Moore described him, but the figure originated in Europe hundreds of years ago as a withered old man in white robes astride a horse and carrying a bag full of toys for good children and a birch rod for the nasty ones.

Santa Claus, as Moore envisioned him, is thought to have been based on a beloved Dutch servant employed by the author. Moore and the servant had recently been out for a sleigh ride during which yule presents were delivered to friends and relatives.

Moore, a scholar whose field was ancient languages, never meant his poem to be made public. But a friend had it published in the Troy, N.Y., Sentinel.

Moore often denied he was the author. But his attitude softened when he saw that the poem was becoming a children's favorite.

Piano player, film maker, song writer Dave Brown.

Entertainment Is Communication

It's No 'Show Biz' for Brown

By Holly Spence

When Dave Brown offers a comment with words alone, sometimes it is incomplete.

He expresses himself better with music and film with the aid of words.

Most know Dave as the piano player at the Den in the Lincoln Hilton. Few know him as a composer. Fewer know him as a film maker.

Dave Brown, the artist, is a complex combination of film, music and words. From the time he and his sister put on shows from behind a curtained wall in his grandparent's home, he knew communication through entertainment figured in his life.

But "show biz" as a glamor profession is philosophically innocuous to Dave. He is a sensitive person who finds beauty inside of people and his music and film sketches relate this.

Subconsciously, his piano playing may have an effect on his films. Bars are places filled with a cross-section of the human element — fine fodder for things artistic.

"The music people request tells a lot about them," Dave says.

Dave's musical interest began early; his love for film started in a high school study hall where he wrote his first screenplay.

He is like a kid with a brand new pair of shoes when he pulls out his film storyboards even though most of his celluloid endeavors are for friends and for himself.

Ideally, he would like to be in film work and "California is where it's at," he says. "I can't find any people to motivate me around here: I have to generate my own enthusiasm."

California and its film making opportunities always gnaw at his mind, but he finds beauty in the plains, too.

"I'd like to fly over Nebraska with a 700mm camera, put it to symphonic music and show it at the Indian Hills," he said.

He commented that an independent film maker's rewards are not so much money and security but more emotional fulfillment. And the independent film making route may be the one he will take ... "I don't know if it's selfishness, but I like to be in control."

Specializing in one aspect of film making is not his cup of tea "but as much as I love film, I would enjoy any part of it," he says. Dave's idea of a film is germinating an idea, writing the screenplay, scoring the music, doing the lighting, shooting the footage and editing it.

He ponders a master's degree in film but has settled for the moment with "getting my own film education by reading ... and you can't beat the practical experience."

Although he is not sure where his life will lead him, the right job as a piano player lets him follow his creative whims during the day. He says his music is more satisfying than the jobs he has held.

Although working as an orderly at Lincoln General Hospital "was a fantastic experience," the confining walls of hospital rooms or of his interviewing office at a former job are not his idea of commitment.

"I could feel a song coming on, and I couldn't express it," he said of the office job. "I knew I was helping people, but I also knew there was something else out there."

When he first started as a single at the Hilton, he was driving to Omaha where he sanded and painted cars during the day.

He said he doesn't want to fall into the musician's familiar trap of burning yourself out. Having the days free to "sit and dream" are important to Dave.

Known for many years as the head of the Dave Brown Trio, he enjoys the life of a single performer.

Although there are a number of beloved jazz arrangements (some of his own, too) that aren't possible without his rhythm section, a musical triad has its problems.

"You have to play as one unit, and sometimes we were fragmented," he said.

Now he calls himself "a gradual intruder."

As background music provider in an intimate lounge situation, he starts out the evenings quietly and gradually moves to more rhythmic material as the evening progresses. And the pace of the music is kept ever-moving by a musical gimmick called "cocktail chording" so as to not bring lulls to the conversations.

A break in the music disrupts, so "I merge one song into another," he commented. "No one is really listening, but they know you're there."

Headdress Ball Raises $7,639.27

The greatest profit ever was realized from last weekend's Lincoln Symphony Guild Headdress Ball.

Final figures show $7,639.27 will be turned over to the orchestra as a result of the event, according to chairman Mrs. Virgil A. Parker III. It also attracted the largest crowd in its history.

In addition to admission tickets and program advertising, money was raised by the sale of decorative table centerpieces which, in keeping with the circus theme, were in the form of personally-created stuffed animals.

Unlike many civic organizations, the symphony is dependent for its very existence on proceeds from the ball, Treasurer Mrs. Vernon Forbes explains.

"We were especially pleased with this year's record receipts," Guild President Mrs. Phillip Johnson adds. "We're looking forward to its continued success in the years to come."

Imagination Key to Unique Christmas Tree

By Betty Stevens

There are now Hummel tree ornaments. The first year edition, titled "The Guardian Angel," 3 1/2 inches in diameter, is listed in local stores at $4 each.

A fairly good-sized tree with 100 Hummels parts one with a wad of bucks.

But there are other creative, attractive, and even money-saving decorations that can turn a tree into a sight to see, as well as providing the memory-making experience of handmade baubles.

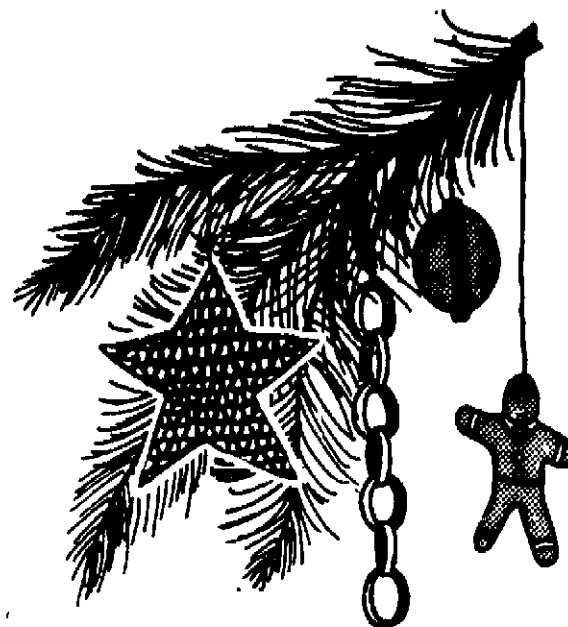

Walnut Shells

For instance, English walnuts carefully cracked into halves can be glued back together after the nut meats are removed. Then attach a ribbon loop. Either painted or left natural, they make durable as well as pretty tree ornaments.

The Styrofoam trays that meat is purchased on are as good as the imagination in creating decorations.

Any shape, covered with glue and seeds — milo, corn, wheat, sunflower — and then a layer of shellac, is eye-catching.

Or glue a scene from discarded Christmas cards or snapshots of family members and their activities on the Styrofoam cutout to turn a tree into a unique one-of-a-kind-in-the-whole-world.

Cardboard tubes from paper products, cut into one-half inch circles and painted brilliant colors, makes a tree a blaze of color.

The cone-shaped separations in egg cartons can become bodies for miniature angels or shepherds. Then attach a marble-sized Styrofoam ball with a toothpick for a head and drape the figure in appropriate garb.

Fall Ideas

A late fall tramp through woods and fields can produce a bundle of decorating possibilities.

Nuts, pine cone seeds, berries, and milkweed pods painted or plain are plentiful.

Or short paper chains hung vertically instead of wound around the tree give an interesting variation to the oldest of the children's arts.

One batch of ginger cookie dough, while not free, will produce a whole treeful of Christmas shapes, and a great smell while under production.

For pennies and a few hours time, strings of popcorn or cranberries or both alternated will provide color as well as an old-fashioned touch to a tree.

A corn husk with the ends squared off and tied in the middle with a fabric bow from the scrap bag permits an identification with a previous home-sewn garment and a close affinity with Nebraska's most natural product.

Holiday Greeting Cards Take Whimsical Turn to Years Past

By Jane Hennings

Simple, sweet and old-fashioned best describes this year's wish for a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

Greeting card manufacturers, on this their 100th anniversary of the first mass-produced Christmas card in America, have doffed the slick, mod look of the late 60s for a somewhat whimsical return to the Spirit of Christmases past.

Keeping pace with the current nostalgia trend, designs tend to be traditional, colors subdued. Sentiment runs a bit more intimate and folksy.

One local card dealer said Lincolinites are buying cards that reflect their feelings of seriousness during current rough times.

Morry Weiss, president of the National Greeting Card Publishers Assn., puts the reason for old-fashioned Christmas feelings this way:

More Peaceful Times

"After another year of inflation, the continuing political turmoil, material shortages and other energy crisis problems, Americans are yearning for things that remind them of less complicated, more peaceful times. The exchange of Christmas greetings affords them one opportunity to recall them through cards reminiscent of those times."

The suave 1973 Santa flashing the peace sign is replaced this year with an antiquated choir chiming the chorus to "Home Sweet Home."

Typical verses run like this:

"It's an old-fashioned custom,
And old-fashioned greeting,
But it grows even warmer,
With every repeating,
Merry Christmas and Happy New Year."

Local greeting card dealers report the heartwarming Betsy Clark designs are continuing favorites. The message, conveyed by an innocent-looking urchin in ragged clothes, is simple and packed with sentiment — "To Know You Is to Wuv You. Happy Holidays."

A Currier and Ives print of the painting "The Road-Winter" also runs high on the card popularity list. Aside from its horse-drawn sleigh folksy appeal, the greeting card matches the popular Currier and Ives 10-cent postage stamp now available.

Top Card Seller

A Norman Rockwell painting of Jolly Ole St. Nick hoping everyone will "Have a Merry Ole Christmas" is another top Christmas card seller.

Also popular this year is what one card shop manager calls the "cutesy-pie, little characters on fantasy trips" effect. Examples are a bird in shoes, hat and scarf wishing everyone a "precious little Christmas." Or there's a cute kiddy fast asleep with the caption: "May all your Christmas dreams come true."

In the religious card category, designs highlight the basics of the season — the Christ child, the Nativity, messages and the Bible — instead of snow-topped churches, stained-glass windows and similar recent popular designs.

For the card sender with a sense of humor, the Santa jokes are still top eye-catchers. You can get a streaking Santa or a Santa in a bikini, because "I know how much you love bikinis," the card says.

There's the card pasted together that says "Closed for the holidays" or the classic ho-ho-ho tickler.

"What's big and red and goes ho, ho, ho?"
"Please answer as soon as possible — one is stuck in my chimney."

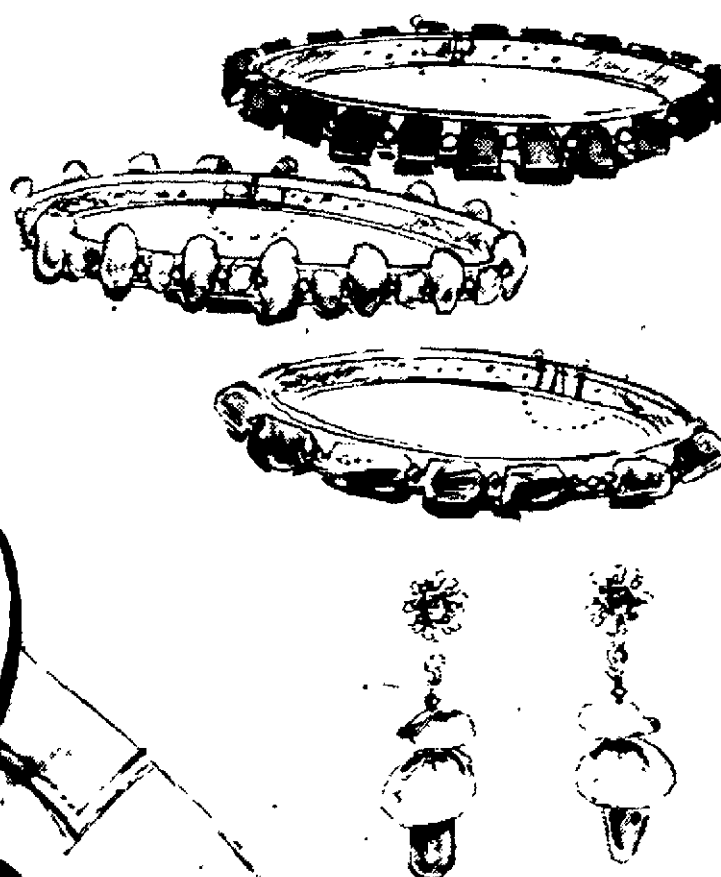

An Old-Fashioned Greeting ...

Leisure Look in Bold Prints Will Catch His Eye

By Bart Becker

Loosen your collar, fashion fans, the leisure look is where it's at in men's clothing and furnishings this Christmas season.

The leisure suit with its wide-lapelled jacket worn over an open-necked shirt is the hottest item in the country and Lincoln is no exception.

"It's going like gangbusters for us," said Bob Lewis, buyer for Magee's Where It's At Shop. "It's available in any style or material. A lot of knits are available, of course."

Don Stewart, manager of Ben Simon's men's clothing department, confirmed the leisure suit's popularity.

"It's for the man who needs something different," he said.

All Ages, Prices

According to Lewis, the style is available "in everything from jeans to something by the best clothing manufacturer. It is for all ages and in all price ranges."

Stewart said boldly patterned shirts are popular with the suits. Lewis added that a solid-colored suit can "explode with a fancy patterned shirt."

Stewart said turtlenecks also are selling well and bulky sweaters, both plain and patterned, are a big item. The ski look in sweaters and jackets is a popular winter trend.

More traditional fashions include the ever-popular double knits and sport coats. Stewart said imitation fur collars for outerwear are currently in style.

Lewis said some spring fashions have already begun arriving, featuring pastels and deep tones.

Solid Colors

The fashion direction in dress shirts will continue to be toward solid colors, tone-on-tones and white-on-whites. Dress shirt cuffs will vary from two-button cuffs

In sweaters, the styles range from lightweight sleeveless pullovers to bulky collared coat styles. There are pullovers adorned with pictorial patterns.

Western styled shirts are still popular, featuring embroidery or patterned linen yoke, cuffs and pocket flaps. Many are styled with metal buttons to accentuate the Western look.

Nostalgia print ties, as well as the more traditional patterns are selling well for daytime wear.

Casual Wear

A wide variety of denim and chambray prints brighten the "work shirt" look for casual wear.

Naturally, all sorts of jewelry and accessories are being sold.

And if all those fashion options don't style out the well-dressed man, there are always the old standbys — socks and underwear.

Both items will be serving their traditional functions with socks available in solids of every hue and patterns that defy imagination. Low-rise briefs in soft nylon will range in color from white to orange and burgundy.

A great shirt for any dramatic entrance or exit. Here's a real head-turner featuring single-buttoned cuffs, fully machine washable, permanent press.

Conversational sweaters spell gift excitement. At left, an ivory and brown polar bear climbs an ivory trimmed navy crewneck worn over a navy nylon shirt. Embroidered bicycles cross a blue-shaded wool vest worn over a self-patterned tan cotton shirt.

Dear Mr. Corn: Is there any such thing as an eight bid? I have been told that it might have occurred in a tournament where the penalty for the extra trick was well worth the value erased for an opponent's slam.

Answer: There is no such thing as an eight bid. It is true that a defending side can sometimes save a bushel of points by bidding eight of something. However, the laws limit legal bids from one through seven.

Dear Dr. Corn: My partner and I were playing Stayman and Blackwood and she opened two no-trump. I jumped to four hearts in an attempt to show some strength. She passed and we missed a slam. What was my correct response? These were the hands:

Answer: A jump to game over any no-trump opening is a shut-out bid and opener must pass. All opening no-trump bids describe hands within narrow limits and responder should be able to judge the combined potential.

I recommend this bidding.

Answer: West chose an under-bid in bidding only two spades. When a good shut fit is found, the singletons and doubletons should be given added value. I suggest a jump to three spades by West and a Blackwood inquiry by East followed by a bid of six spades.

Alex Cabrales: Incurable Optimist

By Linda Ulrich

Alex Cabrales classifies himself as an incurable optimist. "When you believe in people, the results are remarkable."

It's a stock sort of statement. But with him it takes on new meaning because he matches his words with action.

His concerns, to name a few, are finding the right person for the right job, the quality of life for persons in post-retirement years and the past, present and future of Mexican-Americans.

Placement Officer for the State Dept. of Personnel, Cabrales said it is a mistake to assume that he helps people find jobs. "It's a proven fact that if you find the right individual with the right talent for a job, the end result is a happy and productive employee and everybody gains."

Between 20 and 40 persons pass through his office daily.

Real Human Value

Helping them has more to do with "discovering the real value of a human being" than with filling out an application, he thinks. Job seeking is, Cabrales points out, "very, very hard work."

And the current state of the economy has made it harder. Although Nebraska's unemployment rate is significantly lower than the national one, Cabrales says Nebraskans must not discount the interlocking effect of the national situation with the local one.

"We are getting calls, believe it or not, from people in other states who want to move here," he said. "And if we get an influx of people from other areas it's bound to affect our job market."

A measure of how much harder it is to find a job now is that "people who don't know what they're looking for are willing to accept almost anything."

But he predicts that the tight job market will ease up within the next six to seven months.

Personal Time

Of equal concern to Cabrales is what happens when state employees retire. Contrary to popular opinion, money is not the primary problem after retirement, he said. Rather, it is psychological disengagement or how to spend personal time when a person turns 65.

"It's really a question of how we grow," he said. "It's not the end of anything but a continuance of life filled with so many alternatives. And we're so much better qualified to cope because we've had all this experience."

Cabrales, who attended the first national pre-retirement conference at Drake University this fall, has helped some 300 state employees to better cope by instigating a pre-retirement program.

The program is important, he said, because "we pay a whole lot of lip service to the idea but the implementation is lagging."

If retired persons feel good about themselves, "everybody gains one more time," he continued. The goal is to feel worthwhile to the community and to themselves. "I hope I continue to grow at 93," Cabrales said.

Liking Yourself

And if he has anything to say about it, everyone around him will, too. It has to do with "looking in the mirror and liking what you see."

For him, it means being tremendously proud of his Mexican-American heritage.

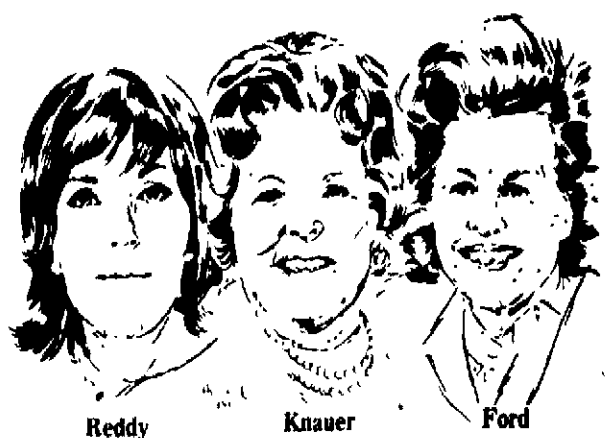

One of 10 children of a Santa Fe Railroad worker, Cabrales grew up in Augusta, Kan.

Of his people, he says, "we are definitely moving forward through what is the procedure for all people."

Education is one of the major factors, he said. And, "it is significant that the first Mexican-American to receive a Ph.D. got it from the University of Nebraska and more are following."

"Success is setting a personal and worthwhile goal and when you have embarked on the journey, you've achieved it."

Cabrales is a vice chairman of the Lincoln Chapter of the American G. I. Forum and a member of the Lincoln Personnel Assn.

Quotable Quotes

By The Associated Press

"I've been very fortunate. I'm feeling better than I expected." First Lady Betty Ford, speaking of her health since her breast cancer surgery in Washington.

"It's the best country in the world. I feel like I'd like to have a cup of tea and a good cry." Australian-born singer Helen Reddy after she became a naturalized citizen of the United States in Los Angeles.

"Consumers may find that the purchase of gold is more of a mine field than a gold mine unless they are familiar with the risks." Virginia H. Knauer, President Ford's consumer adviser, warning of fraudulent gold schemes and unscrupulous promoters.

"It's kind of scary. All I'm thinking about now is bringing them home and getting the family started. Originally I had hoped for four kids." Charlotte Lange, who gave birth to sextuplets in San Jose, Calif., of whom three survived.

"It's about time, I guess." Ann O'Neill Hooe, 27, beneficiary of a miracle said to have been performed by Mother Elizabeth Bayley Seton, after being informed that Mother Seton would become the first U.S.-born Roman Catholic saint.

Knives, Forks Pair Up Well

If you happen to have fruit knives (these are usually about 6 inches long) and no matching forks, team the fruit knives with seafood forks — if you have them. You'll find the seafood forks are about the same length. Use these knives and forks when you serve fresh fruit and cheese as dessert for a company dinner or supper.

Sweater Nostalgia Is Back

Marilyn Monroe, in all her sexy splendor, is back.

Puffing that eternally flaming cigar, Groucho Marx makes his reappearance.

And that ole slap-stick pair, Laurel and Hardy, returns to the scene with another rollicking antic.

No, they're not starring again on the screen, the tube or even the radio waves. Instead, they're up in lights in the latest sweater look.

Call it nostalgia, the Great Gatsby craze or just plain comfort in remembering. That nationwide feeling of yesterday now is sweeping across the chest of young junior and college gals' fashion.

The basic black, green or royal blue turtleneck and the simple, sleek cardigan are dead horses for the winter sweater set, say local department store buyers.

Novelty is this year's door to the "in" above-the-waist look. Hoods, zips, tweeds, nubby textures and that "take me back when" feeling are the keys.

Try a pullover starring an old-fashioned lady with a big bonnet done in soft pastels. Or go stark black and white with a vesty look premiering W. C. Fields or Little Orphan Annie.

Then there's the soda pop shop, the sock hop or the hot rod rolling down Main if you crave that scene.

This year's your chance to be neat, keeno, far out, gals. There are decades of take-me-backs on sweater racks everywhere.

Patty Balduff trims the tree in her W. C. Fields sweater.

Kindness Can't Be Shown Too Soon—Emerson

Going Like Sixty

By Jack Smith

Retired Women Need Relevance

The middle-aged woman, says Dr. Natalie Trager, is bewildered by her "irrelevancy."

Dr. Trager was co-coordinator of the Conference on Aging staged by the Institute of Gerontology of the University of Michigan.

"The demographic handwriting is on the wall," Dr. Trager explains. "Women outlive men . . . women outlive all of their assigned functions."

These functions have caused a woman to be continuously adaptable through her life: homemaker, breeder, mother hen, worker (or breadwinner, semi or total), sex partner.

But, all of these are somehow related to men — as husbands, lovers, fathers, coworkers, bosses.

But, now — facing the likelihood that she will be in the majority with no man to care for or care about (much, that is) — she may begin to feel a creeping irrelevancy.

Face of Poverty

This state of affairs is complicated, for some, by poverty. The Michigan conference revealed that 7.5 million older women comprise the poorest group of people in America. Half of these women exist on an income of less than $1,888 a year. If they work, they get about half the average wage for males of the same age.

The feeling of usefulness, of meaning something to somebody, may be recaptured by devotion to some sort of a cause. Perhaps the reason the women's liberation movement has so many single and/or middle-aged women is because of the involvement one can sense from furthering one's sex or class.

A more meaningful activity to the older women, however, may be politics or community action. Improvements and reforms worked for can well materialize in the years that the woman has left, thus bringing a sense of accomplishment — or, if you will, conquering.

At the Michigan conference, the participants stressed that older women's involvement in politics is more rewarding when it deals with issues rather than parties.

Working Contact

The League of Women Voters, in which younger women participate heavily, has the added value of bringing one into continuous working contact with other age groups and outlooks.

For the woman who has worked only a few years, retirement is no crisis because the homemaking instinct may still dominate.

The career woman, however — the woman who has been in business for 10 years or so — will face just as much of an adjustment in retirement as does a man. The job has come to mean a great deal in her life.

Here the problem is similar to the man's in finding relevancy. She must keep up with everyday society by somehow participating in it.

Shopping, clubs, bridge, sewing circles — they do not always do the trick.

The most conventional outlet for the retired woman is another job — perhaps a part-time one in a school, a store, or an office.

The pay and benefits are unimportant. It is the environment of awareness and relevancy that counts.

Dear Ann Landers: I especially liked that letter from the 13-year-old whose dear friend died in an accident. The teen-ager who wrote regretted the way she and others had treated the girl. You suggested that she clip the column and "let it serve as a reminder that life is uncertain and we should never pass up a chance to be kind to a friend or relative because it might be the last."

Your answer was beautiful, Ann. And now I'd like to share a quote by Ralph Waldo Emerson that said the same thing — only better. Here it is: "You cannot do a kindness too soon, for you never know how soon it will be too late."

A Fort Wayne Reader
Dear Fort Wayne: I don't mind being one-upped by Ralph Waldo Emerson. He is one of my favorites. For those who have not read his essay on Compensation, I recommend it.

Dear Ann Landers: I am a mature, 14-year-old girl who smokes cigarettes. (Not dope.)

My parents do not approve so I don't do it in front of them. My best girl friend is 15. Her parents don't want her to smoke either but they'd rather have her do it in front of them than behind their backs. So she smokes out in the open and doesn't have to sneak. I think my friend's parents are smarter than mine. What do you think?

Tessie

Dear Tess: They aren't "smarter," just "gutsier." Your friend's parents knew they'd lost control of their daughter so they just caved in.

Your parents refuse to do that. They are hanging in there, for your sake, trying to keep you from doing something they know is harmful.

Your Horoscope

MONDAY, DEC. 16
Your birthday today: Use the first several months of your year working through experimental phases in preparation for definite changes (favorable if you pursue a sensible approach) due in the latter part of the year. Invest time and emotions in relationships, which may falter where strong feeling isn't mutual. Today's natives are brave, optimistic, generous in supporting social causes.

Aries [March 21-April 19]: Advice sounds great but is unrealistic; no one takes your distinctive inner qualities into consideration. Plan on a slow start and reschedule your week tonight.

Taurus [April 20-May 20]: Expect abrupt actions or responses from associates. Home and martial circumstances run counter to your efforts in career, but should take precedence. Your energy rises in later hours.

Gemini [May 21-June 20]: Money gets away too quickly to alleviate current concerns. You can benefit personal projects by discretion, self-discipline and patient waiting.

Cancer [June 21-July 22]: Carry on with previously settled plans. Avoid changing your luck; some episode upsets your environment. Loved ones tend to be temperamental.

Leo [July 23-Aug. 22]: Sweeping changes are not the best answer to personal disagreements. Be ready to respond constructively. Late day favors an appeal to general public attention.

Virgo [Aug. 23-Sept. 22]: There's nothing for you today but continued patience with critics and their comments. Anticipate a spontaneous about-face that you have in no way provoked.

Libra [Sept. 23-Oct. 22]: Finances are exceptionally unstable today and require realistic self-discipline. Friends' good fortune is cheerful news. Plan energetically tonight.

Scorpio [Oct. 23-Nov. 21]: With everybody blowing off steam, take no great stock in erratic activity. Current promotions needn't draw you off base. Gather friends for evening discussion.

Sagittarius [Nov. 22-Dec. 21]: Remind yourself early of what you have resolved to do this week. Resist distractions and side ventures. New ideas need testing before you apply them.

Capricorn [Dec. 22-Jan. 19]: Events turn schedules upside-down and momentarily distract you from current projects. Changes are just temporary; plan for improvement and hang onto your money.

Aquarius [Jan. 20-Feb. 18]: Let well enough alone. Allow friends to carry the ball, but don't let them interfere with your major commitments. You gain fresh perspective late today.

Pisces [Feb. 19-March 20]: Begin your week by troubleshooting and finding errors. Solutions come later. Travel and begin big projects tomorrow after you clear today's experiments.

Females Have Guide To Media

By Patricia McCormack

New York (UPI) — The latest women's advocacy book is by 65 females who make their living in television, radio, magazines, books, wire services and newspapers.

It is a universe that gives men more opportunities, pays them more, and promotes mainly men to the most powerful jobs.

"Rooms With No View" is a woman's guide to the man's world of media.

It's a kick-and-tell book. The title is drawn from the fact that the higher one rises in the corporate world, the bigger the office, the greater number of windows and the better the view.

Ethel Strainchamps, a St. Louis journalist turned New York free lance, edited the book and nudged contributors at deadline time. Then she fought to have the book published as written — nondiluted and tough.

Quadrangle Press (owned by the New York Times Co.) was going to put out the book in 1973 but so many deletions and insertions were ordered that the book had the impact of a wet noodle, Ms. Strainchamps said.

She took up the matter with the Media Women's Assn., compiler of the book. The contract with Quadrangle was voided by mutual consent.

"There was a group of consensus that most of the quadrangle additions were out of sync with the rest of the book," Ms. Strainchamps said.

"It included a Playboy cartoon, a Dear Abby letter, and a cutesy list of no-no's for bosses..."

Changes of titles also drew ire. Samples: a chapter headed "Stalled in a Wasp's Nest" was changed to "Were You There When They Crucified Me, Lord?" the subtitle "Tempus Non-Fugit" (for the report on Time magazine) became "The Impossible Dream: A Quest."

Know, a women's cooperative in Pittsburgh, then volunteered to publish a few hundred copies of the original manuscript.

Ms. Strainchamps' moonlighting typist, a Harper & Row secretary, thought it was something her boss, an editor, should see. She did and Harper & Row published the book.

Most of the contributors are members of the Media Women's Assn., formed in 1970 with the purpose of tipping the balance of power in the media.

Some of the original members had previously been affiliated with older feminist groups; others had planned and participated in the landmark sit in at the Ladies' Home Journal.

In the original exchanges of facts about their jobs in the media the women discovered that "things were far worse than we at first thought."

"This book," says the Association, "is our contribution to the spontaneous, nationwide feminist effort to bring the exploitation of women to public attention — and thus help to bring about reform."

"That the majority of the pieces are anonymously written proves that even women associated with an industry dedicated to communication may not feel free to communicate candidly without fear of reprisal.

"This apprehension prevented us from obtaining even anonymous reports on certain companies."

Why all this concern with women in the media having bigger and better chances to move to the top and the power posts?

The association answers:

"All the media — books, magazines, newspapers, broadcasting, advertising — day in and day out, in boldface type and in living color, pound home the message that men are men — active, curious, hardworking, intelligent — and that women are women — frivolous, seductive, motherly, domesticated. The ancient myths have simply been put into modern dress."

Florida's 'Flea' McGriff Copy Of Huskers' Ingles

By Virgil Parker

Remember 'Guy the Fly'? Well, look out, Florida has 'Lee the Flea'.

When Guy Ingles, currently the assistant freshman coach on Tom Osborne's Nebraska football staff, was a Cornhusker player, he set three school pass catching records.

Ingles may have been small — he was 5-9 and weighed 165 pounds his senior season — but he was elusive and had speed. All those factors combined to give him his nickname.

When Nebraska plays Florida in the Sugar Bowl New Year's Eve, the Gators will put on display a carbon copy of Ingles — Lee McGriff, who is also 5-9, but (a much heavier) 185 pounds.

He's been affectionately dubbed 'Lee the Flea' by Florida followers. McGriff can flea like Ingles, but he's not as fast. McGriff caught two fewer passes (36), but for 696 yards and an average gain of 19.4 per grab.

If you don't think 'The Flea' is the Gators favorite target, check this. Behind his 36 catches came running back Tony Green with nine.

This year the tiny McGriff was named the SEC's all-conference split end and led the league in passes caught, yards, TD's (7) and average number of catches per game.

Not bad for a walk-on! McGriff came to the Florida campus, where his father had been captain of the Gator track team, from Tampa. The Oklahoma State his junior year. The record still stands.

His other two marks, most receptions in a career (80) and reception yards in a career (1,234), have since been broken by Johnny Rodgers.

What about his Florida counterpart? McGriff led the rugged Southeast Conference his junior year in reception yards with 703 on 38 catches for an average gain of 18.5 yards per catch.

This fall was a repeat performance — almost to the yard. McGriff caught two fewer passes (36), but for 696 yards and an average gain of 19.4 per grab.

If you don't think 'The Flea' is the Gators favorite target, check this. Behind his 36 catches came running back Tony Green with nine.

Dec. 15, 1974 Lincoln, Neb. 1E

coaching staff tried to discourage him, but his determination and fine play soon earned him a starting spot — and a scholarship.

A master of the sensational catch under pressure, McGriff is best remembered by Florida fans for keeping a last-ditch drive against arch-rival Georgia alive with a clutch fourth-down catch.

One series later he gathered in another fourth-down pass — this time in the end zone with two defenders draped over him.

That made the score 10-9, but in Georgia's favor. 'The Flea' capped his performance by snaring a pass on a two-point conversion try to give the Gators a last-second, 11-10, victory.

Florida coach Doug Dickey claims that films show that McGriff has dropped just one pass this year that was within his reach. But he also appreciates his Mighty-Mite for his blocking.

"On Tony Green's two long touchdowns runs this fall (76 yards against Maryland and 72 yards against Kentucky), Lee got rid of two defenders on each run to make the scores possible," Dickey says.

"On both runs he got in the way of one defender and slowed him down enough to eliminate any chance of the guy catching Tony. Then he took off after the last man and hindered him enough to let Tony go all the way.

"He does things like that with his speed and quickness, and he doesn't let his lack of size prevent him from being a good blocker. He graded out well as a blocker in every game."

Despite his lack of size, McGriff hopes to get a shot at pro ball.

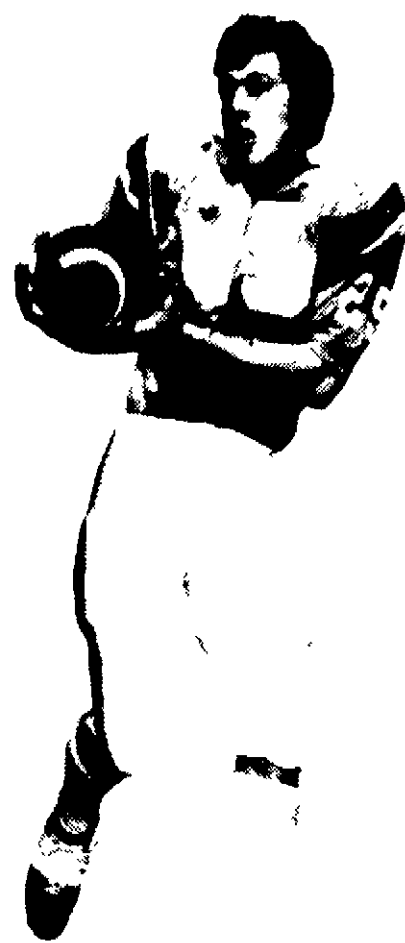

"There's a lot more to being a receiver than height and weight," he insists. "Desire is half the battle."

McGriff says his honors haven't come easy. Hard work has been the answer. He lifts weights, plays basketball and baseball to develop his hands and concentrates on running his pass routes. He runs the cross country course in order to keep his legs in good shape.

And he stays after practice every day to work on catching the ball. "In an average practice you might catch 10 passes because of the time spent on working on other phases of the offense," he says. "So I stay afterward and catch about 100 more. Catching the ball is just a matter of concentration. And that comes from hours of repetition."

Florida quarterback Don Gaffney says he is aware that Nebraska has a lot of pride in the play of its defensive backfield.

"But I don't care how good they are," Gaffney says, "I know that Lee will be open. It'll just be a matter of me getting the ball to him. The passing phase of our game — and Nebraska's pass defense — should make for a good and exciting matchup."

Willis Generals Huskers to 78-65 Conquest

By Mark Gordon

For someone who had just directed his basketball team to an impressive 13-point victory, Steve Willis hardly looked at all tired.

"I'm really not that happy with the way I played tonight," said the 5-10 junior guard who sparked Nebraska to a 78-65 win Saturday night at the NU Coliseum over Wichita State. "I made a lot of mental mistakes."

"But the coach told me to be the floor general and that's what I tried to do," he said. "It really doesn't take that much with four other good players to help you."

Nevertheless, Willis received the majority of the praise from Nebraska coach Joe Cipriano, whose Huskers led early and dominated the more physical Shockers.

"Steve Willis had a lot to do with keeping our team together out there," noted Cipriano. "He had 10 deflections and six assists and that's a pretty good job."

"They were aggressive," Willis said, "They were on the big side, but they really weren't that quick. In the first half, we just took it to them."

"I think missing their guard (Calvin Bruton, who was sidelined with a sprained right ankle) really hurt them," he continued. "It would have made a difference, but that's the breaks."

It was only appropriate that the word breaks would surface.

Because that's one of the key ingredients in any game and NU certainly played with determination to receive several "breaks" in two first-half spurts.

The first occurred early as Nebraska streaked to a 17-5 edge during the contest's initial seven minutes. That included five layins that made the Huskers confident that the taller Shockers of coach Harry Miller were not invincible.

The second offensive explosion occurred during the last 2:33 of the first half when Nebraska was leading only 33-23.

Spurred on by a roaring, screaming crowd of 5,100 that seemed to upset the Shockers into key turnovers, Nebraska zipped in 10 unanswered points to assume a commanding 43-23 halftime edge.

The Shockers closed to within 10 at 58-48 in the second half, but when 6-10 center Bob Elmore fouled out with 11:56 still to play, WSU seemed to lose its major offensive and defensive weapon.

"In the second half, we seemed to have a little lull," Cipriano said. "We stood around too much, but maybe if some of our layins had dropped (again the key breaks), we would have looked better."

"But you still have to give Wichita State credit for its comeback," he said. "We did a good job on the boards (33-33). There's no question our crowd helped us in the first half with all that noise."

While Cipriano was openly displeased with his team's effort and defensive performance in an 87-72 win two weeks ago against South Dakota State, those were the key areas he was elated with in the WSU victory.

"We had some great spurts and I thought our aggressiveness and the pressure we put on them really paid off," he noted. "We're starting to take some pride in our defense."

Offensive standouts for Nebraska included guard Jerry Fort, who contributed 22 points, Willis' 14 points, 13 from center Larry Cox and 10 from forward Bob Siegel.

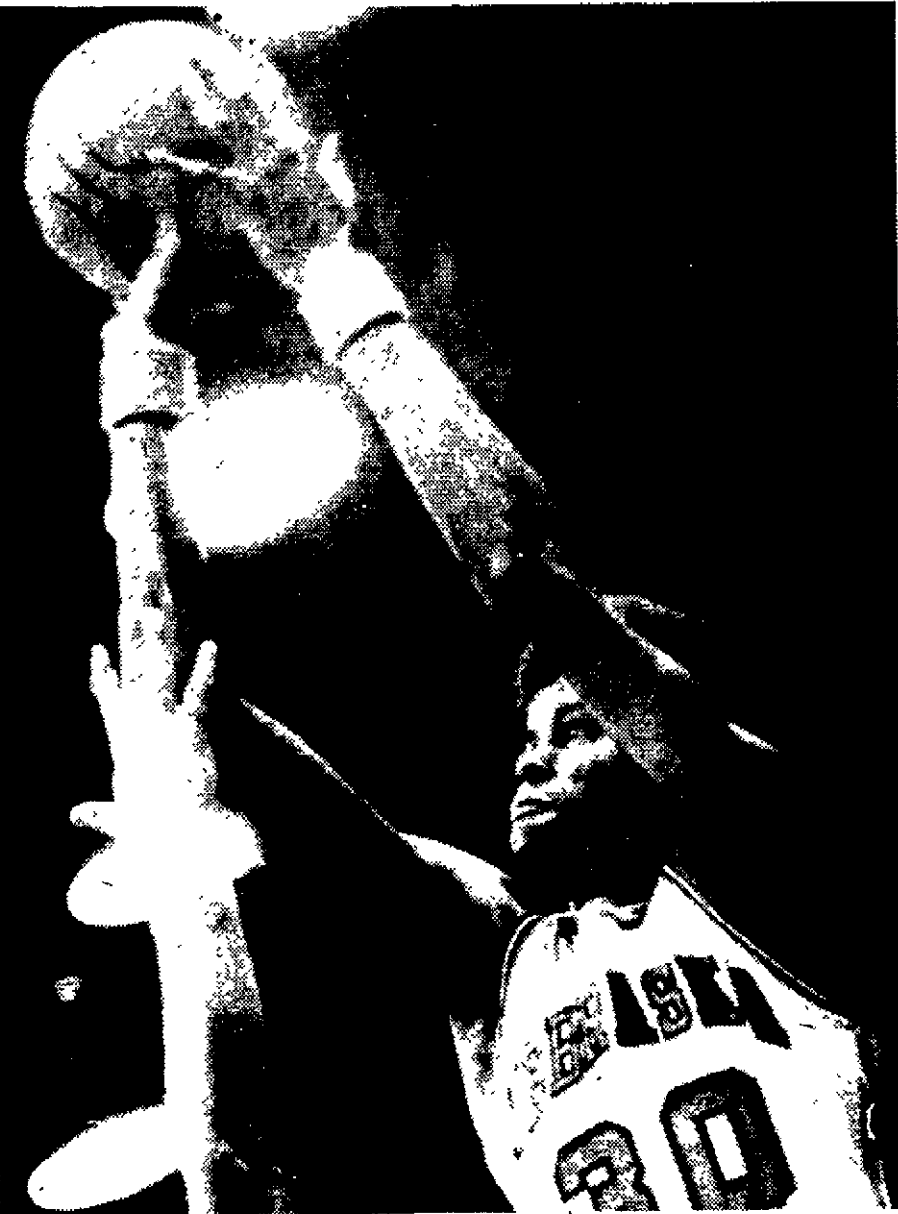

Overall, Nebraska hit 53.3 per cent of its field goal attempts while the Shockers were successful on 46.4 per cent from the field.

The Shockers, now 2-3, were paced by 6-6 junior Robert Gray with 17 points, 11 from 6-8 junior forward Doug Yoder and 10 from Elmore, who used his 6-10 and 245 pounds to snare seven rebounds.

Willis, looking ahead to Tuesday night's NU Coliseum match with San Jose State, said returning to Lincoln after a seven-day stretch last week on the road was just what the Huskers needed.

"I think we're starting to play better now and having these games at home should really help us," he said. "We have to be ready from now on."

NU obviously was ready against Wichita State.

Osborne Hoping to Harvest Bumper Nebraska Prep Crop

By Randy York

Prep Sports Editor

Thirteen Nebraska prep football players, including three from state Class A champion Lincoln East, have been offered football scholarships to attend Nebraska.

Cornhusker head coach Tom Osborne labels this year's recruiting crop as one of the best in history and says two more in-state players might be offered scholarships.

That would give the Cornhuskers 15 possible in-state recruiting coaches — exactly one-half of the 30 scholarships the Huskers are allotted — if all accept the offers.

Lincoln and Omaha players earned the respect of the Nebraska coaching staff most this fall. Seven Omaha prep players and five Lincoln standouts were offered scholarships.

Ord back Greg Suelter (6-4, 180), the state's leading rusher with 2,000 yards this past season, is the only outstate player offered a scholarship, according to Osborne.

East may have accomplished a Cornhusker first with its three Nebraska scholarship offers, Osborne indicated.

(6-4, 200) and all-city defensive end Gordon Thiessen (6-1, 190) are the three Spartans who have been extended NU scholarship offers.

Twice all-state middle guard Kelvin Roehrs of Lincoln Southeast and Lincoln High's Mike Washington, an all-state linebacker selection as a junior, are the other Capital City scholarship recipients.

Roehrs is 6-2 and 215 pounds and Washington, the state Class A shot put champion last spring, is 5-11 and 220 pounds.

Omaha's scholarship winners are Benson back Bobby Bass (5-5 1/2, 190), South back Mike Burton (5-8 1/2, 170) Westside end Brian Horn (6-3, 195), Burke tackle Barney

Cotton (6-4, 210), Benson tackle Paul Sorensen (6-1, 210), Creighton Prep guard Mark Stroh (6-3, 200) and South guard Oudious Lee (6-3, 215).

"Nebraska's Class A football would compare with any football in the country," praises Osborne. "Seven, eight or nine years ago, I don't think you could have said that. But it gets better each year."

"I'm sure it's happened, but I don't ever recall three players being offered scholarships from the same team," noted Osborne. "I think it's a credit to Lee Zentic's coaching."

"Actually," added Osborne, "I think all the coaches in Lincoln and Omaha do an excellent job. This year's Nebraska players are technically as well prepared as any in the country."

"That includes Texas, which has spring football and big coaching staffs," adds the second-year Cornhusker head coach.

Osborne believes five or six more Nebraska prep products would have been tendered scholarship offers under the old NCAA limit of 45.

"That could have given us 20 to 22 in-state recruits, which probably would have been the highest we've ever offered here," acknowledges Osborne.

Cornhusker in-state recruiting coordinator Clete Fischer, according to Osborne, categorizes this year's overall Nebraska talent among the best ever.

In addition to the 13 firm scholarship offers and the possibility of two or three more, Osborne said his staff will actively encourage from 10 to 15 potential "walk-on" candidates.

"Of course, the standards are higher now and the selection process is more critical," notes Osborne.

The two players apparently next highest in priority on the NU recruiting list are tackles Dan Stemer (6-3, 220) of Class B Columbus Scottus and John Havekost (6-4, 197) of Class C Scribner.

Among some of the other first-rate prep players highly scrutinized by the Nebraska coaching staff are Lincoln Southeast quarterback Tim Hager, Lincoln Northeast halfback Dan Cass, Lincoln High tackle Randy Taft, Omaha Roscelli quarterback Kevin Quinn, Fremont Bergan back Tom Vering and Omaha Ryan end Pete Marinkovich.

East coach Lee Zentic expressed pleasure that three of his players landed scholarship offers.

According to Zentic, "Holmes always has had the speed and killer instinct to be branded a major college prospect, even when he was a sophomore."

But Selko and Thiessen have been classic examples of what an athlete can accomplish with self-improvement, Zentic says.

"Thiessen did not even make the reserve team when he was a sophomore," points out Zentic, "and Selko's feet looked like they were lodged in concrete slabs when he was a sophomore."

"But both worked hard in the off-season and competed in other sports," adds Zentic. "They sacrificed to improve themselves and maximized their abilities."

That's what athletes are all about," Zentic believes, adding "that it's the story of America, too — starting at the bottom and working to the top. Yes, I'm proud to see something like that happen."

Kansas Jolted By Washington

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — Tall and talented Washington, trailing most of the way, struck back on the shooting of Larry Jackson and Clarence Ramsey and jolted ninth-ranked Kansas, 74-64, for the Jayhawk Classic basketball championship Saturday night.

Darryl Brown scored a layup as the final gun sounded, ending an uphill surge that gave Fordham a 67-65 triumph over Temple and third place.

The thing that really spelled Kansas' doom was a period of three minutes, 29 seconds in the last 6:26 when the Jayhawks failed to score a point. During this spell, Jackson sank two field goals that gave the undefeated Huskies a 62-58 lead and James Edwards and Chester Dorsey followed with baskets that swelled their team's lead to eight points with 3:11 to go.

Roger Morningstar came up with a Kansas basket before Edwards hit an other free throw to put the Huskies up by seven. After Norm Cook connected with a Kansas free throw, Ramsey made good on Washington's fifth three-point play of the game to widen the gap to nine points with 2:28 left.

Washington needed four minutes to score at the game's outset and made only one other basket, a 15-footer by Ramsey, during the first 7½ minutes. However, Kansas was able to build up only an 8-4 advantage by that time.

Kansas led almost continuously until a shot by Edwards tied the game at 56-56 at the 7:52 mark. Kansas, 4-3, held a 36-33 half-time lead over the Huskies, 5-0.

Ramsey was the game's high-scorer with 22 points followed by Morningstar, who had 18.

Only 25 seconds before Brown's shot, Kevin Washington hit a five-foot jump shot that tied the game, 65-65.

The victorious Rams, who held a 29-28 advantage at half-time, trailed, 58-50, with four minutes, 31 seconds remaining. Brown tipped one in to reduce Temple's lead to six points and Marty Stahurski, who made 20 points for the Owls, sank a free throw to make Temple's lead seven points.

Stan Frankoski hit a 25-footer and Kevin Fallon a 15-foot shot that sliced Temple's lead to three points with 2:51 remaining. Stahurski came up with two more free throws.

Fordham, 3-2, pulled within two points on a three-point play by Brown.

Brown's next shot, a four-footer, tied the battle at 63-63 with 1:36 to go, and Kevin Collins gave Fordham its first lead since midway in the second half by dumping a nine-foot strike.

Fallon led all scorers with 21 points. Temple is 2-3.

Denver — Pete Studenski, Gene Mackie and Larry Gerard pipped Nebraska to its first major gymnastics invitational win ever as the Huskers out-distanced Iowa State to win the Rocky Mountain Open here Saturday.

Studenski, a senior, won the rings event while Mackie placed third in the all-around, fourth in the long horse and seventh in the horizontal bar events.

Gerard, a freshman from Lincoln Southeast, earned a fourth place tie in the all-around, seventh in the parallel bars, and third in the horizontal bars.

The win was the first for Nebraska over Iowa State since 1963. Iowa State won the NCAA championship four times in the last six years.

The Huskers also defeated highly touted Southern Illinois and Arizona State among the 13 schools competing in the two day meet.

"We knew we had the capability to win a major meet like this," said NU coach Francis Allen, whose team finished fourth in the meet last year and runnerup to SIU and Iowa State last week in the Windy City Invitational.

"We were just able to put it together this time for the win," said Allen.

"This should give us the added incentive we will need to win the Big Eight title and will give us more team unity," he concluded.

Creighton Edges St. Louis, 66-64

Creighton saw its 36-24 half-time lead diminish under the scoring pressure of McKinney and Ken Loddeke who led St. Louis with 18 points each.

FREMONT, Neb. (AP) — Midland College went ahead of Simpson College midway in the first half and held on to win Saturday night, 56-51.

ISU Edges TCU

AMES, Iowa (AP) — Four-placed Iowa State snapped a four-game losing string with a 91-90 victory Saturday over Texas Christian in the first meeting ever between the two teams.

Hot-shooting Hercle Ivy, though limited to less than 20 minutes playing time because of foul trouble, still popped in 20 points to pace the victory.

Team mate Art Johnson added 19 before he was sidelined with his fifth foul, 6:52 from the end.

Texas Christian, which led 42-38 at intermission, had 22 points from Tom Bledsoe and 16 from Rick Hersley.

A Hilton Coliseum record 58 fouls were whistled, including 31 against the Horned Frogs. The total was also the most ever called in an Iowa State game.

The Cyclones won down the stretch on the shooting of Ivy and three clutch free throws by freshman reserve guard Chuck Fritz.

Iowa State led by Larry Looft's 14 rebounds dominated the backboard by a 57-43 margin.

The Cyclones canned 36 of 84 field goals for 43 per cent while TCU hit 34 of 70 for nearly 49 per cent.

The Cyclones face Drake here Thursday.

Adams Lifts Oklahoma

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Junior center Alvan Adams fired in 31 points and grabbed 21 rebounds to lead the 19th ranked Oklahoma Sooners to a 71-56 college basketball victory over Furman here Saturday night.

Adams tallied four points just before intermission to knot the game 29-29. Until then, neither team could gain more than four points on the other as the lead changed hands five times.

Furman opened the second half with two straight goals by Clyde Mayes—the Paladin's final lead.

Furman, plagued by 13 second-half turnovers, then watched as the Sooners came back and drove to a 19-point lead with 5:00 remaining.

Mayes snared seven rebounds and was high scorer for Furman with 22 points.

Sooner Coach Joe Ramsey said, "I have no doubt in my mind that Furman will repeat as Southern Conference champions: I was impressed with them."

He praised Mayes saying, he "keeps coming at you even though they are behind."

"I thought John Gordon did a good job on Mayes. We figured he would have 20 to 30 points and we wanted to hold him down as much as possible," Ramsey added.

The win gave the Sooners a 4-1 season mark, while the Paladins fell to 1-2.

Behring Paces N.E. Tech

NORFOLK, Neb. (AP) — Northeast Technical Community College got a career high 30 points from Norm Behring as the Blackhaws rolled over Nebraska Western College Saturday night, 96-74.

Northeast opened up a 51-40 halftime lead and widened the margin in the second half to run their season record to 5-6.

Nebraska Western lost its second game of the year to go with five victories.

Fourth-Ranked Louisville Wins

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (UPI) — Twenty-one points and a strong rebounding effort by forward Wesley Cox paced Louisville to a 84-75 come-from-behind victory over a scrappy Florida State team Saturday night.

Fourth-ranked Louisville trailed by three points four times during the second half before opening up the margin with almost four minutes to play.

The lead changed hands four times in the second half. A basket by FSU's Zach Perkins put the Seminoles ahead 48-45 with five minutes gone. But Cox, who scored 11 points in the second half, quickly added two points to the Louisville score and like Whitfield followed with an inside shot that gave the Cardinals a 49-48 with 1:19 on the clock.

Motivation Wins Bowls

The 'new' football season is underway. After a two-week layoff following the completion of the regular season, Nebraska coach Tom Osborne reassembled his Huskers for conditioning drills. Tomorrow they don pads and get back into full swing.

It's just like starting all over again. That's what makes the outcome of bowl games so difficult to forecast. The players on some bowl teams are never motivated quite enough to regain the same level of proficiency they maintained during the regular campaign.

The problem of getting a team 'up' for a post season game is an understandably difficult one for a coach. The players, after a rugged three-month schedule, enjoy a couple of weeks off. Realistically, that includes a few beers, laying around watching some daytime TV instead of sweating on the practice field, and chasing girls at night.

Then the coach comes around and says, "Okay men, let's really buckle down again so we can beat Siwash U. in the Mud Bowl."

A lot of factors enter the picture, dictating whether or not a team is likely to respond. Will such a victory cap off a highly successful season? Could a win give the team the national championship? Will the team advance in the final national ratings with a win?

Thoughts From Florida

Jack Hairston, sports editor of the Gainesville, Fla., newspaper had some interesting ideas on the subject relative to the upcoming Florida-Nebraska clash in the Sugar Bowl when we visited the Gator campus a couple of weeks ago.

"When the matchup was first announced," Hairston said, "I figured Nebraska would be a prohibitive favorite. But now I see a lot of little things that really even it up."

"I'd be the last guy in the world to suggest that a great, traditional bowl like the Sugar is a comedown to Nebraska," he continued, "but the facts are that Nebraska has played such nationally-known powers as LSU, Alabama, Notre Dame and Texas in its last four bowl games. This Sugar Bowl game will represent Nebraska's sixth straight bowl appearance — and they've won all the other five."

"Two of those previous bowl game victories produced national championships for the Cornhuskers. Those games meant the world and all to the NU players. They really got up for it."

"But now," Jack went on with his analysis, "they are coming off an 8-3 regular season record to play a Florida team that has never had that much national recognition. Now 8-3 isn't bad — there aren't many in the nation this year who have a better mark — but Nebraska hasn't lost three regular season games since 1968 — six seasons ago."

Great For Florida

"Florida is also coming off an 8-3 regular season," Hairston points out, "but in the case of the Gators, that is far and away the best record for Florida since 1969."

"Florida is not used to being in the big time and to them, this Sugar Bowl game and the chance to play a nationally recognized power like Nebraska, becomes a really big deal. And that could become a real qualifier on New Year's Eve."

"Florida can end one of its most successful seasons ever with a win over Nebraska. But the same does not hold true for the Cornhuskers. If Nebraska catches this apathy, as it so easily could, I won't be surprised at all if Florida were to win."

There's no question but what the Florida players are motivated. The same should hold true for the Huskers. The Sugar Bowl represents an opportunity to end another fine, highly successful season on a sweet note.

The Oklahoma game caused the regular season to conclude in less than spectacular fashion. The Sugar Bowl represents a second chance. Personal pride, a great tradition and 15,000 red-clad fans who will follow the team to New Orleans should be plenty of incentive for the Huskers to make it six bowl wins in a row (to tie a national record).

Carlen Assumes So. Caro. Post

COLUMBIA, S. C. (AP) — The Paul Dietzel era has ended at the University of South Carolina and the onetime national champion football coach remained incommunicado Saturday on his future plans.

Dietzel, who had resigned as head football coach earlier, was replaced Friday as athletic director. Jim Carlen of Texas Tech was named head football coach and Dietzel's administrative assistant, former Rice coach Harold "Bo" Hagan, was appointed athletic director.

Announcing the changes Friday, T. Eston Marchant, chairman of the university's board of trustees, said Dietzel would be offered the post of vice president in charge of university relations. Those duties were not spelled out but it was understood it would mainly involve ticket sales.

Neither was the salary announced and efforts to reach Dietzel as to whether he will accept the offer have been unsuccessful. A spokesman at Dietzel's home said he was out of town and could not be reached by telephone.

Dietzel came to South Carolina nine years ago from Army with a reputation as one of the brightest coaches in the business. His West Point record was only fair but the luster of being named coach of the year in 1958 at Louisiana State was well remembered.

In nine years at South Carolina, Dietzel compiled a 45-53-1 record. He resigned as head football coach after the second game this year, effective with the end of the season. He said at the time he wanted to remain athletic director. The Gamecocks ended the year with a 4-7 record.

Carlen, 37-18-1 in five years at Texas Tech, signed a five-year contract with South Carolina for an annual salary of $42,300, the same Dietzel received as both head football coach and athletic director.

The shakeup also involved Frank McGuire, the man who has helped make South Carolina a major basketball power. McGuire had been a candidate for athletic director to replace Dietzel "if the job comes open," but was named instead to the new post of associate director in addition to his duties as head basketball coach.

Contacted in New York, where he was on a scouting and recruiting trip, McGuire said he was not aware he was being considered for associate athletic director.

"No one discussed the arrangements with me," McGuire said. "I wasn't aware of what was going on and therefore I can't comment on something I don't know anything about."

New ABA Head Seen

NEW YORK (AP) — Bob Cochran, broadcast coordinator for the National Football League, reportedly is the leading candidate to succeed Ted Munchak as American Basketball Association commissioner, the Associated Press learned Saturday night.

The ABA's Board of Trustees will meet here Wednesday to discuss the situation, and possibly vote on a replacement for Munchak, who has said that he wants to relinquish the position in order to concentrate on setting up an expansion franchise in Cincinnati for next season.

Napoles Earns KO

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Jose Napoles of Mexico retained his world welterweight boxing crown by knocking out challenger Horacio Saldano of Argentina in the third round of their title fight here Saturday.

It was the 12th successful defense of the title by Napoles, who scored his knockout at one minute and 55 seconds of the third round.

Napoles was in complete control of the fight from the outset, punishing the challenger, who is at least a decade younger at 27 than the champion, with rocket rights, combinations and stinging lefts to the body.

The end came with a clean right cross that set Saldano on his seat after a combination sent Saldano's mouthpiece flying into the crowd.

Napoles, whose official age is 34, is thought actually to be at least 37. The Cuban-born fighter weighed 146½ pounds to 143 for the Argentine challenger.

Napoles, now a Mexican citizen, earned $100,000, while Saldano, fighting for the first time outside his native country, was paid $20,000.

A crowd of about 15,000 watched the bout in the copper-domed Sports Palace. The fight was carried on nationwide television in Mexico and via satellite to Argentina.

Napoles set out from the start to display the mastery of the boxing art that has given him a 72 victories against five defeats. Saldano, who now has a 51-11-4 record, backpedaled throughout the first two rounds trying to stay out of reach of the deadly fists of the man whose smooth style long ago earned him the nickname "Butter."

Saldano was in a neutral corner when the end came trying to ward off the blows Napoles was throwing with lightning speed. A right to the chin ended the flurry and sent Saldano staggering backwards a step before sitting down on the canvas next to the ropes. He struggled to get his

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Coach Bud Grant of Minnesota used what he described as "a little gimmick that works sometimes" to help the Vikings beat the Kansas City Chiefs, 35-15, Saturday in a nationally televised National Football League game.

"We kept 14 men on the field until a play was called when the Chiefs had the ball," explained Grant. "When a good, veteran quarterback like Len Dawson is playing, he will look to see who you've got in the game."

"If there are extra defensive linemen or extra defensive backs, he'll play accordingly. So we kept our guys on the field until the play was called."

"Why did we use it today? Because they had a guy like Dawson at quarterback."

Grant said he thought the Vikings had a psychological advantage in the game with the Chiefs.

"We have a playoff game to look forward to next week," he said. "All they've got to look forward to is packing to go home."

The Chiefs' 23-7 victory over the Vikings in the 1970 Super Bowl also may have figured in the Minnesota victory Saturday. After that game, Chiefs Coach Hank Stram labeled his attack as "the offense of the '70s."

"One of our defensive players came into our dressing room today at halftime, grinned, and said, 'The offense of the '70s didn't score a touchdown, did it?'"

Stram said, "They did a good job on us. Next year we'll have to do everything possible to turn things around."

Fran Tarkenton and Bob Berry shared equal playing time and each threw two touchdown strikes as the Vikings breezed from behind.

Tarkenton, with his team trailing 6-0, hit Sam McCullum with both of his payoff pitches, one a 34-yarder and the other, a 10-yard toss that was deflected into McCullum's outstretched fingertips.

Berry, who took over at the start of the second half, drilled a seven-yarder to Ed Marinaro midway through the third quarter and tossed three yards to Oscar Reed for another in the fourth.

With a minute remaining, running back Brent McClanahan rolled six yards into the end zone for Minnesota's final six points. Fred Cox converted each time.

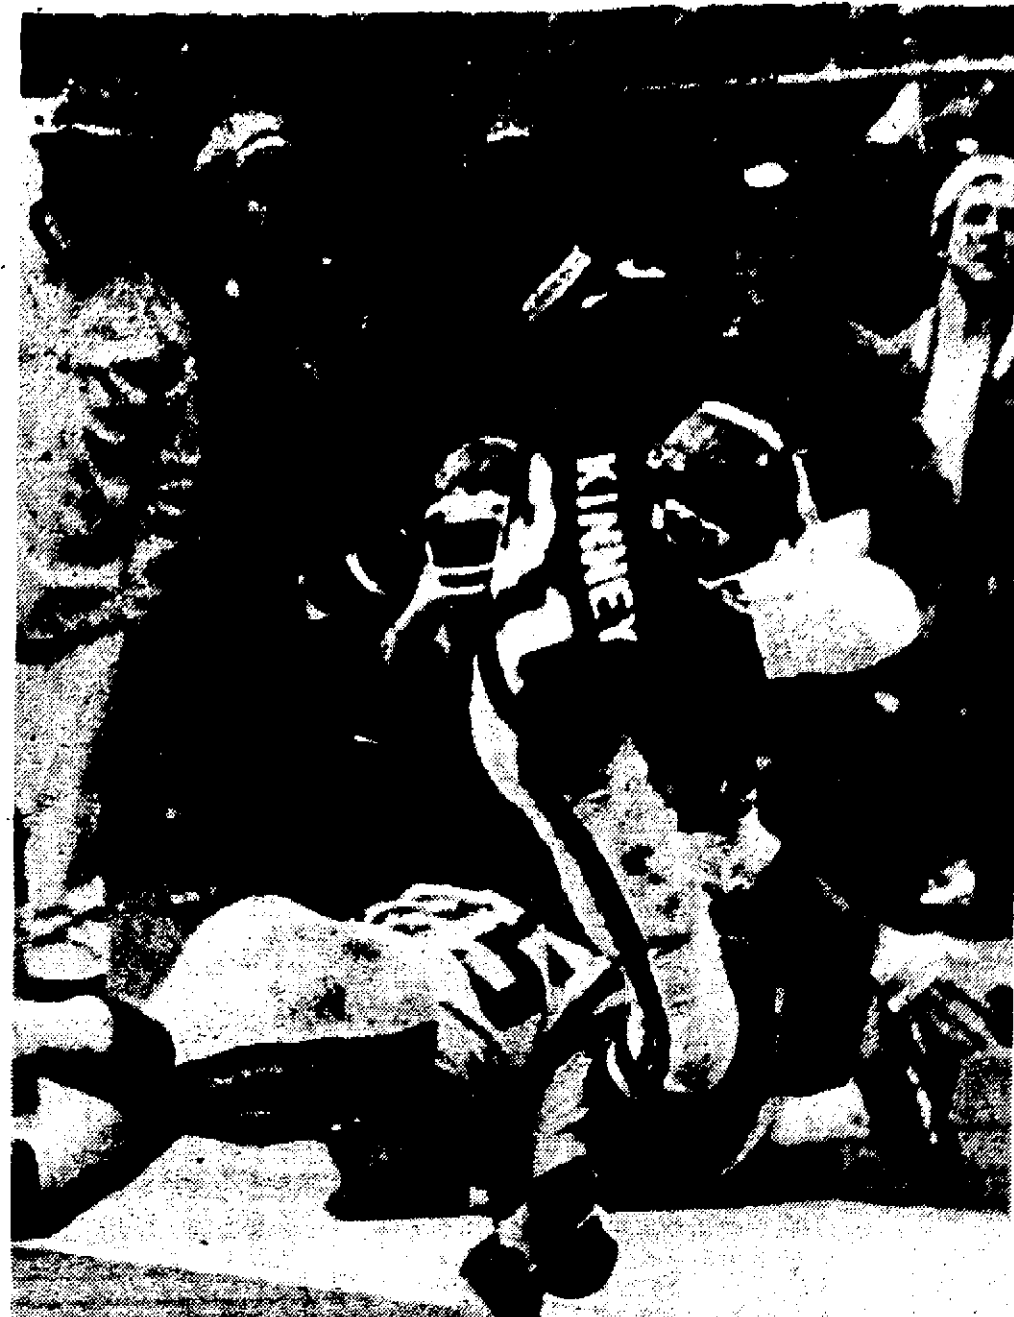

Emmitt Thomas, the National Football League interception leader, picked off a Tarkenton pass on the last scrimmage play of the first half and ran 73 yards for Kansas City's only touchdown.

Jan Stenerud, who kicked field goals of 37, 32 and 29 yards, missed the extra-point try.

A crowd of only 35,480 watched the regular season finale for both clubs. Even more, 36,934, failed to show up, many passing up the game because of hard, steady morning and early-afternoon rains.

NC State Defeats Oregon

Greensboro, N.C. (UPI) — All-American David Thompson netted 26 points and his teammate Morris Rivers 26 points to drive top-ranked North Carolina State University to a 86-73 win over 16-ranked Oregon State here Saturday night.

Thompson, who put State out in front for the first time 17-16 at 8:51 in the first half, went on to score 17 points and Rivers 16 to carry the wolfpack into the locker rooms at halftime with a slim 37-36 lead.

Playing before a capacity audience of 11,924 persons at Memorial auditorium, the defending national champions outscored Oregon 17-7 during the first five minutes of the second half to widen their lead over the Ducks to 54-43.

Oregon, paced by Lonnie Shelton with 22 points and Don Smith with 14, was unable to get closer than nine points throughout the second half.

Shelton pulled down 19 rebounds while state's top rebounder, Phil Spence, took only 10.

PEORIA, Ill. (AP) — Jim Caruthers hit 22 points and freshman Roger Phegley added 20 points to lift Bradley to an 88-71 win over Loyola of Chicago Saturday night in college basketball action.

Bradley held a 42-38 halftime edge but hit 60 per cent of its shots in the second half to pull away from Loyola.

Loyola lead 36-32 with four minutes left in the first half, but Bradley reeled off eight consecutive points and never relinquished the lead.

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Third-ranked Indiana scored 15 straight points late in the first half, then overwhelmed Texas A&M in the second half Saturday night for a 90-55 college basketball victory behind Scotty May's 19 points.

The game was close for the first 15 minutes, but in the next four minutes Indiana fired in 15 points and held the Aggies scoreless to take control of the game for their fifth straight victory without a loss.

Toledo Topped By Marquette

Milwaukee, Wis. (UPI) — The seventh-ranked Marquette Warriors took a leaf from their opponents' book Saturday night and posted a 64-61 win over the Toledo Rockets.

Toledo, employing a sticky zone defense, played even with the Warriors throughout most of the game. The Rockets led 33-31 at the half and 42-35 early in the second half.

Then Marquette coach Al McGuire put his Warriors in a zone identical to Toledo's and they took the lead 47-44 when Lloyd Walton scored on a three-point play with 11:31 remaining.

Vols, Terps To Initiate Bowl Slate

Memphis (AP) — Neither of the opposing coaches in Monday night's Liberty Bowl matchup between Maryland and Tennessee paws the ground in Aw-Shucks modesty while talking about his football team.

"You're going to like our team," says Maryland's Jerry Claiborne.

"After we were 2-3-1 this season, I guess we could have thrown in the towel," said Tennessee's Bill Battle. "We were all taking a lot of criticism and a lot of things were being said about us — not much of it good. But we had played some great football teams with a key injury or two, and we bowed our neck and fought back and came on strong."

The Vols finished 6-3-2 to attract their 10th straight bowl bid. The 10th-ranked Terps were 8-3 in the regular season.

Now, they face each other in the first major bowl game of the season, to be televised by ABC-TV.

The bowl parade that will follow will include Miami Ohio-Georgia in the Tangerine Bowl on Dec. 21, North Carolina State-Houston in the Astro-Bluebonnet Bowl Dec. 23, Vanderbilt-Texas Tech in the Peach Bowl and Mississippi State-North Carolina in the Sun Bowl on Dec. 28. Auburn meets Texas in the Gator Bowl Dec. 30, Florida plays Nebraska in the Sugar Bowl Dec. 31 and Penn State takes on Baylor in the Cotton, while Ohio State plays Southern Cal in the Rose and Alabama battles Notre Dame in the Orange Bowl on New Year's Day.

Claiborne's assessment of his team gets no argument from Battle.

"They're a great team that can do a lot of things well," Battle said. "They are a predominately senior ball club, which means they are experienced and knowledgeable and it all shows."

The Terp defense shut out five opponents this season and Battle says "that's almost unheard of in this day."

The defense is anchored by tackle Randy White, winner of the Outland Trophy, symbolic of the nation's top collegiate lineman.

"Randy is the best I've ever seen," Claiborne said.

Both sides will bring established big-play people into the battle. For Maryland, it's quarterback Bob Avellini, tailback Louis Carter and receivers Walter White and Frank Russell.

"They can throw and they can run," Battle said. "We've got to be able to stop their running game. If we can, you have a better chance of stopping the passing game."

Phillies' Roberts Unusual Nominee for Hall of Fame

By James A. Michener
The New York Times

Philadelphia — When a man lives in Philadelphia, he quickly learns that New York is really the Big Apple, and when he is crazy about sports, as I am, he also learns that any ballplayer lucky enough to land on a New York team is automatically three cubits taller.

Part of the problem is the writers. A New York team does even moderately well, Leonard Koppett rushes into print or Dick Schaap rushes on the air with a beautifully written opus that makes the team sound three times better than it was.

The 76ers put together one of the best balanced basketball teams of all time, with Wilt Chamberlain, Bill Cunningham and Hal Greer, but no Philadelphia writer does anything about it. The Knicks assemble a pretty good ball club, with Willis Reed, Walt Frazier and Bill Bradley, and Pete Axthelm announces it as the greatest team ever to play, which it may have been for one season.

Even when the Mets were the worst team in baseball, New York writers were able to transmute them into a national treasure with hilarious stories of their ineptitude. The Phillies used to have nine players worse than Marv Throneberry, but no local writers ever immortalized them.

Therefore, we Philadelphia fans were not surprised last year when the sports writers of the nation elected Whitey Ford to the Baseball Hall of Fame while ignoring Robin Roberts.

True, Ford had a lifetime record of only 236 victories while Roberts had 286. The important fact was the Ford had been the subject of hilarious stories during his entire career. He owned a race horse he drove at state fairs. He was photographed drinking beer with his cronies. He was good copy and a delightful human being, and he had played for the Yankees in 11 World Series, often winning the big game.

Roberts, on the other hand, had played for the Phillies, which of itself brings his intelligence into question. He was a big capable quiet man around whom stories did not accumulate. A university graduate, he conducted himself like the gentleman he was, pitched his heart out while the team was giving him no runs and compiled a dazzling record.

But he was not colorful. His teammate, Richie Ashburn, wrote of him the other day: "Despite the fact that Roberts was a pitcher, he has some good qualities. He is a good family man, he goes to church regularly. He's honest. He pays his bills. And he's a Republican."

No better description of a Philadelphia athlete has ever been written, but it doesn't create the charisma a man needs to gain entrance into the Hall of Fame.

Let me, as a Philadelphia writer striving to compete against the canny word-slingers of New York, try a two-fold attack — statistical first, sentimental second.

Roberts won more games than 27 of the pitchers already in the Hall of Fame. Dizzy Dean won only 150, Lefty Gomez 189. Sandy Koufax 165 and Dazzy Vance 197. Even the mighty Bob Feller, pitching always for a team that was in contention, won only 266 games, 20 fewer than Roberts.

And Roberts compiled his record while pitching for an essentially second-division team. Ford's Yankees finished first 11 times, Roberts' Phillies once. Ford's team finished last only once, Roberts' team six times, sometimes so deep they had to light flares to see the scoreboard.

To understand the difference in support given these two great pitchers, take the 1956 season. Ford was backed by three powerful hitters — Mickey Mantle at .353, Gil McDougald at .311, and Moose Skowron at .308. Mantle hit 52 home runs as the Yankees led their league with 190. They scored an average of 5.5 runs a game.

Roberts was supported by more restrained slugging. His three top hitters were Richie Ashburn at .303 and Elmer Valo and Solly Hemus, .289. Stan Lopata hit 32 home runs, but the team managed only 121. It scored only 4.3 runs a game, but Roberts had an amazing 19-18 season, losing many games by distressingly close margins.

That Roberts should have compiled his lifetime record with such support is a miracle. He might have been even better except for two weaknesses. He allowed the batter to dig in at home plate because everyone knew he would never throw at a batter's head. And he failed to develop a curve ball.

He told me the other day. "I had a high fastball and I either overpowered them or they overpowered me." One teammate said. "He was a man without guile. A big handsome lunk. Nothing ever fazed him. He just went out there and threw that high, hard one."

I have always thought it proper that the most colorful figures be inducted first into the Hall of Fame. Lefty Gomez,

Roller Rinks Experiencing Prosperity

Chicago (UPI) — If Bert Anselmi cringes when a roller derby girl dumps an opponent over a guard rail, it's because his brand of roller skating is for family outings, scouting groups and Sunday school children.

Anselmi is the president of the Roller Skating Rink Operators Association of America, and he also operates his own rink, the Rolladium in Pontiac, Mich.

A former professional skater, he and his wife, Marilyn, have won trophies as a skate-dance team. Their children skate in national competition.

Anselmi also is a businessman. He is trying to capture his share of the recreational dollar, and a major effort in that direction has been the development of rinks in sound business areas.

Surveys now determine where rinks figure to prosper. The association also recognizes the need to reverse an old image that roller rinks are usually located in broken down warehouses or abandoned garages.

"Those eyesores are a thing of the past," Anselmi said. "We know they were a black eye and we're doing something about it."

New rinks are recommended in areas with populations of no less than 75,000 persons within a five mile radius of the site, Anselmi said.

"Our suggestions for a new rink call for plenty of lighting, climate control, instructors and crowd control personnel and design. We forbid the sale or consumption of alcoholic beverages and provide snack shops and vending machines, depending on the type of rink the operator is building."

"We recommend that new rinks go up on city or town outskirts on no less than two acres of land which includes parking. Minimum size is around 18,000 square feet and maximum depends on the operator, although a few go over 40,000," Anselmi said.

An investment range of from $200,000 to $1 million will handle a modern rink of the type Anselmi's group recommends. "That's enough to make the operators insist on keeping a clean operation... that's what's going to get back skaters."

Anselmi said there are 20 million skaters in the nation and 2,500 rinks. The return of skaters to new rinks has been gaining momentum, he said. In the last two years nearly 100 new rinks have been added to his organization.

"As far as recreation goes," Anselmi said, "roller skating is a lot better than jogging."

"There still are places where rinks are resisted, mostly in small towns where they had problems in the old days."

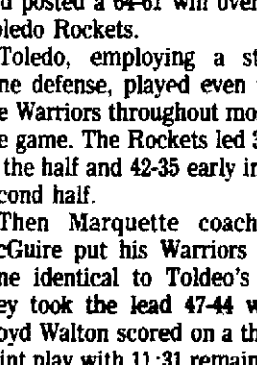

"A recent movie on roller derbies didn't help us, either."

Steps taken by operators to encourage more rink usage include competition in roller hockey and in figure, dance and speed skating on a national level with winners competing internationally.

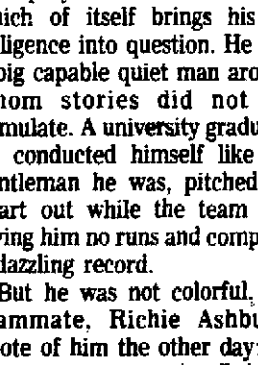

The association boasts members in the United States, New Zealand, Australia, Japan, Brazil and Europe. "There is some specialization, too," Anselmi said. "The Italians go for speed; the South Americans like hockey and Americans prefer figure and dancing."

Youth Outdoor Encounter Program Organizing in Nebraska

By Tom Vint
Outdoor Writer

Nebraska has moved one step closer toward its own version of an on-going Outward Bound program following the first of several fund raising breakfasts in Lincoln last week.

Outward Bound is a Colorado-based organization making use of an outdoor experience, stress factors and group encounters in helping participants better understand themselves and their environment. It builds self-confidence and character, according to those having experienced an Outward Bound encounter.

Nebraska Outdoor Encounter will attempt to create a similar atmosphere, according to coordinator Gary Gabelhouse of the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission.

"It's a very unique educational tool," corporation president George Easley pointed out. "A lot of young kids are able to relate to the outdoors. It provides a great teaching environment and gives the kids and administrators a better understanding of themselves and their roles in life."

Nebraska Outdoor Encounter won't have the mountains of Colorado or the white water rivers cutting through the steep, rocky cliffs. But it will make use of Nebraska's own terrain for its programs aimed at high school age students.

Gabelhouse and Easley are currently heading a drive to promote funding for the program. They're in need of funds to purchase backpacking equipment, sleeping bags, tents, and food. The initial goal is for purchase of 20 sets of equipment to get the program off the ground, according to Easley.

"There is a need for a different type of educational approach for today's kids," Gabelhouse said. "There is nothing like this now in Nebraska. It's kind of the traditional versus modern approach to education. We treat our kids like they're simply an information bank. We waste a lot of what we teach because the student may not be fully aware of what it's all about in relation to himself."

"The outdoor encounter helps them understand themselves and others. Then, with this base, they can better understand and learn from the world around them."

A first Nebraska outdoor encounter was made in October, 1973, by Gabelhouse and other Lincolinites. Twelve students made a week-long backpack journey through Halsey National Forest north of North Platte. According to at least one Lincoln school administrator, the encounter produced a marked improvement over his participants in that trip.

Gabelhouse indicates several other states around the nation are currently using outdoor encounter programs in their school systems to improve the learning capacity of youngsters.

The Nebraska Outdoor Encounter Corporation is aiming to provide the public backing in the initial stage. Then a federal grant will be requested for further funding. Easley hopes the program will eventually evolve into the public school systems itself.

"That's how it works in Denver," Easley said of the public school potential of the program. "They even have sixth grade kids repelling rock slopes out there."

Gabelhouse and Easley said the Nebraska program, although using the basic principle of Outward Bound in building character and confidence, the Nebraska Outdoor Encounter program will not involve the severe survival-like stress factors of Outward Bound.

"I don't really believe in all the stress factor principles," Gabelhouse pointed out. "I think you can accomplish basically the same thing without the stress. The primary purpose or trust is to get the students to understand themselves through an outdoor experience. It is an attitudinal trust or emphasis."

The October outdoor encounter participants added their approval through the Nebraska Outdoor Encounter's informational pamphlet:

"It was the first chance I've ever had to really get it all together . . . to really know myself."

"During some of our seasons I saw the complexity of it all . . . food webs, energy chains, ecosystems and all. Then one night I sat alone . . . it was all so simple."

"I never though I could be so filthy yet feel so clean, new and wonderful."

Beginning in February, more Lincoln high school students will have the opportunity to participate in Nebraska Outdoor Encounter expeditions. A mid-February cross country ski-backpack trip is planned, to be followed by backpacking outings March 28-Apr. 5, Apr. 12-19 and May 3-10.

Summer teacher and administrator outings are also planned. For further information on Nebraska Outdoor Encounter, contact Gary Gabelhouse at the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission.

It's All Outdoors

Poaching A Problem

Illegal hunting, commonly called poaching, is still a problem in Nebraska, according to Carl Gettmann, chief of law enforcement for the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission. But progress is being made.

"We've always had something going on," Gettmann said of poaching. "With the increased numbers of people we've had this year, we're getting more people in the field than in past years."

The result has been catching more poachers in the act, day and night, according to the conservation officer supervisor. It takes an effort to get the crook with the evidence and the boys from the Commission are getting lots of help.

"We're getting excellent cooperation from sheriffs' offices, police, land owners and other hunters," Gettmann related. "People, I'd say, are getting fed up with this promiscuous shooting."

Gettmann points out the type of people being caught represent about any group you'd care to name. "There are rural people as well as city people. There are students and some people with pretty fair jobs," he said, adding it doesn't make any difference who it might be.

Deer Primary Target

The whitetail and mule deer seem to be the most popular target for poachers, according to Gettmann. The most popular method is called "spotlighting." This makes use of strong flashlights shining in an animal's eyes to locate the animal and temporarily blind it prior to shooting it at night.

According to Gettmann, night-time poachers often make use of the raccoon hunting guise to cover up deer poaching. Of course, this makes the legitimate coon hunters extremely irate.

"The real coon hunter who just enjoys going out to tree coons is just madder than hell about this," Gettmann revealed. "It isn't fair to the guy who tries to do things right, within the law."

So, in turn, the coon hunters have been a big help in turning in poachers to authorities. Add another arm for the law.

"There are some people who are out there to get what they can get," Gettmann said. "We're to the point of checking every light we see at night. We stop a lot of guys who say they are out coon hunting. Some even shoot a coon or two for cover but we're after the guy who has that set of horns."

The concerted effort has already brought a bunch of those types to court.

Eagle Problem, Too

And while Nebraska's conservation officers crack down on in-state poachers, federal agents have been busy cracking a ring of eagle smugglers across the nation.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service reports more than 60 persons in 10 states have been arrested for illegal trafficking bald and golden eagles and eagle feathers in recent months.

The birds or feathers have been sold as tourist or collectors' items. Eagle killing and/or selling of eagles or parts of eagles, is illegal nationwide. Hawks are also illegally taken under the Migratory Bird Treaty Act.

States in which such activity has taken place include Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, South Dakota, Colorado, Wyoming, Idaho, Montana and Oregon.

The Bald Eagle Protection Act carries a maximum fine of $5,000 and up to one year in jail for a first offense while the Migratory Bird Treaty Act provides for a $2,000 fine and two years in jail.

The only major flaw in the system is few, if any, of the persons caught red-handed are subjected to maximum punishments. Too often punishments are too lenient to prevent recurrence by the same or other parties.

Winter Sporting Accidents Still Prevalent

Snowmobile Injuries Predictable

By Harvey Duck
(c) 1974, Chicago Daily News

Snowmobiles again have begun to crisscross the frozen northwoods fields much to the consternation of law enforcement personnel.

Although snowmobile manufacturers continue to emphasize safety features, adding fresh protective devices each season, there's one area over which they have no control: people.

A manufacturer may put together the finest vehicle imaginable, make it as safe to operate as can be, but once it leaves the showroom floor the only thing left for him to do is to cross his fingers and hope for the best.

Hopes, though, don't mean a thing once the ignition key is turned on and Big City Johnnie begins making like super-driver.

Common sense and caution are ignored as he blasts off at full throttle, regardless of the terrain, snow conditions or lack of visibility.

The Michigan Department of Natural Resources, concerned over last season's 1,505 accidents and 21 fatalities, compiled this profile of a typical snowmobile accident. Based on its 1973-74 tabulation of accidents (actual figures are higher because many accidents are not reported) the DNR contends:

- The most likely time is between 5 and 11 p.m., on a weekend during December, January or February.
- The average driver of the vehicle will be between 16 and 25, but will be rated as experienced with between 100 to 500 hours of snowmobile operation.
- He (or she) will not have had any formal driving training.
- The machine will be in good working order.
- The driver will be wearing a helmet.
- He will be sober and traveling on a roadway or trail.

Weather and snow conditions will be near-perfect. Temperature will be between 11 to 20 degrees above zero and snow will be packed.

The accident will most likely occur because of excess speed which is indicated in 26 per cent of the reports.

Ski Gear Changes Injuries

(c) 1974, Newhouse News Service

Washington — Injuries on the ski slopes — some 250,000 a year costing about $12 million — continue unabated despite improvements in ski equipment and skier education, according to a medical study.

The study, which compared the rate and nature of injuries at Mr. Snow Ski resort in Vermont in the 1972-1973 season with an earlier study at the same resort conducted in 1962, was published in The Journal of the American Medical Association.

The frequency of injuries was consistent with a 12-year rate of about 5 injuries per 1,000 skier-days, but the type of injury and the type of injured skier differed between the two surveys, the study said.

In 1972-73, skiers were less likely to suffer ankle and leg injuries than in 1962, and more likely to injure their arms or torsos, the study said.

The expert and intermediate level skiers were more likely to be injured in 1972 than in the earlier survey, although the injuries to beginners stayed about the same.

Ski Gear Changes Injuries

Sprains accounted for 43 per cent of all injuries in both surveys. And fractures made up 35 per cent of all injuries in 1962 and 31 per cent in 1972.

The authors of the study suggested that changes in the location of the injuries could be explained by improvements in

Hunters Serving As Catalyst

San Diego (UPI) — Hunters can do more as a catalyst than any other group to protect natural resources and save wildlife, Interior Secretary Rogers C. B. Morton said this week.

"If we really want to protect the resources and share this planet with other species, I think the hunter probably is the catalyst who'll do more to help us than anyone else," he said.

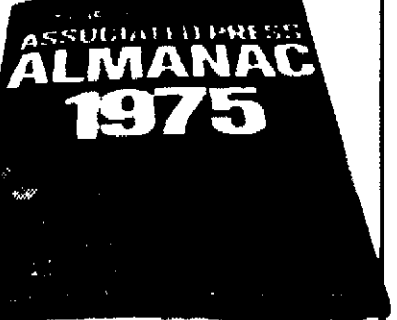

"I think the hunter, with his love of the sport and of the outdoors, is probably the best guarantee we've got in the long run for the preservation of the sport," Morton said. "He accepts the disciplines — the bag limits, the seasonal dates, all the rest. He's willing to pay for his sport in licenses and taxes."

Cardinals-Redskins Vie For NFC Eastern Title

A couple of weeks ago, St. Louis' clinching its first title since 1948 seemed to be a foregone conclusion. The only question appeared to be whether Washington or Dallas would wind up as the runner-up to the Cardinals.

On Sunday, though, the Cards will, for the third straight week, be trying to clinch the National Conference East crown. And no longer can they count on backing into it. They know they've got to win it on their own.

The Cards have lost two in a row and four of their last six games and a once solid lead over the Redskins has vanished. They still need that one victory to sew up the crown they haven't worn since they were divisional champs when they were called the Chicago Cardinals 16 years ago.

With a triumph over the visiting New York Giants — against whom they had to scramble three weeks ago to eke out a 23-21 victory — they'll win the NFC East regardless of what the Redskins do against Chicago since they've beaten Washington in both of their 1974 meetings.

But if the Cards tie or lose and Washington beats the invading Bears, it'll be the Redskins who take the division title and carry it into Minnesota next Saturday in the first round of National Football League playoffs while St. Louis will have to settle for the NFC's wild-card playoff spot and a first-round game next Sunday against the West Division-champion Rams in Los Angeles.

Which team plays which other team in the first round is only part of the importance of the order of finish in the NFC East. What's more important is the fact that a wild-card team can never host a playoff game.

Further, the "priority" for the second round of playoffs in the NFC is East, Central, West. In other words, if the East champion beats Minnesota in the first round, it'll host the NFC title game Dec. 29. If the Vikings win, they'll be the hosts.

So, in part, both the Cards and Redskins are playing not only for first place but for a shot at another home game.

In Sunday's other games it's New England at AFC East champion Miami, AFC wildcard winner Buffalo at NFC West champ Los Angeles, Green Bay at Atlanta, Detroit at Philadelphia, the New York Jets at Baltimore, Cleveland at Houston, Denver at San Diego and New Orleans at San Francisco.

NATIONAL

On Saturday, Cincinnati played at AFC Central champion Pittsburgh, Minnesota was at Kansas City and Dallas visited AFC West champion Oakland.

The Cards were 7-0 at one point but are 9-4 now. They might have been 8-5 at this point had it not been for a decision by Giants' Coach Bill Arnsparger that backfired and helped St. Louis beat New York on Jim Bakken's 36-yard field goal with three seconds to play.

The Giants took a 21-20 lead in that game at Yale Bowl when Craig Morton threw a touchdown pass with barely a minute to play. On the ensuing kickoff, Arnsparger called for a squib kick to keep the ball away from dangerous Terry Metcalf, the league's No. 1 kickoff returner.

But Pete Gogolak's line-drive kick was grabbed by one of the Cards' "up front" men and brought back over midfield and, from about the Giants 45-yard line, St. Louis moved easily to its winning field goal.

The Cards' Jim Hart, who threw two touchdown passes in that game, is just 143 yards away from 2,000 on total offense-rushing, receiving and kickoff and punt returns.

The Redskins, who trailed St. Louis by three games at mid-season, have won five of their last six and are tackling a squad of Bears who have lost six of their last seven.

Billy Kilmer strengthened his hold on the starting quarterback job with his three-touchdown performance against Los Angeles — which Washington will face again in the playoffs if the Cardinals win.

Nevertheless, bench-bound Sonny Jurgensen is sitting pretty in one respect. Only a sensational performance by Kilmer — or perhaps by James Harris of the Rams — can prevent Jurgensen from winning the NFC passing title.

Jurgensen has thrown the ball 145 times, five more than the minimum needed for qualifying for the title, and has completed 93 for 980 yards and 10 touchdowns with only five interceptions. Runner-up Kilmer has hit 137 of 234 passes for 1632 yards and 10 touchdowns and has been intercepted six times.

Like Jurgensen, Ken Anderson of Cincinnati is sitting pretty, albeit uncomfortably. He was kicked in the back last Sunday in the loss to Detroit and will sit out the Bengals' finale in Pittsburgh, all but assured of the AFC passing championship. Wayne Clark will call the signals against the Steelers.

In another game of "statistical" interest, Denver's Otis Armstrong, with a 201-yard lead over his nearest challenger, will wrap up the league's rushing title simply by appearing against San Diego — unless Lawrence McCutcheon of the Rams, the NFC leader with 1,064 yards, rookie Don Woods of the Chargers, with 1,057, or O. J. Simpson of Buffalo, with 1,052, explode for a ton of yardage.

And, finally, Joe Namath just may throw his last pass in the NFL, or perhaps his last for the Jets, in the game against Baltimore. He's playing out his option and is still rumored to be going to another NFL team, perhaps to the World Football League or possibly into television or motion pictures.

Stottlemyre To Coach?

NEW YORK (AP) — A shoulder injury suffered early in the 1974 season has apparently ended the 11-year career of New York Yankees' pitcher Mel Stottlemyre and he may become the team's pitching coach if Whitey Ford decides not to return.

"The decision isn't final but it's beginning to look that way," Yankees' President Gabe Paul said Saturday, referring to speculation regarding Stottlemyre's retirement.

The 33-year-old right-hander posted a 148-123 record in his American League career, all with the Yanks, and did not miss a pitching turn for more than eight years, starting more than 260 consecutive times. He had three 20-victory seasons in that span and finished with 2,389 innings pitched, third on the Yankees' all-time list.

He sustained what was called a torn radiator cuff in his right shoulder last season, spent a month on the disabled list and tried again to pitch in midseason but felt severe pain and was sidelined the rest of the year. He finished 1974 with a 6-7 record, appearing in 16 games covering 113 innings.

After the season, Stottlemyre was examined in Los Angeles by Dr. Robert Kerlan, a noted orthopedic specialist. "Dr. Kerlan examined him thoroughly and told us that an operation will not help him," Paul said. "He could operate and it could be 10 per cent successful and Mel might still not be able to pitch."

Ford, a former Yankee star enshrined in baseball's Hall of Fame, has told Paul he is considering other business propositions and will advise the Yankees before Christmas whether he will return as the team's pitching coach.

If he does not return, Paul said, the job will be offered to Stottlemyre, who succeeded Ford as the ace of the Yankees' staff. They have already discussed the matter but, Paul said, "we can't make any moves in that direction until we hear from Whitey."

Southwest Conference To Use Lie Detectors

DALLAS (UPI) — The Southwest Conference Saturday voted to implement the use of lie detector tests in its investigations of possible league violations, becoming the first collegiate group to take such action.

Conference officials said coaches, athletes and financial backers would be asked to take such tests if it was felt they could supply useful information.

Three attorneys who assisted the league in their discussions said they felt the conference was on solid legal ground to ask for the tests.

"This vehicle is more to prove innocence than to prove guilt," said Cliff Speegle, SWC executive secretary. "You can't force anyone to take the tests."

But conference President Neils Thompson said if an athlete declined to take a polygraph test that player conceivably could be forbidden to compete in the conference.

By a unanimous vote the conference's faculty representatives said that every new contract signed by a head coach would include a provision concerning polygraph tests.

"The institutions will require the coach to give full cooperation in any investigation by the SWC or the NCAA in which information is sought from the coach, and if asked to do so by a conference representative (should) submit to a polygraph test," the new bylaw said.

A similar request could be made of not only students but "a representative of athletic interests."

Thompson, who is also faculty representative from the University of Texas, said Longhorn track coach Cleburne Price was willing to take a polygraph test concerning allegations he loaned money to one or more members of his team even though the new conference rule was not retroactive.

The conference took no action on the University of Texas track matter saying further investigation was needed.

"We are exceedingly impressed and grateful that the coaches, particularly the head football coaches, were willing to move in this direction," Thompson said.

"I think we are in the right where athletes are involved."

"Athletes will have a provision included on their letter on intent form and their financial award form. When it comes to a scholarship you may not be able to do anything because that involves money. But if he declines (a test) he might not be able to participate."

Thompson said that although other athletic conferences might be able to use this new bylaw against the Southwest Conference in recruiting, most coaches felt that "if it bothers them (coaches or athletes) we don't want them in the first place."

Speegle stressed the use of polygraph tests would not become a wholesale method of investigation but only when necessary. He pointed out that since court cases have upheld the NCAA's role as a "voluntary organization," that the conference felt it was legally justified in taking such action.

Shoate Tops Award List

HOUSTON (AP) — Seniors from Ohio State, Southern Methodist, Oklahoma and Maryland were nominated Saturday as finalists for the fifth annual Vince Lombardi Award, symbolic of the nation's outstanding college football line-man.

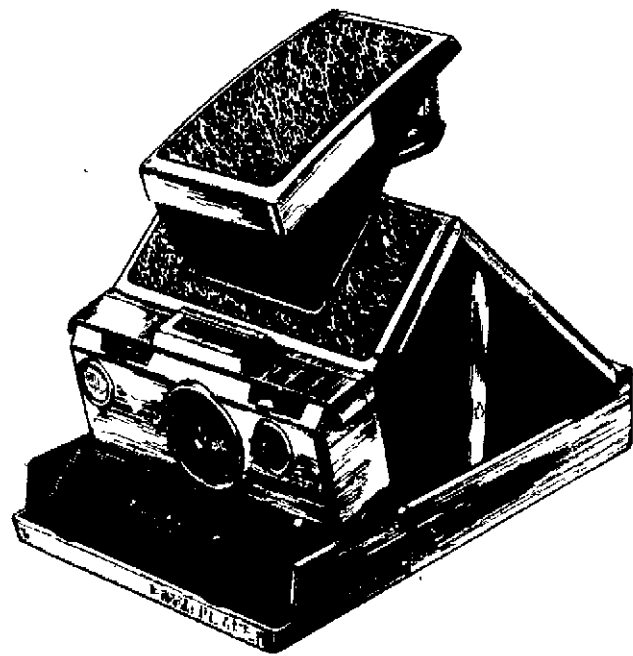

They are Pete Cusick, an Ohio State tackle; Louie Kelcher, who switched from tackle to nose guard this year at Southern Methodist; Rod Shoate, Oklahoma linebacker, and Randy White, Maryland tackle.

The winner will be announced Jan. 16 at a $100-a-plate benefit dinner for the American Cancer Society research program. The award was established in 1970 in memory of Vince Lombardi, the Green Bay and Washington coach who died of cancer.

Heritage Victory To Circle Home

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Circle Home, a full brother to 1974 Kentucky Derby winner Cannonade, raced to the front on the far turn and went on to win the $100,000 Heritage Stakes by three lengths Saturday at Keystone Park.

Michael Hole brought Circle Home out of the pack with a rush on the outside as the field of 10 2-year-olds rounded the far turn into the stretch. The winner was never headed once he took command and was clocked in 1:42 1-5 for the 1 1/16 miles.

Circle Home finished three lengths in front of Singh, who set the pace from the gate under Angel Cordero Jr. Singh took place by four lengths over Master Derby, with the fast finishing Just the Time fourth, another four lengths back.

Circle Home paid $15.60, $7.40 and $4.80 to backers in a crowd of 8,014 and earned $60,000 for his owner, Mrs. John M. Olin.

Mrs. Olin owned Cannonade, who finished third in last year's Heritage at Liberty Bell and went on to win the roses at Churchill Downs.

Circle Home carried top weight of 124 pounds to his third victory in 11 starts and had to come from next-to-last midway through the backstretch to reach the front.

Trainer Woody Stephens, who also handled Cannonade, said he thought Circle H moved too quickly in the backstretch, but he added that Hole just couldn't hold him back.

Circle Home, who won the Kentucky Jockey Club last month at Churchill Downs and later finished third in the Remsen at Aqueduct, came out of the gate ninth, moved up to eighth after a half-mile and then took off.

Following the first four across the finish line were Gallant Bob, Impatient Fool, Take, Fuel Up, Ricks Jet and El Pitirre, winner of the Remsen who was never in the chase.

Stephens said Circle Home would be taken to Florida at the end of next week and rested for the Hialeah racing season.

"We hope to go back to Louisville," said Stephens, apparently envisioning a second straight Kentucky Derby triumph.

Jensen, Northup Lead City Bowling Activity

Lincoln's other bowling Jensen, Gayle, took the spotlight in pin action this week by recording a 769 series at Parkway Lanes.

The series, which included games of 258, 277 and 234, was the best bowled so far this year at Parkway and was the third best rolled in fall leagues.

Jensen, a lefty kegler, just missed second spot, falling one pin shy of Doug Christ's 770 series. High series so far this fall has been a 796 bowled by Monte Steenson. Both Steenson's and Christ's series were rolled at Plaza.

Ruthie Northup led women's action with a fine 257 game, which tied her for third best women's game so far this fall with Vi Ingram. Both Northup's and Ingram's games were at Plaza.

High women's series was shot by Jean Merriman, who recorded a 596 at Parkway while top men's score was 279 by Mick Washburn at Plaza.

In addition to two bowlers, Kirk Vifquain and Larry Siebe, recorded their first 700s. Vifquain got his at Plaza with a 714 while Siebe had a 703 series at Hollywood.

In other action, Mary McGerr recorded a 161 triplicate at Plaza while Pat Kreifels (182-Plaza), Ruth Schwarz (182-Parkway) and Marge Fritchie (179-Parkway) had all spare games.

Humor Part of Sports

Sportscasters may feature wide-ranging broadcasting styles, but they share a common element — humor. They get around enough on the banquet circuit to know what it takes to make a person laugh. They've also been known to laugh at themselves.

We thought you might be interested in hearing some of the favorite notes, jokes and quotes of Metro-area sportscasters Mark Ahmann, Don Gill, Jack Payne and Dick Perry.

Lincoln's KLIN sports director Gill claims a high school coach told him last year that he was only three players away from a state football championship this fall.

"We didn't know then that he meant the Father, the Sun and the Holy Ghost," muses Gill.

Lincoln's KFOR sports director Perry is a native of Osage, Iowa, and enjoys speaking at small town athletic banquets.

"I give all of them a fair and honest definition of a small town. That's where everybody knows what everybody else is doing, but they read the weekly newspaper to find out if they've been caught at it," relates Perry.

Manager Gets Last Laugh

Ahmann, sports director for KOLN-KGIN TV out of Lincoln and Grand Island, played one year of pro baseball with the Yankee farm club at McAlester, Okla.

"I was a second baseman, but I had my problems," admits Ahmann. "One day I couldn't pick up a ground ball and missed the bag. I was having a heck of a time."

"Bill Cope was the manager and came over and told me to stand in the outfield while he showed me how to play second base," offers Ahmann.

"First, he tripped over the bag. Then he threw a ball into left field and another into the stands behind first base."

"I was feeling pretty good watching the manager have his problems, but he got me back to earth in a hurry," according to Ahmann. "He said: 'Ahmann, you've got second base so screwed up, nobody could play it right.'"

Payne, a veteran Nebraska football announcer for Omaha's KFAB radio, also announced Creighton University basketball.

"It made me the best fed Baptist on the Catholic speaking circuit," he claims.

Actually, Payne came close to becoming a Catholic while he worked Bluejay games.

"This is a true story," relates Payne. "We were in Philadelphia one Sunday and I was going to give some press coverage to the players going to a special Mass that was set up in the cathedral about a block from our hotel."

Your Money, Please

"But Father Hassebrook, who traveled with the team, had slept in that day, so everyone headed to the main sanctuary for regular Mass," explains Payne.

"Red McManus (the coach) and all the players were kneeling up front and I was standing in the back. I had on a brand new suit and suddenly the door opened and a guy rushed up with a collection box on a stick, handed it to me and said: 'Let's go.'"

According to Payne, McManus saw what was happening and his face "turned violently purple. The players were shaking, too, they were laughing so hard."

"I told the guy I wasn't even Catholic, but he told me to work one side anyway," relates Jack, who was saved at the bell when the right man rushed into the church, shook off his jacket, grabbed the stick from Payne and made a fast break down the aisle.

"At that point I was actually hoping to let the whole thing go through," admits Payne. "I told Red that no matter what he would have put in the collection plate, I was going to shake it again . . . and again."

Oklahomans Lead Rodeo

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP)—It appears two Oklahomans will be battling it out to the final buck for the steer wrestling championship in the Rodeo Cowboys Association National Rodeo Finals here this weekend.

Going into the 8th go-round Saturday afternoon, Tommy Puryear of Norman held the lead with total regular season and finals winnings of $25,522.03. Tom Ferguson of Miami, in second place, had $24,675.93.

But Ferguson placed third in the 8th go-round with a time of 5.99 seconds to win $374, putting him just $472.10 behind Puryear.

If Puryear, who was out of the money Saturday afternoon, fails to place in the top four Saturday night and Ferguson can manage a 1st or 2nd place, the Norman cowboy will move into the lead.

Mike Ring of Toppensish, Wash., was first in Saturday afternoon's steer wrestling with a time of 5.41 seconds. Bob Marshall of San Martin, Calif., came in second with 5.71 and Frank Shepperson of Midwest, Wyo., was 4th with 7.02.

Marshall held onto the best average time in the event so far with 68.18 seconds in the first eight go-rounds.

Sandy Kirby of Greenville, Tex., failed to make the top four in bull riding Saturday afternoon but still wound up with the best average through eight go-rounds, with 482 points on seven bulls. He was the only bull riding contestant to ride as many as seven bulls in the first eight go-rounds.

Jerome Robinson of Brandon, Neb., who placed first in the 8th go-round, found the third time was the charm. He won 81 points for his ride on Bandelero, after being thrown twice by the same bull during regular season competition.

Other first-place winners in the 8th go-round were Royce Smith of Challis, Idaho, in bareback bronc riding with 80 points; Jim Rodriguez of San Luis Obispo, Calif., and Ken Luman of Merced, Calif., in team roping with a time of 6.32 seconds; Bobby Brown of Adrian, Tex., in saddle bronc riding with 77 points; Lee Cockrell of Panhandle, Tex., in calf roping with a time of 9.50 seconds; and Jimmie Gibbs of Valley Mills, Tex., in barrel racing with a time of 16.94 seconds.

Kearney State Gals Net Wins

Kearney — The Kearney State women scored two victories Saturday, winning a swimming meet over Kansas State and netting a basketball win over the John F. Kennedy Patriette reserve team.

Nancy Stratman won the individual medley, the 50-freestyle, and the 100-freestyle events to lead the Antelopes to a 87-43 dual meet win over Kansas State.

In other basketball action at Kearney State Saturday Midland beat JFK, 61-47 behind the 35 point output of Eileen Troy, while Kearney downed the Patriettes, 69-65.

Herman: Ford Is Deeply Responsible

Omaha (UPI) — Nebraska Republican National Committeeman Dick Herman Saturday urged some 200 State Central Committee members to be prepared to counter arguments that President Ford has failed to exert proper leadership.

Herman told the committee members Ford is working hard to replace former Nixon administration holdovers and "is feeling his responsibilities deeply."

The committee members were to vote on their legislative proposals later in the day. The proposals included establishing a bi-partisan Legislature instead of the present Unicameral.

The state party's executive director, Glenn Wilson, Lincoln, officially presented his resignation, telling the members he wants to establish a career for himself and his family.

"I don't consider that I am leaving the Republican party," Wilson said. "I am just joining you volunteers."

Wilson announced his intention to resign from the $18,000 annual post earlier in the week. Herman, an Omaha trucking executive, said it was necessary for Ford to deal with problems on the foreign front.

"President Ford wants to eyeball the other people," Herman said, "and say 'let's make no mistake I am no patsy. I will let you go only so only so far'."

Herman added it could be "catastrophic" of a foreign leader to "misread the intention of the President of the United States."

Herman and other speakers made no mention of a demand made last month by Rep. Dave Martin, R-Neb., that Herman be ousted as national committeeman for alleged failure to support the Republican ticket in the general election.

It was song time at the Lincoln Hilton where 200 high school juniors, representing all the county's high schools, gathered for lunch on Boys and Girls Government day last week. The study of county government is just one of many American Legion sponsored study opportunities for high school students.

American Legion's Activities As Diverse as Service Club's

By Betty Stevens

If you've ever thought of the American Legion as the poor man's country club, Commander Wes Rosenstock would like to change your mind about that.

Riding herd on 21 different committees and a $57,000 budget, the American Legion seems a lot more like a service organization to Rosenstock who has been commander of Post 3 since August.

With 7,400 members, the Lincoln post is the largest in the world. But that's mostly because there's only one post in a large population area.

A new post was chartered recently for the Havelock area, Rosenstock said. And he'd be more pleased about the largest post in the world if membership was closer to the potential 15,000 estimated in the area.

Membership in the American Legion is open to any veteran in the U.S. Military forces between April 1917 and November 1918, Dec. 7, 1941 and Dec. 31, 1946, June 25, 1950 and Jan. 31, 1955 and Aug. 5, 1964 and Aug. 15, 1973.

Of the $8 membership dues, $4.65 is paid to state and national. The remaining $3.35 sponsors programs of the post.

But that $8 fee also gives members access to the Legionaire Club which is a non-profit corporation and as such turns $2,500 back to the organization for programming. Managed by Bob Logsdon, the eating facility is at 5730 O St.

In the past week, American Legion program activities included boys and girls government day, a study of county government by 200 high school juniors from all the high schools in the county, and ringing bells for the Salvation Army Tree of Lights campaign.

American Legion bell ringers are trying to raise more money for the Salvation Army than any other organization this year, as they have for the past two years. If they do, the bell ringer trophy is theirs for keeps.

Lincoln Post 3 sponsors 10 baseball teams, 5 Juniors and 5 Midgets. They play a double-header every night of the week except Monday during June, July and the first week of August. This program entails several hundred man-hours and about $16,000.

This year $1,500 has been budgeted for girls athletics, Rosenstock said.

Bingo and hospital entertainment on a weekly basis has a budget of about $1,500.

At this time, 63 boys and girls are enrolled in the Young Admirals Drum and Bugle Corps.

Under the direction of Duane Miller, they practice every Tuesday at Millard Lefler Junior High, and play at military functions, community festivals and the State Fair.

The main youth activity is probably Boys State during the second week of June. Twenty-four of the couple hundred high school juniors enrolled in the study of state government are sponsored by Post 3.

The annual district oratorical contest for high schoolers is a mid-winter activity which is designed to develop a deeper knowledge and appreciation for the U.S. Constitution.

There's a bowling league and a grave registration committee which makes sure there is a flag on the grave of every veteran on Memorial Day; there's a week-long law and order school conducted by the State Patrol; and there is assistance for veteran's aid cases.

It's nearly a full-time job, being commander of Post 3, Rosenstock said. And it has to be done after he finishes his real job as chief of education and training division, Department of Veteran's Affairs, which is largely an appraisal of on-the-job training for veterans who have service since 1955.

Rosenstock was in the Army infantry in World War II and has been a Legion member since 1946.

The American Legion, 50 years old, has consistently stood for patriotism, national security and the development of a free and democratic society, Rosenstock said.

Natural Fertilizers Best for a Garden

By Emery W. Nelson
County Extension Agent

Manure may smell better next year. The scarcity of commercial fertilizers and the high price may encourage the use of manure for flower and vegetable gardens.

In most instances this will be much superior to commercial fertilizers. Manure has most of the needed plant nutrients. It also adds organic matter to the soil. Many gardens have heavy clay soils. They are hard to work, take water in slowly and are reluctant to release it to the plants.

The best way to improve these soils is to apply manure every year and spade it into the surface soil. Each year the soil will improve and so will the flowers and vegetables.

Unfortunately, sources of manure are nearly as scarce as those for commercial fertilizer. I have a feeling, however, that some of our farmer friends would be glad to permit a city acquaintance the opportunity to clean the barn. Ask one and see what he says.

Of course, special conveyance will be needed from the farm to the garden. In instances of large gardens that require great quantities, a trailer or truck will be needed.

Small flower and vegetable gardens can be fertilized with manure hauled in the family car. The secret in car transportation of manure is to use plastic bags to line baskets or boxes. Also plastic or metal garbage cans hold a sizable quantity of well rotted manure.

Most men enjoy displaying their hunting and fishing equipment as much as talking about their accomplishments in these sports. That's why we created the sports center shown with television's Tom Kennedy.

This sportsman's showcase is as adaptable for an archer's bows and arrows or a fisherman's rods, reels and tackle as it is for guns. The two glassed-in cases (on each side) keep your guns dry and dust-free, yet on display. These may be locked to safeguard the guns as well as protect curious youngsters and friends (half of all gun accidents are due to careless storage in the home). The middle section has a pegboard back which is perfect for hanging all sorts of sporting paraphernalia and displaying trophies. The bottom doors, which may also be locked, will store ammunition, cleaning gear, a tackle box, decoys or any number of other items needed by a sportsman.

The showcase pictured was made of birch plywood but you may use knotty pine or any one of dozens of other plywood finishes. Our easy-to-follow pattern contains many illustrations and step-by-step directions to make the project easy.

To obtain this Sportsman's Showcase Pattern No. 358, send $1.75 (includes postage and handling). If airmail is desired, send $2 by cash, check or money order to:

Nebraska Establishing Hyperlipidemia Testing

Some children have a high cholesterol level and/or high triglycerides.

In either case, this means there is a high fat content in the blood lipids and the child has hyperlipidemia.

Unless this is detected early when diet can control the problem or when it requires only medication, the condition means the children are more likely to develop atherosclerotic heart and cerebrovascular (heart, stroke and high blood pressure) diseases in their later years.

This is true only if there is a history of heart, stroke and high blood pressure in the child's parents.

And this is why, county health board members were told that Dr. Ray Hill and the health department's well child clinic has agreed to participate in a University of Nebraska Pediatrics Dept. screening project. It is financed by a Nebraska Regional Medical Program grant to Dr. Chandra M. Tiwary, chief of pediatric endocrinology at NU Medical Center in Omaha.

In letters sent out to all internal medical specialists, pediatricians and family physicians in Nebraska, Dr. Chandry asked for their help in the project. They can screen the children in their own offices or refer them to Dr. Chandry. The outcome would be shared with the physician and the parents. This will be a 10-month project.

"It has been demonstrated in a study in Ohio," wrote Dr. Chandry, "that screening only those children whose mother or father has had a myocardial infarction before age 50 will greatly increase yield. Thirty-one percent of the Ohio children were hyperlipidemic."

ANNOUNCING THE FINISH-IT-YOURSELF HOUSE

These days, you're not likely to find a $40,000 house selling for $25,000. But if you're willing to do some work, you can earn yourself a bargain. We'll even finance it for you. Here's how it works.

CHOOSE YOUR LOCATION

First, decide on the area where you'd like to live. Then find a nice piece of property and buy it. If you already own a building lot, you're that much further ahead.

MODIFY THE HOUSE PLANS

Choose one of our 78 designs. You can modify the plans to suit your family size, your way of living, and your budget. You also select the roofing, siding, and all the interior appointments such as kitchen and bath accessories, doors, windows, flooring, lighting fixtures and so forth.

This way, you can make your home just what you want it to be.

OLD-FASHIONED CONSTRUCTION

We do the heavy construction and completely enclose your home. You'll find that we don't compromise on quality. Our materials and building specifications are considered old-fashioned in this day of the jerry-built wonder, but that doesn't bother us. We've been building quality homes for almost 30 years and we're too proud to change now.

FINISHING YOUR HOME

You can get everything you need to finish your home—right down to the last nail—from us. And we give you instructions for all the finishing work. Things like plumbing and wiring aren't as tough as you might think, even for people who've never done more than hang a picture. You can do the work yourselves, get your friends to help out, or even sub-contract some of it. The more work you do, the more you'll save. But even if you hire people to help, you'll be saving a sizeable amount by eliminating the general contractor's profits. And when you're finished, you'll not only have a home that's worth a lot more than you paid for it, you'll have a real feeling of accomplishment.

WHAT ABOUT FINANCING?

Because we believe in our homes and in the people who buy them, we help arrange the financing. Your down payment won't put a big dent in your savings. (The cost of your building lot may be the only major cash outlay you'll have to make.)

If local financing is not available, we'll finance your home through the construction period. When your home is completed, we'll help you obtain a permanent mortgage.

104-PAGE CATALOG

If our finish-it-yourself plan makes sense to you, send the coupon to Capp Homes, and we'll mail you our full-color "Idea Book" of 78 plans. Why let the high cost of housing force you to settle for less?

Your Nurseryman Pine Ridge Offers More Than Beef

"After I sold my cattle, I went home and slept like a baby — which, of course, means I woke up every two hours and cried."

I overheard this remark in a small restaurant in Crawford several weeks ago. This has been a tragic year for everyone associated with the cattle business. But ranchers in Nebraska's Pine Ridge have been particularly hard hit simply because they're totally dependent upon beef for their income.

Farmers and ranchers elsewhere in the state and nation have survived because of good prices for corn, wheat and other field crops, but unfortunately most Sandhill and Pine Ridge land will not produce field crops.

Of course any economy that is based upon a single product, whether it be beef or wheat or coal or whatever, is sure to have dramatic ups and downs. The answer to this problem, obviously, is to develop secondary products and other markets.

With this thought in mind, I've begun my own little unscientific, woefully under-financed experiment on a tiny (40-acres) plot 10 miles southwest of Ft. Robinson. This project has several facets:

1. Tourism. I'm putting a small mobile home on top of the ridge and instead of spending my vacation money in Canada and Wisconsin as I have in the past, I'll be spending it in Nebraska's Sioux and Dawes counties.

2. New Trees. This fall I planted hemlock, yew, concolor, balsam and Douglas fir; Black Hills, blue and Englemann spruce; Austrian, Scotch, red and Australian pine; Cedars of Lebanon. In the spring, working with the Soil Conservation Service's Kansas experimental nursery, I'll also plant deciduous trees and shrubs.

Many of these trees are being planted for the first time in Nebraska's Panhandle.

For years foresters have been deeply concerned by the Pine Ridge's total dependence upon ponderosa pine. If any of these new plantings should be successful, the Pine Ridge will have an alternate to the ponderosa in case that tree should develop a deadly disease such as that which is wiping out American elms throughout the nation.

3. Christmas Trees. Next year I'll be selling pines from 10 to 25 feet high to stores, banks and other businesses in Omaha and Lincoln. Pine Ridge trees are not as full as some commercially grown Christmas trees, so I'll be giving beautiful pictures of Pine Ridge scenery as a sales promotional bit. A brief history of the Pine Ridge will accompany these pictures.

Why should several hundred thousand dollars be spent with out-of-state Christmas tree growers when Nebraska's own residents have a marketable product for sale?

4. Yucca. Last year I paid $6 wholesale for potted yucca plants. Next year I'll be baling and burlapping my own plants off my own land.

5. Sculptured Pines. Gnarled, informal pines are very popular right now and the Pine Ridge is full of interesting specimens created by wind and weather that is perfect for this kind of tree.

6. Driftwood. Last year I brought back weathered pine limbs that look exactly like driftwood that might be found on either coast or along the shores of the Great Lakes. This Nebraska "driftwood" has proved to be quite marketable.

7. Pine Cones. It always makes me sad when I walk into a nursery or specialty shop and see pine cones offered for sale at Christmas time when countless thousands of ponderosa cones lie rotting on the ground in Nebraska's Pine Ridge. Incidentally the ponderosa cone is much superior to most of those offered for sale locally.

I've started this project on my own, but I most certainly welcome any and all competition. Nebraska should be for Nebraskans. Let's help our western brothers as much as we can.

Suit May Be Settled Out of Court

A federal court trail initiated by a class action suit filed Sept. 28, 1972, by parents of some Beatrice State Home residents, scheduled to begin this month in Omaha, has been once again delayed.

This time it occurred because plaintiffs and defendants mutually agreed to try to work out an agreement out of court, according to attorneys for the plaintiff and defendant, Bruce Mason of Omaha and Assistant Atty. Gen. Mel Kammerlohr of Lincoln.

Earlier delays have come as a motion to dismiss the case was denied by both federal district and 8th Circuit Court of Appeals in St. Louis.

The trial was transferred to Federal District Judge Albert G. Schatz in Omaha by Lincoln Federal District Judge Warren Urbom. He is hearing the long series of cases revolving around the Wounded Knee incident in South Dakota.

Attorneys said the Dec. 2 trial postponement in Omaha was at the mutual agreement of both parties.

The suit, filed against Gov. J. J. Exon and others in the State Department of Public Institutions, Office of Mental Retardation and the Beatrice State Home director, claims five residents (as well as all other home clients) "are not receiving what is their constitutional minimal level of 'habilitation' — a term incorporating care, treatment, education and training.

It is claimed that the plaintiffs' commitment to Beatrice State Home, described as a "massive isolated residential institution," deprives them of services in less restrictive community program alternatives.

Kammerlohr and Mason declined to discuss details of the proposed agreement since terms are being worked out at this time.

"The Nebraska Association for Retarded Citizens (NARC), which filed the suit, and others realize that a great many changes have occurred at Beatrice State Home since 1972 and are continuing to happen," said Kammerlohr this weekend. All these, he said, are for the benefit of residents, those who will be eligible to return to communities after training and those who need the protection of the Beatrice State Home.

Kammerlohr said a court session still would be necessary in order for all concerned parties to agree to the agreement proposal under discussion.

Nebraska Votes in Congress

Compiled by Congressional Quarterly
Washington — Following are votes of area members of Congress on major issues during the week ended Dec. 12, 1974.

Senate

Rockefeller. The Senate by a 90-7 vote confirmed Nelson A. Rockefeller to be vice president.

Supporters of the confirmation cited Rockefeller's 15-year record of achievement as governor of New York as well as his interest in national affairs and his ability to attract talented administrators to government.

Many said they believed that in the absence of compelling objections, President Ford should be granted his choice of vice president under terms of the 25th Amendment.

Opponents said they had strong reservations about Rockefeller's ability to lead the nation should he succeed to the presidency. They cited his gifts and loans to public officials, his involvement in an unfavorable campaign biography of a former political opponent, his fiscal policies as governor, and potential conflicts of interest arising from the Rockefeller family wealth.

Action on the House floor is expected before Congress adjourns about Dec. 20.

Voting to confirm Rockefeller as vice president: Curtis (R), Hruska (R).

Public Jobs. The Senate, by a 78-13 vote, approved a bill authorizing $4-billion for an emergency program to create 530,000 public service jobs for the unemployed. The bill also authorized funds to extend unemployment compensation benefits to approximately 12 million persons including farm workers, domestics and state and local government employees, who are not presently covered.

Supporters of the bill contended the jobs were necessary to aid at least some of the unemployed during this period of recession.

Opponents questioned whether the large authorization might not contribute to continued inflation without doing much to alleviate widespread unemployment.

Voting for public service jobs bill: Hruska (R).

Voting against public service jobs bill: Curtis (R).

House

Public Jobs. By a 322-53 vote, the House passed its version of the public service jobs bill. The bill authorized $2 billion for the jobs program and, like the Senate bill, extended unemployment insurance coverage to about 12 million workers not presently covered. The President, who had submitted his own public jobs proposal, was thought to favor the less expensive House version over the Senate measure.

The bill now goes to a House-Senate conference committee to resolve differences.

Voting for public service jobs bill: None.

Voting against public service jobs bill: McCollister (R), Martin (R), Thone (R).

6 Flags—Texas Has Big Year

Arlington, Tex. — For a third consecutive year attendance at Six Flags Over Texas exceeded two million persons in 1974. The amusement park here ended its season Dec. 1, with a total attendance of more than 2,184,000. The 1975 season will begin in mid-March.

Coming Soon: Midland College Art Building

Fremont (AP) — Construction will start immediately on a new art building at Midland Lutheran College, with completion scheduled for next fall.

The contract was awarded to Carlstrom Brothers Construction Co. of Fremont. Cost of the single-story structure was set at about $300,000.

The building will include an enclosed courtyard gallery surrounded by offices, woodworkshop shop and studio areas for pottery, sculpture, print making, painting, drawing, textile design and jewelry making.

The building is the first to be constructed in Midland's Centennial Development Campaign. A first-phase goal of $3.93 million was set for the project, which also includes a center for religion and public events, a library and learning resources center and the continuing academic program at the college.

So far, about $1.9 million has been donated or pledged.

Kearney Home Burns; Snow Slowed Efforts

Kearney (AP) — A house occupied by a couple and their six children was destroyed by fire Saturday eight miles north of here.

High winds and heavy snow hampered efforts to save the building. Phone lines were down and a neighbor of the Lyle Stubbs family had to travel a mile to call firemen.

The Kearney Volunteer Fire Dept. had difficulty reaching the location because of the four inches of snow on the ground. One truck became stuck en route.

Loss was estimated at $14,000. A local agency was arranging for temporary housing and food for the Stubbs family.

Gradeschoolers Sample World Of Business Decision Making

By Joel Thorson

Outstate Nebraska Bureau

Eagle — The Colorful Calendar Co. learned a thing or two about competition. Finding the market glutted with Hairy Hermans, they retooled and started cranking out magnetic felt-and-sequin calendars.

Cookies Inc. gained a lesson in business ethics. Heavy demand for their hand-milled whole wheat flour presented the opportunity for profiteering — but they rejected price-gouging in favor of a competitive profit margin.

Those and other corporate decisions were forged in the crucible of a free market economy at Eagle Elementary School, where some 100 fifth and sixth-grade students have been learning economics the hard way.

Tuesday, all corporate decisions made by the Colorful Calendar Co., Cookies Inc., the Happy Jack Co. and Bug Eyes Inc. will come home to roost. That's the day the learning center becomes a marketplace, and the four companies must sell their wares to discerning buyers from the first, second, third and fourth grades.

Besides the whole wheat flour, Cookies Inc. has cookies to offer. The kids got involved in confections when they found out teacher Joe Shown had a hand mill at home for grinding grain. With his supervision, they winnowed their own wheat, ground it into flour, and did their own baking — learning a little about division of labor along the way.

Demand for the flour was overwhelming, Shown said. Some parents have sent requests for 10 and 20 pounds. But the company decided to make cookies with the 30 pounds they've milled so far, packaging what's left to sell Tuesday in one-pound bags.

The other three companies started out making Hairy Hermans, otherwise known as Fuzzy Wuzzies — hairy faces that can be worn as rings. But Bug Eyes Inc. prevailed, competing the other two companies out of the Hairy Herman market.

Colorful Calendars switched to magnetic refrigerator calendars, and Happy Jack jumped into the cookie business with Cookies Inc.

The practical experience of forming companies, producing, pricing and advertising products for sale has been supplemented with a little classroom study of such economic concepts as profit, competition, market, producer and consumer, supply and demand, goods and services.

"They've been using the terms," said Karen Wall, who designed the course and organized it with fellow teachers Shown, Mary Weimer and Wilma Sissel.

The kids have learned a lot, said Miss Wall. "This is their first real experience working with economics." And it's a good time for them to start learning, she added, since the economy is such a newsmaker these days.

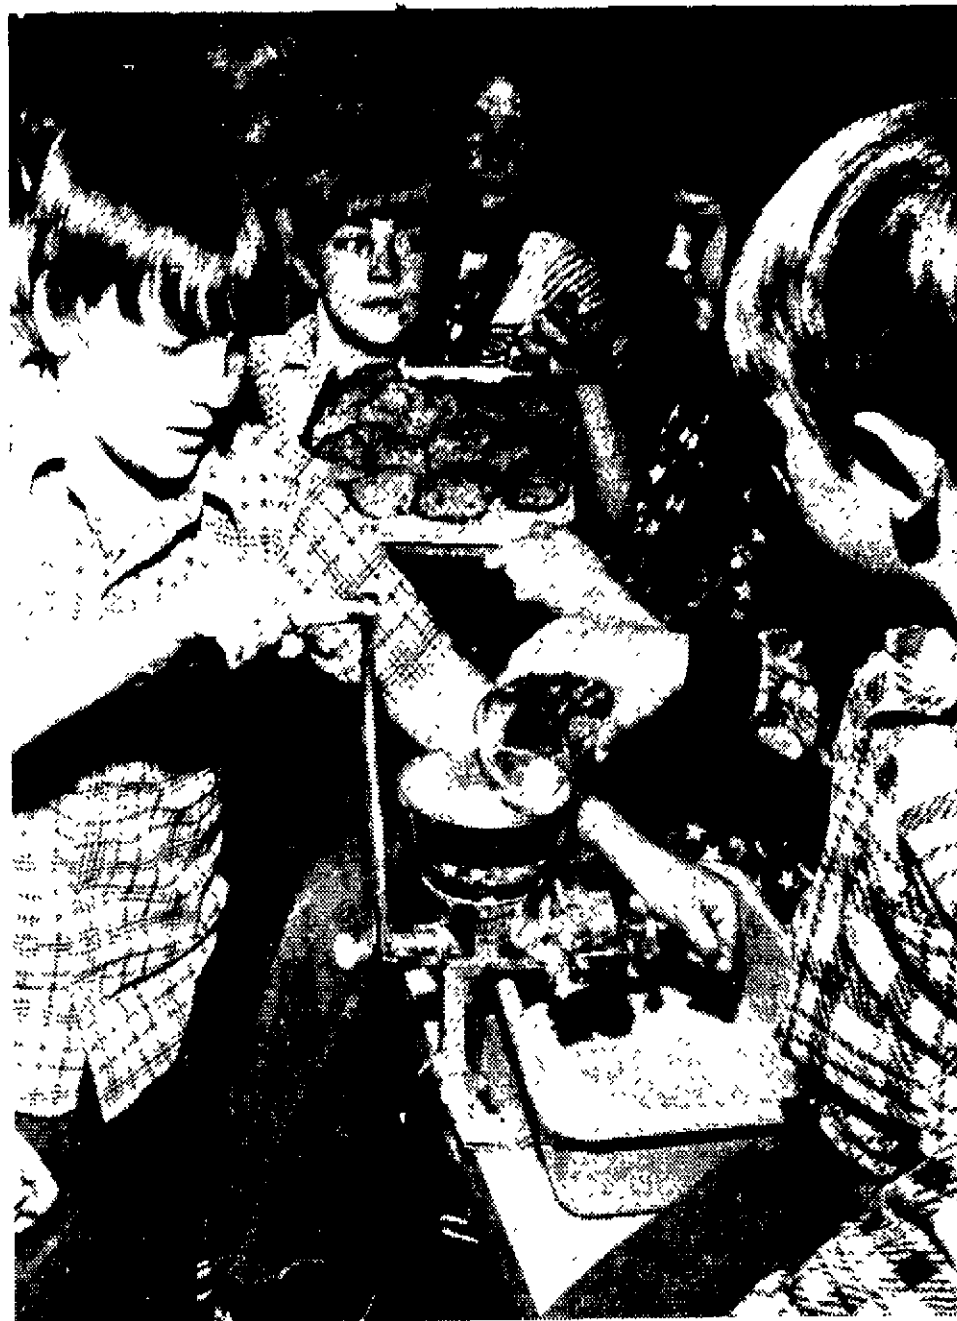

Their lesson in inflation was especially hard-hitting, she said, noting each student had to bring 25c from home to pay for supplies. Baking cookies with 60c a pound sugar, naturally is a graphic example of cost-push inflation.

Miss Wall devised the project after taking a three-week University of Nebraska economics course for teachers on a Sears Fellowship.

Sears, she said, is interested in getting economics into elementary curricula, and the UNL course was designed to equip teachers to do just that.

Miss Wall now has an opportunity to compile results of the Eagle experimental project to compete for a $1,000 prize.

Later in the year, she said, the kids might get involved in the stock market.

Scott Smidt pours wheat for Bobby Nickell to grind while fellow Cookies Inc. member Gary Estes offers Paula Hatfield a cookie made from the fresh whole wheat flour.

Fund Guilt Is Admitted

Washington (UPI) — An all-volunteer committee that raised funds for the reelection campaign of Sen. Daniel K. Inouye's, D-Hawaii, this year has pleaded guilty to failing to report a $5,050 contribution.

U.S. District Judge George Hart Jr. suspended sentence and called the violation technical because the contribution had been returned. The committee could have been fined up to $1,000.

American Beef Packers Complaint Is Dismissed

Washington (UPI) — The Agriculture Dept. said Saturday it has dismissed an administrative complaint against American Beef Packers of Omaha.

The department's Packers and Stockyards Administration said American Beef had been charged with violating fair trade practices.

The administration said American Beef has entered into a "satisfactory monetary settlement" with a New Jersey firm.

American Beef had been charged with failing to deliver meat as specified by Contract to the firm in Jersey City.

In addition, the administration said American Beef has taken appropriate action to prevent a recurrence of the infraction and that a formal order to discontinue the practice will not be required to ensure compliance with the Packers and Stockyards Act.

American Beef also does business at Fort Morgan, Colo.

They are Ted Varner, director of voluntary services replacing Robert McKinley, who has gone to the Omaha VA Hospital; and Betty A. Dachenbach, the new chief of fiscal service. She replaces Larry Weaver, who has transferred to Albuquerque, N.M.

Varner, a 20-year naval man, joined the VA in Lake City, Fla., where he spent three years as a dental laboratory technician. He comes here from Lake City, is married and has five children.

Miss Dachenbach was assistant chief, fiscal service, for four years in the Omaha VA Hospital. Before Omaha, she served at the VA hospitals in Iowa City and Knoxville, Iowa.

Iowa Solon Asks Reserve Of Grains

Washington (UPI) — Sen. Dick Clark, D-Iowa, has called for establishment of a strategic domestic reserve of grains to offer a continued supply of food in years of low production.

A reserve, Clark said, "represents the only possible insurance policy against the fickle patterns of weather and world need" that have affected supply and prices in the past year. He said it also would encourage other food producing nations to do the same.

Although several bills have been introduced to create a domestic reserve, Clark said, "so far it's only paper, and that doesn't feed anyone."

An old bell rings in the almost completed tower standing at the southwest corner of the new sanctuary of Beaver Crossing's Sacred Heart Church.

Beaver Crossing Church Dedicated

Beaver Crossing — Sacred Heart Roman Catholic Church will dedicate its new sanctuary here today.

Bishop Gleason P. Florda will lead the 10 a.m. ceremony dedicating the 4,000 square-foot structure, which seats approximately 150 in the nave area.

The one-level building houses also a parish center wing, will be air conditioned and have a building-wide loudspeaker system.

Due to limited space, only parishioners and invited friends will attend the service and following noon dinner.

A former parishioner, Marvin Harter of Wichita, Kan., crafted the sanctuary furniture including the hand-carved altar, pulpit and communion table.

Harter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Harter, reside in Beaver Crossing. Ringing in the new bell tower will be the bell from the old church.

Sacred Heart parish numbers about thirty families, said Father Kenneth Schnobelen, pastor. He reports that only $5,000 remains of the total $173,000 cost of the church.

What Is A Church?

Presbyterian Begins Church of Relationships

By Betty Stevens

What is a church in 1975?

The answer to that question will be whatever those willing to struggle with it want it to be, according to the Rev. Brent Scott.

But if that church takes the shape of the dream Scott has in his heart and mind, it will be a church of relationships.

"Everybody on earth is looking for a meaningful experience," Scott said. "Fair weather friends are a dime a dozen. The investment of yourself in other persons with communication that opens up life to each other is a threatening experience. It's scary. It's gutsy. And that's the risk of faith."

Scott and his bride, Bonnie, have been in Lincoln since mid-November. They are the Presbyterian Church's choice for an organizing pastor to develop a new church in the south part of Lincoln.

"Our hope is to bring Christ into our world today as a witness through our life-styles and through a family-oriented community of believers," Scott said.

The traditional church is on the wane, Scott said. "People are not getting anything out of churches that are going on. The people who are really hurting never get ministered to. The people making the most noise see the minister most often."

Swan Song

He cites the Presbyterian Church nationally as an example of the traditional church's swan song. That denomination lost 100,000 persons last year, Scott said.

Scott, 29, is a graduate of Louisville (Ky.) Presbyterian Theological Seminary. His father and brother are also ministers. He has worked as a caseworker for the Kentucky Bureau of Corrections in prison work, and was an assistant minister at First Presbyterian Church, Omaha.

Omaha, he said, is the buckle of the Bible Belt.

Scott does not like to think of himself as "set aside" in his ministerial position. "Everybody ministers," Scott said. "Instead of my telling you I've got the word, I want us to explore it together and be open and honest with each other. Then we have a chance of both growing together."

One of the personal struggles Scott admits to was finding his identity as a minister. "I not only love to do what everybody else likes to do, I do it! I'm not a very pious person."

The Nebraska City Presbyterian has purchased 3.3 acres of land at 40th St. and Old Cheney Road. The development of this church is a coordinated effort among all Presbyterian churches in this presbytery and their members, Scott said. "They've pumped a lot of bucks into this project."

Beginning To Build

How do you begin to build a church of relationships?

You knock on doors. You sort of intrude on loneliness. After the personal contact, a note is sent to tell the people contacted that he is at their service for any kind of ministering friendship they might need.

In the immediate future, the Scotts will bring together the few people they have located for their first group meeting.

That group will hopefully begin an exploration of life together "through thick and thin." And out of that community, a building will come, Scott said.

I hope we can together develop some tools that will help us get a grip on interpersonal relationships and that will help us accept the blows that are a part of those relationships, Scott said.

How is the church different from a service club? "In Jesus Christ, we are forgiven. Because of that forgiveness we want a fulfilling relationship with him and with other persons."

"And we can clear mountains if we can get a nucleus of 50 of the kind of people I'm looking for."

"Pilgrim" Church

Richmond, Va. (UPI) — Four Episcopal theologians from the University of the South have said their church's House of Bishops engaged in "theological overkill" in declaring the ordination to the priesthood of women to be invalid.

The four theologians said the bishops had mistakenly assumed the church was a "perfected community" when instead it is a "pilgrim community."

'War Economy' Inflation Key?

U.S. has never fully returned to peacetime pursuits, notes new book.

By Victor Wilson
(c) 1974, Newhouse News Service
Washington — David Melman, Columbia University professor of industrial engineering, finds it difficult to believe that even a run-of-the-mill economist could be puzzled by today's recession-inflation picture.

Current economic problems, Melman says, stem directly from the United States' continuing under a war economy instead of returning fully to peacetime pursuits after World War II.

As a result, he adds, some $1.500 billion has been squandered on the economically useless hardware of war in the past 30 years instead of funding projects to advance the country's well-being.

Writing in "The Permanent War Economy", (Simon — Schuster), Melman asserts the consequences now are coming home to roost.

"These include," according to his thesis, "the formation of a state-managed economy, deterioration of the productive competence of many industries, and finally, inflation — the destruction of the dollar as a reliable source of value."

Melman believes economists, intellectuals, trade unions and the average citizen have been misled into thinking that an increased money income, derived from "defense spending," is a reflection of more available wealth in our society.

Economist and working man alike, he continues, came to believe that since a war economy finally got the country out of its worst depression and helped win its greatest war, more of the same would ensure prosperous future.

What most overlooked, Melman says, was that the main characteristic of war economy is that its chief products are to wage war. They do not contribute consumer goods and services, nor the machinery and Higher Jobless Rate, But Low Interest?

Economists of the Conference Board, a private research organization, predict that the nation's unemployment rate will average 7.3% in 1975, up from about 5.6% this year.

They look for the Federal Reserve to continue to move toward monetary ease, and suggested that interest rates may decline more than generally is expected.

They said short-term interest rates could drop below 7% and long-term rates to less than 8% by mid-1975.

The board also looks for a slowing in the rise of wholesale and consumer prices next year.

The economists describe the American public as being "in a state of inflation shock . . . angry, mistrustful, frustrated."

They also said the economy was likely to remain in a recession until the third quarter of next year, and looked for corporate profits before taxes to decline 14.6% against an increase of 16.5% this year.

Sunday Journal and Star POCKETBOOKS tools to produce more of what people want.

So while civilian money-income remains high, its source — production of war materials — puts no sustained value into the economy as a whole, the author declares.

— Since there still is no sign that such spending will decline (in fact, Pentagon budgets continue to rise), Melman foresees a "permanent war economy."

His book is crammed with examples to prove his contention, citing along the way what he calls a virtual takeover by the Defense Department of about 20,000 major industries and many subcontractors for war-related reproduction.

Perhaps his most dramatic example is what he calls "trade-offs" — sacrifice of federal projects that benefit civilians for still more military hardware. Some examples in terms of dollar outlay:

—Production of Navy Intruder airplanes at $9 million each; the price of one plane would pay for 257 civilian apartment units.

—A Navy DD-963-type destroyer, whose construction for $100 million went forward while housing assistance in Arkansas for the same amount remains unfunded.

—An outlay of $4 billion in cost-excesses racked up for F-111 fighter planes while water-sewer facilities for the same sum remain unbuilt around the nation.

—New weapons systems development or procurement costing $106.2 billion approved, but not a national environmental cleanup proposed for all the country for the same dollar outlay.

—The payment of $1 million for just one Huey helicopter would have built 66 low-cost homes, a project which was side-tracked.

—Two Navy QDE-1052-type destroyer escorts costing $69 million were approved, while child nutrition programs costing the same amount were not.

—The on-going C-5A aircraft program will receive $4.5 billion, but estimated spending of the same amount to eliminate hunger in America is disapproved.

Can You Guess Dirty Tricksters?

By Leonard M. Groupe
(c) 1974, Chicago Daily News
Anybody not yet convinced of the need for a powerful consumer protection agency at the federal level need only read one week's mail I get from Washington announcing actions taken against deceptive business practices by the Federal Trade Commission (FTC).

At the moment, the FTC is doing what it can to fill the need, but it doesn't have enough manpower or money to do what ought to be done. Besides, every dollar it spends on something else is taken away from what is, by far, its most important consumer protection activity, enforcement of the antitrust laws.

In the following cases, the famous names of the companies involved have been omitted to protect the guilty. Although this week's dirty tricks were pulled by some of the biggest and best known names in business, it wouldn't be fair to single them out just because I used last week's batch of mail from Washington. The previous week there was a similar batch of dirty tricks by other big and well known companies. Next week will bring reports of dirty tricks by still others.

Dirty Trick No. 1 involves one of America's very largest and best known companies. A television ad for its steel-belted radial tires showed them to meet U.S. government safety standards after running the back roads of Morocco and then accumulating 72,400 miles on American roads. When the FTC asked it to prove its implication that this kind of mileage can be expected from its steel-belted radial tires, the company couldn't do it. It contended that "the commercial did not state or imply that the viewer would receive the mileage depicted in the commercial." I think it did. Do You?

Dirty Tricks No. 2, 3, 4 and 5 involve each of the Big Three auto makers plus one of the big Japanese imports. The FTC thinks that when an auto ad talks about gas mileage, the implication is that there's some relationship between the advertised mileage and the kind of mileage you can get from that kind of car. If not, why advertise it?

One of these companies cited test mileage " . . . to give you some idea of the kind of mileage you could expect . . ."

Omaha's Grant Gard Ready Salesmanship Due For Big Comeback?

The used car salesman, the real estate broker and the traveling salesman have often been the butt of jokes, but to Grant G. Gard they are "the backbone of industry."

Gard teaches salesmen how to sell through his Omaha consulting firm, which peddles one item: Gard and his go-get-'em philosophy.

A professional speaker, who taught Dale Carnegie courses in Lincoln from 1961 to 1963, Gard now tours the U.S. and Canada. One of his messages is that sales persons are professionals.

"I feel selling is a profession as much as being a doctor, dentist or attorney," he said. Gard carries that idea to groups ranging from 10 persons to as many as 2,000.

In one recent seven week stretch he was home only three days. His latest account is with Yamaha of Canada.

The Overton native became one of the nearly 40 full-time professional speakers in the country through a circuitous route. After attending Kearney State College two years, he followed his father into a job with Union Pacific.

He did not take speech in high school or college, and his interest came as the result of a Carnegie speaking course. He went to work for Carnegie in 1959.

In a recent book, "Don't Talk About It. Do It," the dust cover carries the promise: "I Upped My Income — Up Yours!"

'Sharpen the Ax'
With the presently depressed real estate market, Gard is often called on to conduct motivation workshops. Real estate firms are also trying to upgrade their community image.

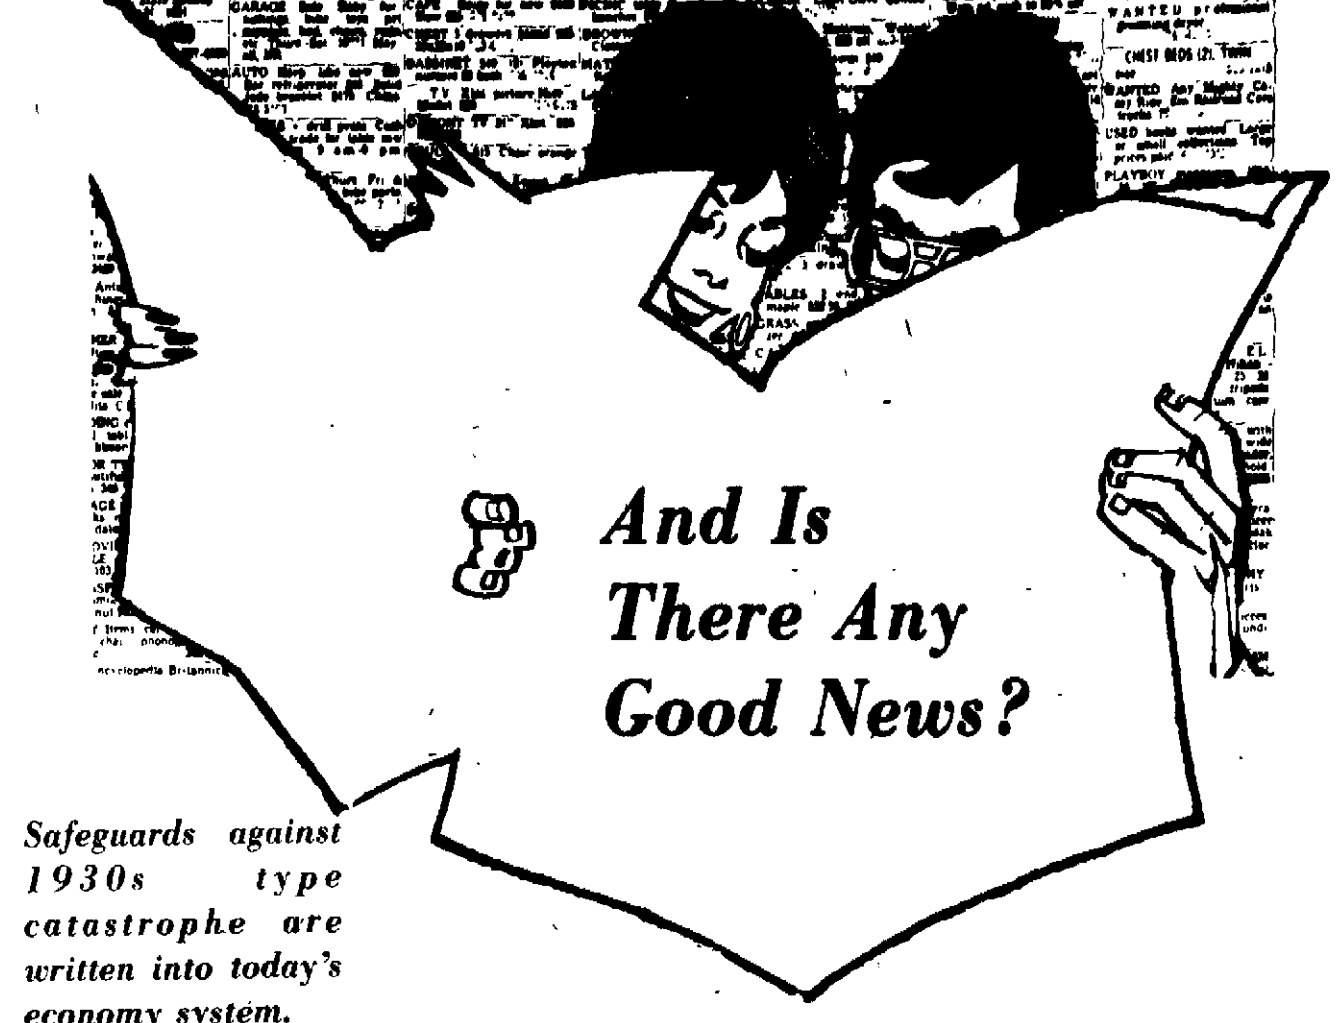

Gard sees a silver lining in the nation's current economic situation: "If it weren't for the rough times, we wouldn't grow," he said. "With the right type of attitude and some stress, it makes us sharpen the ax to stay competitive."

And attitude of sales people is important to Gard. He says that 20% of the sales personnel in the nation accomplish 80% of the selling. That 20% has what Gard considers the "three Ds of success — desire, determination and dedication."

His approach should not be confused with the tactics of some companies promising get-rich projects to all, he protests.

"I work on very sound selling and management principles," he said. Operating on a fee basis, Gard gears his speeches to helping those who sell products produced by their companies.

Gard says he recognizes that good salesmanship, while beneficial, is not the salvation of a nation's economy, but adds, "good salesmanship will help keep smoke coming out of the chimneys."

U.S. Has Depression 'Pills'

Washington (UPI) — There is a lot of talk about safeguards which protect against repetition of the Great Depression. Are the American people really protected against the hardships such an economic dislocation would create?

President Ford and many economists say yes, they are. Ford recently reassured the nation that safeguards written into the system since the 1930's make it unlikely for the United States to slip from recession into depression.

He listed only two — unemployment insurance and supplemental payments to idled workers in the automobile industry. But there actually are many more, of equal or even greater importance.

First, depression should be defined. To a person who can't find a job, the nation is in a depression even if everyone else is prospering.

The most used yardstick is the "Great Depression" which lasted almost a decade in the 1930's. The name conjures emotional visions of massive soup lines and suicides, businessmen selling apples on corners for a living, mechanics shoveling snow and raking leaves, banks failing and depositors being wiped out, with government seemingly paralyzed and unable to act. A financial and economic system in total collapse.

But there are other, more accurate ways of defining the Great Depression: an unemployment level of 24.9% (the most recent 1974 unemployment rate was 6.5%); a drop of almost 50% in the gross national product (the biggest drop this year was 7% for one-quarter); savings dropping from $15 billion to $2 billion, with personal savings just about being wiped out.

Three Categories
That is what the economist means when he mentions depression. If the country gets there, it will know it.

The safeguards against depression can be placed in three categories: some now working which were not available in the 1930's; some which start working when the nation slips into recession; and some which would come into being to ward off catastrophe.

In the first group are social security and private pension plans.

Billions of dollars flow each month from the federal government and from private pension funds into the hands of oldsters so that, in the event of recession or depression, they will not become totally dependent upon children who have just lost their jobs. It is a major change since the 30's.

In the same category are such items as welfare, aid to dependent children, food stamps, and the school lunch programs. They are cushions already working against depression and hardship.

In the second category are lengthened unemployment compensation and programs for public service employment. As recession deepens, these are activated automatically to brake the slide toward depression.

They are important in another way: as private industry tightens its belt, those programs increase government spending.

The same is true of the welfare programs. Many of them are open-ended commitments to provide a minimum standard of existence for the needy. In recession, there are more needy people so government spending is higher.

Nebraska CPAs To Hold Workshop

The Nebraska Society of Certified Public Accountants will conduct a two-day workshop on individual income tax returns at the New Tower Motel in Omaha Monday and Tuesday.

CPAs from Kansas, Iowa, Arizona and Nebraska have registered for the program, one of 27 being sponsored by the Nebraska Society throughout the state this year.

Economists believe, however, that perhaps the greatest fiscal deterrent against depression is the tax system itself. Individuals pay their income taxes as they earn, through withholding; corporations by quarterly filings.

Deficit Restraint

As profits decrease, corporation tax installment payments go down; as wages and salaries are lost, pay-as-you-go brings less money into the federal treasury.

But government spending grows, producing increasing federal deficits which restrain the slippage from recession into depression.

Helping in the same way are the supplemental unemployment payments by unions to idled workers in the transportation and steel industries. About two-million workers are covered by supplemental unemployment benefits contracts. An additional three million are entitled to severance pay from their firms.

Consumers Still Finding Some Dollar Satisfaction

Despite the double-digit inflation that has been chewing away at the consumer's purchasing power in the last year, the level of consumer dissatisfaction with value received has risen only slightly, according to a study by the Conference Board.

For some types of goods and services, the New York business research organization found, the public actually thinks it is getting more for its money today than it did a year ago.

The study, based on a survey of 7,700 families by National Family Opinion Inc., found that 67% of those polled felt they get average or better than average value for their money in the goods and services they buy.

A similar survey made a year ago found 69% expressing satisfaction with value.

The areas of greatest discontent are repair services, credit charges and apparel, particularly women's and children's clothing, according to the survey.

A comparatively high level of satisfaction was reported for television sets, appliances, life insurance and food items such as poultry and eggs.

Wharton Foresees Strong U.S. Recovery in 1975

The U.S. economy should start edging out of recession early in 1975 and a full-blown recovery will be under way before year-end, according to economists at the University of Pennsylvania's Wharton School.

Wharton Econometric Forecasting Associates sees the real gross national product, the country's output of goods and services after inflation is subtracted, dropping at an annual rate of 8.67% in the current quarter, with the coal strike having a major impact. But the economists expect small gains in real GNP in the next two quarters, followed by substantial increases in the last half of 1975 that will extend through 1976.

On the gloomier side, the Wharton forecasters predict that unemployment will hold near 7% throughout 1975 and 1976. They look for a gradual moderation of inflation, with the rate of price rise declining to about 5% in the final quarter of 1976.

Bank: Federal Policy To Avert Depression

Government will adopt an expansive economic policy that will stave off depression in 1975, and inflation will moderate for the first time in three years due to the impact of weakening business activity on industrial wholesale prices, says Dr. Herbert Neil Jr., Harris Bank economist.

Dr. Neil says the Federal Reserve is likely to allow faster growth in the money supply next year.

"The weak economy will also moderate inflation, particularly in the prices of manufactured goods," he said. "Consequently, the stage will be set for arresting the decline in business and for at least a modest recovery in the latter part of 1975."

The expansive monetary policy will be accompanied by a slackening demand for bank loans and a further decline in short-term interest rates, he predicted.

In addition, "Unemployment will rise at a faster rate as industrial output drops," Neil said, adding that unemployment could affect 7% of the work force.

For those who are employed, however, personal income can be expected to rise. "A decline in the inflation rate in 1975 will lead to rising real wages for the first time in two years," he forecast.

Securities Rise and Meander

NEW YORK (UPI) — The stock market rose on anticipation and simply meandered when confronted with reality last week. As a result, prices closed irregularly higher on the New York Stock Exchange.

The Dow Jones industrial average gained 15.17 to 592.77, most of that coming on Tuesday when the closely watched average climbed 13.93 points. Standard & Poor's 500-stock index gained 2.06 to 67.07. The NYSE common stock index added 0.95 to 35.40.

What confused the picture was the fact declining issues edged advances, 931 to 785, among the 2,000 issues crossing the tape.

Volume for the week totaled 75,442,760 shares, compared with 65,731,110 traded a week ago and 95,013,364 during the same week a year ago.

On Tuesday, the market had its best rally in a month.

It went up after the Federal Reserve Board lowered the discount rate it charges member banks for loans, which resulted in a sharp decline in short-term interest rates.

(Chase Manhattan Bank, third largest in the nation, pleasantly surprised many when it lowered the prime lending rate it charges key corporate customers to 10 1/2 percent from 10 3/4. But trendsetting First National City Bank of New York, second largest, failed to lower its rate from 10 percent on Friday, a disappointment to investors.)

The other rally spark Tuesday was anticipation President Ford would announce new plans to perk up the economy in a speech to the prestigious Business Council Wednesday night. His answer to the speculation:

"If there are any among you who want me to take a 100-degree turn from inflation fighting to recessionary pumping, they will be disappointed."

To a degree, Wall Street was. But some investors took heart the President said he would present the next Congress with some new plans to combat "the evils of inflation, recession and energy." He did not discuss any proposed tax cut, which many have urged.

In a meeting with leaders of the ailing automobile industry Thursday, he again ruled out an increase in gasoline taxes. But some of the meeting participants said he was sympathetic to a freeze on safety and pollution emission standards for the next five years.

In his Wednesday speech, Ford said he had seen signs inflation was slowing, and the next day, the Labor Department reported its wholesale price index rose only 1.2 percent in November, a smaller increase than the October rise.

Feeder Cattle

Omaha (UPI) — The weekly report from the National Livestock Feeders Assn. said the trading of feeder cattle and calves last week was on a generally lower price basis, frequently off as much as 2.00 to 3.00, at marketing centers around the nation.

River markets complex — Choice and prime 300-500 lb steer calves 31.25-33.50; 500-600 lb 30.00-33.00, choice 300-500 lb steer calves 24.50-31.50, 500-700 lb 25.00-32.25, mostly 26.00-30.50, and choice 700-900 lb steers 26.75-32.00, mostly 27.50-31.00. In sale of heifers, Sioux City had 500 head of choice and prime 355-460 lb heifer calves at 25.00-28.50. At other markets choice and prime 330-725 lb heifers were 27.00-28.00, choice 250-400 lb heifers 18.50-23.00, 350-500 lb 20.00-27.50, mostly 20.00-24.00, choice 500-700 lb heifers 21.00-27.00 and 700-850 lb 24.25-28.00.

Wheat Prices Lower

Chicago (UPI) — Wheat was substantially lower, corn mixed, oats irregularly lower and soybeans irregularly higher last week on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Wheat was off 8 1/2 to 20¢; corn up 1 1/4 to off 7¢; oats off 1/2¢, and soybeans up 2 to 8 1/2¢.

Soybean strength came most because of the good demand on the meal product, which was firm enough to help this market overcome downward tendencies generated by a slowdown in export business.

Export business is attributed with keeping wheat prices from dipping even lower than they did as the futures generally reflected results of projections indicating a bumper crop year for 1975.

Corn attracted support on encouraging export potential, but the cattle-on-feed report due for release after Friday's market closed was expected to turn up lower once more, and trade wound up on the cautious side for the week.

Continued attention was focused on Washington for White House response to world food shortages and possible U.S. commitments in helping resolve them, but no word was released.

75 Economic Slump Forecast for Canada

Halifax (AP) — The chief economist for the Bank of Nova Scotia said Canada is about to enter an economic slump more severe than most people expect.

F. L. Rogers said that instead of the 14% growth rate predicted for 1975 by federal Finance Minister John Turner, international factors indicate that it will probably not go much above 2%.

25% Housing Cost Idea 'Must Go'

The traditional concept of 25% of income allocated to housing will have to go out the window, as will the concept that mortgage credit should be made available on this basis," said Robert R. Dockson, president and chief executive of California Federal Savings & Loan Assn., Los Angeles.

"The 4-to-1 standard will have to drop, perhaps to 3 1/2-to-1 or 3-to-1," Dockson said.

As inflation continues, he believes, homebuyers must expect to pay more for the same standards of housing, and lenders must offer greater credit.

Chicago — There it was. A note of anguish and regret at buying a stock that became worthless.

The women saw it on the top of the old tin box where it had been left by their just-deceased grandmother.

"Throw this away when you find it," the note read. "I didn't have the courage to do it myself."

The estate was already settled, but the women, feeling their grandmother was a shrewd woman, decided to investigate. The "worthless" stock brought in more than $9,000.

That incident occurred this year and is not unlike several more that have come to the attention of pert Micheline Masse, 35, of Montreal, who runs a detective-like business — tracking down the value of old stocks and bonds.

"It all started about 10 years ago when I decided to wallpaper our living room," she explained in an interview while visiting Chicago. "I'd been collecting worthless stock certificates from friends as a hobby. I thought they'd make a very nice and original design on the wall."

But on a quirk Ms. Masse — then finishing a master's degree in commerce from the University of Montreal — visited the school's business library to learn what had happened to the companies whose stock she was about to glue onto her walls.

Most were worthless. But in a few cases, the old company had simply changed its name or merged with another firm. One stock, donated by a friend, was worth $3,000. There were others worth hard cash.

"It's not hard to understand why someone can lose track of older stocks. Many companies no longer exist. Many were acquired. In North America alone, there are more than 6,000 mergers a year," she noted.

Philadelphia (UPI) — By 1980, about half the U.S. working force will be feminine and about one-seventh of the total work force will be black, says Dr. Seymour L. Wolfbein, dean of Temple University's business administration college. Wolfbein said that, contrary to opinion sometimes heard, all through the remaining 1970s the demand for workers with manual skills will be just as great as that for people with mental skills.

Alaskan Gas Pipeline May Cost $18 Billion

The cost of the Alaskan pipeline has been revised upward to $18 billion.

Robert W. Ward, president of Alaskan Arctic Gas Pipeline Co., said the estimated cost of the proposed gas pipeline from Prudhoe Bay in Alaska across Canada to the U.S.-Canadian border was revised upward from $3.2 billion because of inflation.

The cost of construction and expansion of pipelines within the United States to deliver the gas to American markets is estimated at $3 billion, bringing the total projected cost of the project to $10 billion.

Poll Reveals: Ford's WIN Plan Won't Woo Energy Conservation

Houston (AP) — A sociologist doubts that President Ford's request for voluntary energy conservation will receive great response.

"I don't care how many WIN buttons he passes out, because as long as people don't believe in the concept of an energy crisis they are not going to respond," said Dr. David Gottlieb.

The acting dean of the University of Houston's College of Social Sciences made his observation while reporting results of a Texas public opinion survey on the credibility of the energy crisis.

Gottlieb said Texas may be the largest oil producing state but that results of the research survey financed by the National Science Foundation indicate most Texans are unaware and unsophisticated about energy.

"You will be surprised to know that very few people see a relationship between oil wells and gasoline," he said.

"Very few people are able to accept the idea that over there in the Arab countries those people running around on camels really have the ability to turn the screws and we can't get gasoline at the stations. That's incomprehensible to people."

Gottlieb said the survey indicates most people are suspicious and apprehensive but do not buy the idea the nation is confronted with a serious and long-term energy shortage.

Much Disbelief

"Most people do not believe there are some serious changes that they are going to have to make in terms of investing in new energy developments or cutting down in utilization of energy sources," he said.

"Despite all the governmental appeals, despite all the pronouncements made by the various corporations, despite the fuel charts and graphs, people don't really believe it."

Gottlieb said 900 heads of households were asked to name the source considered to be the most reliable for accurate information about the energy crisis.

"One-half of the people said no one," he said.

He added that less than 8% said they would accept energy industry publications as reliable and authentic sources of information.

Gottlieb said people are changing their energy consuming behavior for economic reasons.

"People are cutting down not because of a crisis but because of costs," he said.

Gottlieb said higher educated people generally are much more suspicious and doubtful about the credibility of an energy crisis.

"Rural people are much more likely to believe the messages of the government and oil companies than are urban people," he said.

He said rural people are much more likely to say, "If you want people to conserve, give them a plaque, put a star in their window, give them a little flag."

Urban people say, "If you want me to conserve, give me economic incentive, a rebate, or money for forming a car pool," he said.

U.S. Officials Worry About Petrodollar Leverage Arabs Have

New York (UPI) — Ever since the world discovered Arab oil nations have enough money to buy out most anybody, there have been rumors of Arab petrodollars doing just that — trying to buy out anybody.

U.S. officials are concerned about the leverage this gives the Arabs on the nation's economy. The Federal Reserve board and the Securities & Exchange Commission are keeping a close eye on Arab investments, and President Ford signed into law a bill giving the Treasury and Commerce Depts. authority to study all overseas investment in U.S. companies and foreign activity in the stock, bond and commodity markets.

Arthur F. Burns, Fed chairman, told a congressional committee recently legislation may be needed to prevent Arab nations from buying control of strategic American industries.

He said he wouldn't be bothered if OPEC members bought control of non-essential industries.

"On the other hand, foreign investment of any kind in some of our strategic enterprises would concern me," he said.

Burns also said the Federal Reserve is considering asking U.S. banks not to accept short-term deposits from OPEC members which could be withdrawn at any time and shake the entire banking system.

Called "petrodollars," the huge surpluses were acquired as a result of the sudden quadrupling of oil prices by OPEC nations a little over a year ago.

Some OPEC nations, such as Nigeria and Indonesia, have large enough populations to absorb most of their new wealth in needed domestic projects.

But most of the Arab sheikdoms, which also have the largest oil reserves, have relatively small populations and fewer domestic needs. These Arab nations — and to a lesser degree, Iran — consequently have found themselves with billions in unused income.

on which to raise capital, for companies who were having a hard time finding a market for their stock in the dealer-oriented, over-the-counter market.

When business in the securities industry was reaching a peak in 1968, some of that good fortune spilled onto the National's trading floor. The only remaining floor specialist recalls the crowds that filled the exchange, and trading volume that often topped 100,000 shares daily.

But the ground floor room is all that remains of the inactive National Stock Exchange. It was founded in 1861, enjoyed a brief period of prosperity seven years later and is almost certainly destined to go out of existence on Dec. 31.

Its main problem, in common with every other stock market, has been a dramatic decline in trading activity.

Late last week the tiny exchange's board of governors voted to dissolve, subject to approval by a vote of its 96 member firms.

National's president, John Girard, says the vote will take place "within the next few weeks."

Girard says National was formed to provide young, small companies with a trading floor.

Goods Sales On Increase

The Commerce Dept. reports that, through November, durable goods sales at $3.01 billion were 2% above a year ago and nondurable goods sales at $7.45 billion were up 10% from a year before.

Prasch To Ask Morley Addition

Supt. John Prasch Tuesday will request the Lincoln Board of Education to approve plans for an addition to May Morley Elementary School, 68th and Monterey.

The board will also consider recommendations for the 1975 summer school session, in an 8 a.m. meeting in the Public Schools Administration Building, 720 So. 22nd.

The proposed Morley addition would add instructional space, but the main issue in previous board discussions on the plan has been whether to air-condition parts of the building.

Board members have considered two approaches, air conditioning school buildings district-wide all at once or in stages. High costs of installing air conditioning would impinge on funds for other construction priorities.

Summer Programs

Prasch has said partial air conditioning of Morley would be sufficient to serve any summer school programs.

The proposal for 1975 summer sessions sets up a six-week term beginning June 13, with registration from April 14 through May 16. All junior and senior high classes except music would be held at East High School, with music offered at each high school. Tuition would be $15 for each period of instruction, and $30 for two or more periods. Music tuition would be half.

Board members will act on bids to replace three school buses, for approximately $50,000, and will hear a progress report on the bilingual education project.

The Lincoln Public Schools Luncheon Managers Assn. will request the board to recognize LMA for bargaining purposes to negotiate contracts, salaries and fringe benefits.

Following its official business session, the board has scheduled a two-work session to begin at 10 a.m. Discussion topics include preliminary issues in 1975 contract negotiations with the Lincoln Education Assn. (LEA).

Pilot Basis

The staff at Lake View Elementary School has proposed the board allow them to set up a "management by objectives" pay plan, on a pilot basis, a departure from the LEA-negotiated agreement.

Under the modified pay proposal, the principal, teaching staff and support staff — such as secretaries and custodians — would receive pay in proportion to their success in achieving goals they set for themselves. The key to such a plan is establishing clear evaluation methods.

Board members will also consider a legislative program for 1975, discussing the kinds of issues likely to arise in the unicameral that affect education.

Topics include clarifying the eligibility rules on non resident tuition and rules on LB403, which provides state subsidies for special education programs; efforts to set up a new state finance plan for Nebraska's schools, such as was proposed in LB772, the state aid to education bill defeated by voters in November; and attempts to improve the education retirement system and fire marshal regulations for school construction.

Access Film

Another legislative concern the board has is whether future funding of the state's community colleges will require property tax rate increases.

Carroll Sawin, assistant superintendent for personnel, will discuss personnel selection procedures with the board members, and they will view a League of Human Dignity film on kinds of access to school buildings for the handicapped.

Harry Truman Library Reflects Man of Prairie

"This Library will belong to the people of the United States. My papers will be the property of the people and be accessible to them. And this is as it should be. The papers of the Presidents are among the most valuable sources of material for history. They ought to be preserved and they ought to be used."

—Harry Truman
President, 1945-53

Bronze bust of Capt. Harry Truman, Battery D, 129th Field Artillery Regt., Missouri National Guard, was given to the library by the Missouri Guard. The President-to-be served with the regiment in France in World War I.

Story, Pictures by Jan Sack

Independence, Mo. — Upon entering the Harry S. Truman Library and Museum, one can plainly see that the 33rd president of the United States was a man of the prairie, an uncomplicated, straight-talking, no-nonsense man.

It is therefore appropriate that the visitor's first impression comes from the Thomas Hart Benton mural Independence and the Opening of the West. Occupying a 19x32-foot space, the mural reflects Truman's great interest in the history of the United States and the role of Independence, Mo., in that history.

In the presidential room of the library, the history theme is fully carried out. It was Truman's desire to make the presidency more clearly understood, and the late President divided the job into six parts: chief executive, ceremonial chief of state, legislative planner in dealing with Congress, head of his political party, commander-in-chief of the armed forces and director of foreign policy.

Rather than being overwhelming, the Truman exhibits are instead almost underplayed. The vast amount of history that occurred during Truman's presidency is left to speak for itself, with a minimum of explanation.

James R. Fuchs, chief of the oral history and acquisitions program at the library and museum, recalls Truman as "very nice, gentlemanly, courteous and kind. He was much more impressive. He had much more presence in person than when merely hearing him."

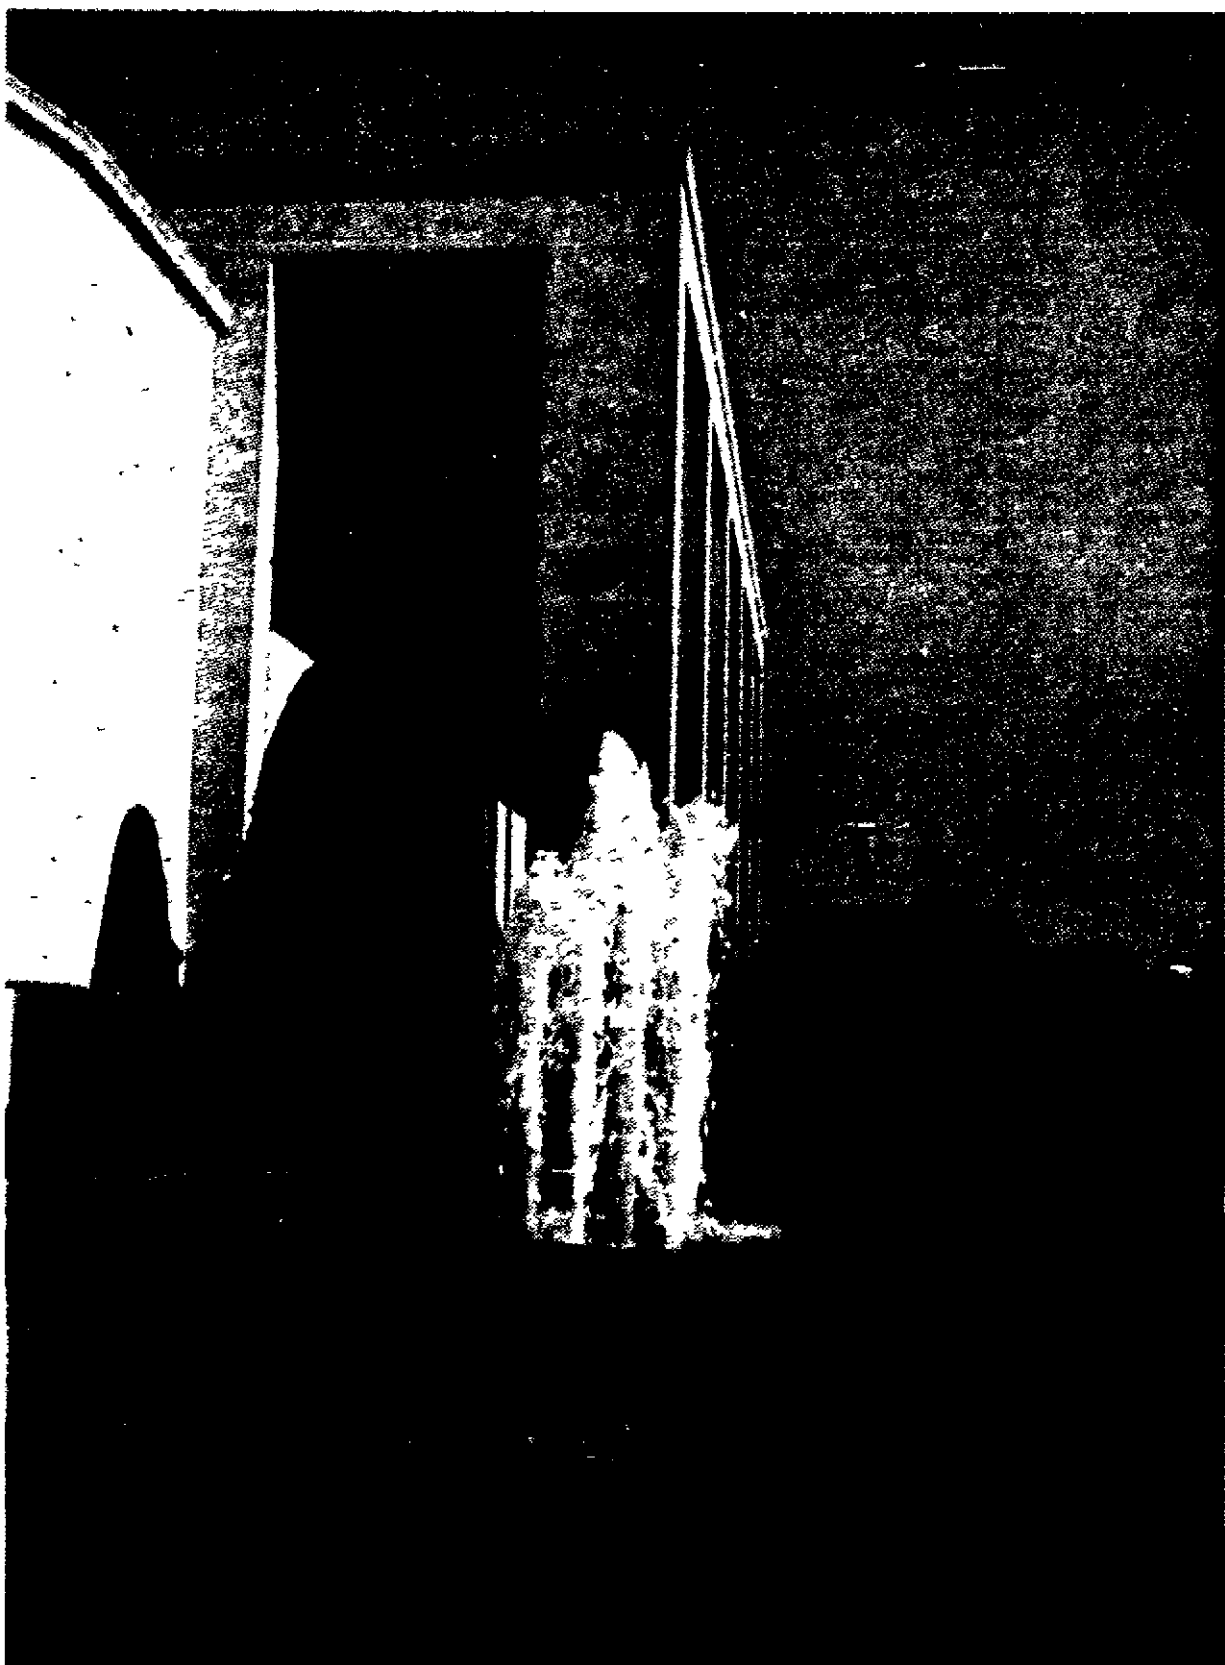

"He seemed to have his feet on the ground, feeling he was just a mortal who had made it to the top job in the nation."

The library and museum building was dedicated July 6, 1957. Fuchs said Truman used his office in the nonpublic section of the building regularly until 1966. After that, visits were infrequent. It was here that Truman met with Presidents Herbert Hoover, Dwight Eisenhower, John F. Kennedy, Lyndon Johnson and Richard Nixon.

In the private office used by Truman is the desk he used in his study at the White House. The office is off limits to everyone, including the staff. One of the guards said the only time anyone enters the room is to turn the lights on or off. Until recently, the drapes were closed and the public couldn't even look in from the courtyard.

Most of the items in this room are personal and may go not to the library but to Truman's widow and daughter. His will is still in probate (the hands of the executors).

Fuchs says Mrs. Bess Truman, who lives just a few blocks away in their home of many years, never did come to the library

This view of the Truman Library and Museum's entrance area shows the recently-installed fountain. The library is situated atop a small rise in a gently rolling area of Independence.

Tomb Visitors Outnumber Army 3 to 1

Paris (UPI) — Napoleon's Grande Armee was always too big for the little corporal to review it all at one time. But every year three times more visitors than the number of soldiers in that redoubtable army file past Napoleon's tomb under the dome of the Invalides.

A million and a half visitors annually, 3,000 to 4,000 daily in the height of the tourist season, view the enormous sarcophagus made of green granite and red porphyry.

The monument is open every day of the year with four exceptions: Nov. 1, Christmas Day, New Year's Day and May 1. The Invalides ranks third on any list of sightseer "musts," behind the Eiffel tower and the Louvre museum.

Anne Perkinson (left) plays the evil baroness; Trudi is portrayed by Amy Theilander and Seigfried really is Steve Brown.

Playhouse Has Fun Show For Younger Audience

The Lincoln Community Playhouse will join in holiday festivities with the children's production of Trudi and the Minstrel.

The shows, open to the public, will be presented at the Playhouse, 2500 So 56th, at 2 and 7:30 p.m. Dec. 22, 28 and 29 and there will be one show, at 7:30 p.m., on Dec. 27.

Trudi, a neo-Gothic extravaganza directed by Alan Nielsen, combines music and fun. It comes complete with a heroine, Trudi, a wicked baroness, trolls, gypsies and Schlafnicht the dragon.

The story is a somewhat distorted version of an old folk tale originally set in England but now moved to Germany where, as everyone knows, trolls prefer to live.

Director Likes Sinatra But Not in His Movie

Hollywood (UPI) — Most directors given their choice of Frank Sinatra or Richard Kiley in the lead role of a movie musical almost certainly would go with Sinatra — for box office appeal if nothing else.

Not Stanley Donen. Oh, Stanley's bright enough all right. And he admires Sinatra. But he spent a year of his life saying "no" to Frank.

Paramount Studios aligned itself behind Sinatra for the big part in The Little Prince. Donen said, "No," again. Gossip columnists had already printed Frank would get the role. What Frank wants, Frank gets. With the possible exception of a ticker tape parade in Australia.

"Frank is a great performer," Donen allowed. "I've known him for 24 years. I directed him in his early pictures, Anchors Aweigh, and On the Town."

"He used to ask for me on his pictures when we were both under contract to MGM."

"But I just didn't think he would be right for The Little Prince. The part calls for a mature man who must allow himself to be dominated by a six-year-old boy."

"It's difficult for me to imagine Frank relating to a child in such a way."

Neither did Donen eagerly anticipate Sinatra's indomitable presence on a set. Frank calls the shots on the working hours, how many takes he will agree to do and other facets of movie making which belong traditionally to the director.

Going Places

Nightclub Career Started at Kiwanis

Play in Print

By Holly Spence

It was the Kiwanis Club that got Jay B. Zee out of his office and onto the stage.

As a veterinarian's assistant at $14 a week, college student Zee was asked to present a hypno-therapy (now hypnosis) demonstration for the service club's program. He received $15 for 45 minutes.

"My Jewish mind started working," he chuckled, "$14 a week or $15 for 45 minutes — wait a minute."

A college psychology major during the Depression, Zee picked hypno-therapy as an elective course — "I took it out of curiosity; I was told it had value in the practice of psychology."

After his initial experience at the Kiwanis Club, Zee went on the service club circuit during the school year and in the summers performed at midnight after the movie double feature.

"The next summer I went on a percentage," he said. "I really made some money — $800 to $900 a week."

After the Army, where he used his college training, Zee took a two-year internship at Bloomfield (Mich.) General Hospital before he went into private practice in Detroit.

"The first year in practice I could have done better with a spear and shrunken head," he commented, pointing out that emotional problems were not openly admitted or discussed then.

To keep body and soul together, Zee went to Canada and got a few night club engagements on the weekends.

"The first few nights were a disaster," he said. "But I had to have some money."

However, his practice was finally receiving recognition and he gained doctor referrals; mostly from out-of-town or out-of-state.

With a thriving practice, he discovered that he needed some help so he hired a graduate assistant. Barbara Evans had been teaching school, but after joining Zee patients began asking for her.

Zee found the solution

"I told Barb — if we're going to split the business, we're going to get married," he said.

As clinical psychologists became more acceptable, the business grew at break-neck pace. Zee was diagnosed as having a cardiac condition.

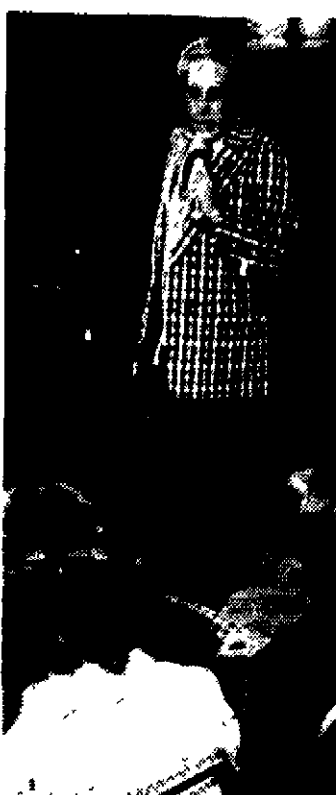

Being a doctor to the emotionally distressed means one gets involved in others' lives, said Zee, whose real name is Jay B. Zee.

"Unlike a surgeon, you can't detach yourself from emotion," he commented.

The pressure was enough to merit a rest. So he and Barb packed up and headed west "to go fishing."

Fishing wasn't enough to keep him happy, and he accidentally got booked into a couple of clubs with his program on hypnosis.

"Opening night was a success — it took off and it hasn't stopped," said Zee, who now has a 12-month contract with Little Bo Center, 28th and Cornsucker Highway.

Jay B. Zee

Jay B. Zee and Barbara Evans moved around the country with their unique show. They came to Omaha for a two-week engagement and ended up staying for five years. They now own a home in Omaha and drive to Lincoln Monday through Saturday.

Barb said traveling has become a complicated ordeal.

"We would have so much in the car, it was unbelievable," she laughed, recounting that Zee needed a calculator and typewriter for bookkeeping purposes, cooking utensils, spices and food because they tire of restaurant cooking and enjoy dabbling in gourmet cooking. And their wardrobes are rather extensive.

Barb added, "If we wear different clothes, it's a different show."

The Jay B. Zee show, which opens with some adult and topical comedy bits he writes and steals from others, encourages the audience to participate in the hypnosis.

"It is not magic or mentalism," stressed Zee, who added that there are only four qualified hypnotists performing in night clubs around the country.

Because of the uniqueness of his field, Zee is involved in other assignments.

In Detroit, Zee was often called by the police department as a consultant on polygraph tests. He said "only on two occasions did we find they were lying and in one case it helped the suspect."

Although some people who are superstitious shy away from him, thinking he has magical powers, Zee said "hypnosis has really come into its own."

Barb added the use of hypnosis in natural childbirth has made it more acceptable.

"And hardly a night goes by when we don't have a request for help," said Zee, who refers them to doctors and psychologists in private practice.

People often ask for help in developing study habits, kicking drugs and cigarettes and losing weight.

In this age of interest in drugs, Zee surmised that hypnosis is of particular interest to young people.

"This is like a new drug to them and there are no side effects and yet it is harmless," he said.

They both admitted that a hypnotic trance is a relaxed condition similar to that of having had a couple of drinks.

"You usually remain yourself, but a little more uninhibited," commented Barb.

Zee continued: "You can pretty well pre-judge who is going to be susceptible by the musculature of the body and face, the eye movement and respiration." Some in the audience even go into trances like those onstage volunteers and Barb walks through the club waking these people.

The Jay B. Zee followers, susceptible or not to his hypnotic trances, have formed a 6,700-member fan club which started in Omaha.

Membership cards have been mailed as far away as New Zealand.

Gloom-Chasing 'Hallelujah'

'Messiah' Cast in Thousands: 'Wonderful' and 'Terrifying'

By Raymond R. Coffey
(c) 1974, Chicago Daily News

London — This was almost enough to get old George Frederick Handel himself out of the grave and shouting "hallelujah" all over again.

More than 3,000 people paid their way into Royal Albert Hall to put on what was surely the grandest-ever "do it yourself" amateur performance of Handel's Messiah.

And what a gloom-chaser of a show it was. The audience itself was both orchestra and chorus and the cast count worked out roughly to 700 sopranos, 600 altos, 500 basses, 350 tenors, 96 violins, 30 violas, 30 cellos, 11 double basses, eight clarinets, eight bassoons, eight flutes, eight oboes, six trumpets, six trombones, one timpani, one harpsichord and a couple thousand additional choristers who weren't quite sure of anything except their enthusiasm.

Peter Clowes, a medical student, carried the "do it yourself" idea to the ultimate. His solo on the His Trumpet Shall Sound bit was played on a trumpet he built himself.

And when the whole mob cut loose on the Hallelujah Chorus they very nearly took the roof off the old hall.

The idea for the do-it-yourself performance of Handel's most famous work was born last April over a lunch of four professors from Imperial College.

"We'll call it Messiah From Scratch," Prof. Gavin Park suggested.

So they printed tickets at $2.90 each and began inviting people to "come along and have a go."

Every ticket was sold.

And the performance was entirely amateur except for four soloist singers hired to sort of lead the way. Park, a physicist, conducted the orchestra.

One alto who joined in was 80-year-old Bella Davis. Trumpeters included 11-year-old Adam Corcos.

"The work is so well known that you don't really need to rehearse it in quite the same way as other works," said Prof. David Burgess, one of the organizers.

"Of course we had to do a certain amount of planning. We sold seats in the chorus sections according to the voice people sing in," he said.

"Many people have heard or taken part in the Messiah in churches and village halls," he said, "so we thought a lot of them might like to do it at the Albert Hall."

One of the four professional soloists, soprano Grace Dives, was asked what it was like to sing with thousands of amateurs.

"Wonderful," she said. Then on second thought, "Did I say wonderful? Make that, terrifying." The amateurs, though, seemed to have no doubts about themselves or the whole idea.

"Oh, wasn't it lovely though?" one old dear said to a reporter as the applause finally died away, "so much nicer than all this gloom we're getting now. I think we were very good."

Hallelujah!

STARTS WEDNESDAY

Jacobshagen Needs Country

"Isolation can be an advantage to a person who doesn't want to be overcome by New York fever. I have never felt a need to go to New York to paint," says Keith N. Jacobshagen II, associate professor of art at the University of Nebraska.

The young painter, one of those featured in Nebraska ETV's film, A Sense of Place, explains: "I have a very strong feeling about it. Of the 33 years of my life. I have spent 32 in the Midwest.

"I have never been afraid of provincialism. I think it's a state of mind. Certainly there are some cultural advantages in New York City, but after all it is only three hours away by air.

"Then too, the magazines keep you up to date concerning what is going on. There is a certain thing about New York that provides a working energy. After all, the Lincoln community of artists is not terribly large.

"I love New York, but I couldn't stay there a long period of time. I need the country too much."

California, Europe Ahead

Jacobshagen and his wife Susann are leaving for California at the end of this semester. They plan to rent a house in the country, where both will work on their painting. After six months, they will go to Europe for two months before returning to Lincoln.

The leave is made possible by a Woods Fellowship, he said.

Keith Jacobshagen contemplates a scene of Midwest.

Jacobshagen worked for a year in Kansas City as a commercial artist, sharing a studio with three other designers.

Born and raised in Topeka, Jacobshagen has a particular love for the land in Nebraska, Kansas and Missouri.

Began as Child

He explains his career as an artist as "a natural thing. I was always drawing as a child and I was encouraged to do so by my parents."

The painter says he plays the piano a little now. "I was brought up on jazz. My father collected it. In school I had a jazz trio to earn a little extra money."

If Jacobshagen has a hobby it's flying planes. But, he says, he is lucky that he truly loves the physical work of painting though it can be both exasperating and exhilarating.

Concerning his thoughts on the amateur artist, Jacobshagen says, "There isn't anything that a person does personally that can be counted unimportant."

And the arts in Lincoln?

"There is greater community interest in the arts in Lincoln than in other cities the same size."

Cabbies OK Credit Cards

(c) New York Times

At least one New York cab company — the Brooklyn Two-Way Radio Taxi Assn. — is now accepting credit cards. It drivers honor either BankAmericard or American Express.

A $3 service charge is added to the amount on the meter for each credit transaction, but the $3 takes care of the driver's tip as well as bookkeeping costs, according to a spokesman for the company.

Each driver carries a supply of credit card slips and, after checking out the passenger's card number of radio, fills out a slip at the end of the journey and gives it to the passenger to sign.

Because of the $3 fee, most passengers charge only long trips, but short ones can be charged, too.

Arts Council Booklet Gives Many Answers

"Everything you always wanted to know about the Nebraska Arts Council and were afraid to ask."

The above sentence is around the border of a new pamphlet of the Nebraska Arts Council.

And it is true — most questions concerning the council are answered in the pamphlet. Included are timely comments concerning the history of the organization, its membership and staff.

deadlines; community arts assistance program, special projects program, other categories of assistance and a brief item about the Bicentennial celebration.

The booklet has been distributed to many local arts councils, schools, colleges, art organizations. It may be obtained by writing to the council's office in Omaha.

Will going to northern California change his style of painting?

Jacobshagen says, no. "It will be just changing the place, not my style. I get a feedback from the land and the differences in the landscapes there might affect the painting — but stylistically, I'm certain my painting won't change."

Of his wife Jacobshagen says, "She's a very fine painter . . . one of my very best teachers."

The Jacobshagens met at the Art Center School in Los Angeles, where both were working toward degrees in illustration.

He had a BFA from Kansas City Art Institute when he entered the center. After a year, he went to the University of Kansas in Lawrence where he earned his MFA.

The Truman Family residence is a short distance from the library complex, is still the home of the late President's widow.

Warm colors mark these portraits, by artist Greta Kempton, of Harry and Bess Truman, now on display in the library-museum.

Truman Library Displays Appealing

often. To his knowledge, she has been there twice: the day Truman was buried and once after that, quietly with their only daughter, Margaret Truman Daniel.

Harry's grave is in the courtyard, surrounded by the crescent-shaped building of Indiana limestone, and there is room for Bess to take her place beside him. The two were childhood sweethearts, and it is said that when Harry was President, Bess was his closest adviser.

A few feet to the left of the grave is a dogwood tree (state tree of Missouri) given "in memory of the great devotion held for Harry S. Truman by Dean Acheson," Truman's secretary of state. Mrs. Acheson planted the tree in April 1973 in the name of her late husband. The library also has been given the Acheson papers.

It is a little puzzling to those of us who know Harry Truman had no middle name — he finally selected S to satisfy those who insisted he have one — to see the S with a period after it. It appears everywhere like that in the library, although Truman never dotted the S in his signature.

Everyone who visits the library and museum will have a favorite or maybe several favorite displays. One that especially appealed to me is the oak table on which in May 1947 Truman signed the bill giving aid to Greece and Turkey — the Truman Museum visitors can see this well-preserved 1940 Chrysler, bought new by Mr. Truman.

Doctrine. The lighting in the area is subdued, giving the table and its two chairs an almost golden glow.

Equally impressive are portraits of Truman as grand master of Missouri Masons and one of Mrs. Truman painted in 1965. Both are works of Greta Kempton. The colors are warm, as I might have found Harry and Bess if I had been lucky enough to meet them.

Also hanging in the library, off by itself, is a modernistic painting of John F. Kennedy by Elaine de Kooning. It was the last portrait painted from life.

Although the list of favorite exhibits could go on almost indefinitely, these probably will appeal to most visitors:

— A replica of the battleship Missouri, the last such ship built by the United States. It was launched Jan. 29, 1944, with the help of Truman's daughter, Margaret, and was decommissioned Feb. 26, 1955.

— The highly polished 1950 black Lincoln Cosmopolitan limousine, especially designed for the White House. Not far away is a beige Chrysler Royal, bought by Sen. Truman in 1940 and driven by him until 1945 when he became president at the death of Franklin D. Roosevelt. For the next 10 years, it was driven by his sister, Mary Jane Truman.

— The exhibit of political cartoons on the main floor.

— The lower level, which is dedicated to Truman's military service and his 1948 presidential campaign against Thomas E. Dewey.

I could write much more to describe what is in the library and museum, but words cannot tell the story as effectively as a visit.

Nebraskans, especially those in the eastern part of the state, are lucky in a way most of them probably never thought about. There are three presidential libraries within a relatively short driving distance: the Herbert Hoover Library at West Branch, Iowa; the Harry S. Truman Library and Museum at Independence and the Dwight D. Eisenhower Library at Abilene, Kan.

Having seen two of these three presidential libraries, I can assure you it's worth the time. Each accurately reflects its man.

Hassle at Customs Easily Avoidable

By Leonard M. Groupe

(c) Chicago Daily News

Chicago — Did you know that U.S. Customs was once responsible for breaking an engagement? An American girl on a European vacation met a man who, after a whirlwind courtship, gave her a two-carat engagement ring. When she returned to the United States to prepare for the wedding, she had to declare the ring when she went through customs.

Not having any proof of the value of the ring upon which duty could be based, she agreed that customs could send it to a jeweler for appraisal and notify her of how much duty she'd had to pay to get it back. Imagine the scene at her house when customs notified her that there wasn't any duty to pay because that diamond wasn't really a diamond. The value of the ring was less than her $100 exemption!

But here's a customs story that's not so amusing. My wife and I were recently returning from Europe on a charter flight. The plane made a stop in the east for fuel and for customs inspection. Our baggage was unloaded, we went through customs, the baggage was reloaded, we got back on the plane — and waited. Four of the passengers apparently were being detained. We took off without them when the pilot was advised they wouldn't be coming along. That sure sobered up our flight back home.

When I met Conrad Wolski, chief supervisory inspector of customs at Chicago's O'Hare Airport, I asked him about this. He couldn't tell me what happened to them (other than suggesting it probably was only one person being detained with the rest of the family also staying behind), but he told me something more important — how to keep it from happening to you.

Last year, more than 879,000 passengers cleared customs at O'Hare, and 1,544 didn't. That averages out to between 4 and 5 seizures a day!

How do customs officers catch them?

They start out by being the politest cops in America. They assume that everything is OK until they get some indication that maybe everything isn't OK. Many of these indications come from a thorough knowledge of how people behave, especially when they're trying to sneak something past customs, says Wolski, who was a psychiatric social worker before joining U.S. Customs.

They've also got a computer. While you're going through baggage inspection, your name is being cleared through a computer in San Diego, Calif., which is tied into the computers of the National Crime Information Center. So if you've got any kind of a record, even a bust for simple possession of marijuana, it'll show up on the computer. This alerts the customs inspector and if you've got any drugs with you, there isn't much of a chance of slipping through.

I asked Wolski if he had any advice to give to the average vacation traveler on how he might be able to whiz through customs with a minimum of fuss, muss or bother so coming home will be as pleasant as going away.

According to Wolski, the most important thing to do is to obtain the booklet of customs hints called Before You Go. It will answer 98% of all normal travelers' questions. It's free at any customs office and can be obtained by mail from any district director of customs.

The booklet also gives the rates of duty on many tourist items. Surprisingly, the rates are not as high as many people think. For example, expensive cameras are 7½%. Bone china is 17½%, a diamond ring is 12% but an unset diamond is 3%. Antiques (over 100 years old) and original oil paintings are free. The rates of duty apply not to what you paid for the article, but to its wholesale value. In most cases, it's much like sales tax. When the $100-per-person exemption is applied to the items with the highest rates of duty, most people end up paying out very little.

Before you leave the country, be sure to register with customs any foreign-made cameras, watches, etc. You're taking out of the country. It may save quite a hassle when you bring them back. Foreign-made articles are subject to duty every time they're brought into the country unless you have acceptable proof of prior possession in this country.

When you pack, keep together in one section of your luggage all the items you bought or were given abroad. Don't bring in any foodstuffs without first making sure it's OK. Fruits, vegetables and meats are all taboo. During the summer months, so much of this is confiscated at O'Hare, you'd think they were running a produce market, Wolski says.

Under no circumstances should you fail to make the required written declaration of any article you are carrying that belongs to somebody else. It will be carefully examined, of course, but at least you might not have as much to worry about if something else is found inside.

Tourists Now Can Visit Battle of Bosworth Site

(c) 1974 New York Times

The site of England's battle of Bosworth, in which Richard III was defeated by Henry Tudor, later to become Henry VII, is now open to the public. Bosworth Field, which is in farming country 2 miles west of Leicester, has been converted into a visitor attraction by the Leicestershire County Council.

Visitors can explore the battlefield and the field where Richard died along a marked system of footpaths and wander through a farmhouse that has been made into an interpretative center, with an exhibition, a model of the battle plus a taped commentary, an auditorium and a refreshment room.

The battle, in which Richard's 12,000-strong army met Henry's victorious 10,000 was one of the most momentous in English history; it marked the end of the Plantagenet dynasty and the start of the Tudor. Bosworth Field is near the town of Market Bosworth and about 110 miles northwest of London. From London drivers should take Motorway-1 to Leicester. There are daily trains to Leicester from London's St. Pancras Station.

Christmas Past: Warm Memories

By Gertrude Skinner

Superior

One can live equally in the past and the future without upsetting the balance of the present.

The future is unexplored territory — filled with the magnetism and exhilaration of adventure, the thrill of possibility, the trembling joy of expectancy. But it is a gamble, my friends.

It is good to return to the past. It is like going home after a long absence. It is familiar, warm, dear, restful and safe. It is resting after the game. It is life with the gamble removed.

Things that were and are no more, jewels of life twinkling from out the past:

The Christmas program at the Community Church in Ruskin. The little, white clapboard bell-towered church built by the sturdy pioneers who settled in the area almost a century ago. The Christmas card little village church. Bells ringing out across the snowy fields calling the faithful to worship.

The gigantic tree inside, decorated with tinsel and cranberries and popcorn. The Sunday school children costumed in bathrobes, cheesecloth and bright silk. The nativity — a Joseph who cried all through the pageant, a wise man who knocked a shepherd flat, an angelic little Mary who was to know so few Christmases. And Eli and I and our baby son.

The Christmas program at Summit School. The white frame country school house up the lane and across the way from the farm. Weeks of practice by the children, excitedly committing to memory their "piece to speak in the program." Much secretiveness about "what I made you for Christmas" and the guessing and the feigned puzzlement, the drawing of names.

The snow, like a white velvet carpet stretched before us, as we drove up the lane juggling pies and sandwiches to be served after the program. The stars twinkling gaily down upon us, piloting us up to the school house steps.

The pot-bellied stove exuding warmth into the hall as we greeted neighbors and friends and school patrons (usually grandparents). Windows filled with construction paper candles and Christmas trees and fat Santas. Chains of green paper and red Christmas bells hanging from corner to corner, criss-crossed in the middle.

The giggling children behind the improvised stage curtains. The quiet hush as the lovely young (17) teacher announced the program The presentation of Dickens' Christmas Carol. Jack, our own little 5-year-old Tiny Tim, carried in on the shoulders of a big boy in the eighth grade. And Eli.

One-Horse Sleigh Shown At Historical Museum

Special yuletide exhibits are on display at the Nebraska State Historical Society Museum, 15th and R. In the rotunda is a one-horse spring sleigh, a gift of Fred M. Sidles. Completing this exhibit is a driver bundled in a buffalo coat surrounded by tissue wrapped gifts.

Display cases in the main hall are reminiscent of bygone days. "The Newest Ideas in Fancy Work" features homemade crafts from simple pen wipers to hand-painted china. Included are a variety of Christmas tree ornaments made in the 1880's from maple sugar and cookie dough. These three dimensional designs were often found in the home of early Nebraska settlers of German origin.

The Delineator magazine in 1900 suggests more elaborate gifts, among them pearl inlaid opera glasses, a petit silver coffee server, lady's bronze boudoir clock, and various items of jewelry. Also on display are toys from past Christmases, including an 1883 Humpty Dumpty bank.

Museum hours are 1:30-5 p.m. Sunday and 8 a.m.-5 p.m. weekdays. In addition the Historical Society staffs the Kennard House, 1617 H, where home decorations in the style of the 1870s may be seen. Hours there are 2-5 p.m. on Sunday and 9 a.m.-4 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday. Both the museum and the Kennard House will be closed Christmas day.

Children's Mural Depicts the Creation

There has been an addition to the very traditional sanctuary at Faith Lutheran church, 63rd and Madison.

It is a 23-foot painted mural of the Creation that shouts joy.

At the 9:15 a.m. service today, Reinhold Marxhausen, professor of art at Concordia College in Seward, will speak on the contribution of children's art.

A decision as to whether it should be a part of the sanctuary on a permanent basis has not yet been made, according to Stan Goldfish, Faith Church's minister of education. This is the second week for it to be shown.

The mural was painted as a result of a financial contribution of the Gwendell Hohensee family, who suggested the art division of Concordia College be contacted for paintings.

After Faith Church representatives met with Prof. William

Wolfram, head of the Concordia art department, plans were made to have children of the congregation work on the project, with Concordia students assisting.

Also assisting the children was Martha Maier, a teacher at St. John's Lutheran school in Seward.

In late summer, 10 first, second and third graders traveled to Concordia for five Saturday mornings to work on their paintings. In addition to the mural, other religious works were completed and are framed, awaiting hanging.

Young artists include Douglas Bauch, Stephanie Goldfish, Michelle Otte, Carrie Ross, Jill Frazer, Marcy Muench, David Zimmerman, Laverne Loschen, Tom Heiser and David Riggert.

They like colors such as purple, green, blues, reds and yellows.

When they work from either side of the canvas, they make things right-side-up from their perspective.

The bright, creative result can easily be identified as the creation story.

This Arapaho lodge maker's costume and body painting were worn on the fourth day of the ceremonial Sun Dance. The lodge maker held and wore sprigs of sage. He used a whistle made from an eagle wingbone.

Denver Museum Exhibits American Indian Costumes

Denver — A major exhibition of personal decorative art of the American Indian is offered at the Denver Art Museum to Jan. 19. It presents a cross-section of what the native American wore and explains the significance of the decoration applied to clothing and bodies.

The displays and the exhibition catalog point out that body paintings usually had such mundane but practical purposes as protection against sunburn and windburn.

The exhibition shows, among many things, that the native American used decorative art in his clothing and on his body skillfully and imaginatively and with methods and reasons that were often profound and ingenious, as well as practical.

The Yurok, Hupa and Karok tribes, who lived in what is now California, had a concept of money much like our own in which the medium of exchange was a marine shell whose value was determined by its length.

Adult men of these tribes tattooed gauge lines on their forearms for measuring the seashells.

Some body paintings were associated with hostilities, but not the way they're portrayed in "western" movies. In many instances "war paint" was worn simply as a magical protective device. The Mojave painted their faces completely black to indicate their hostile intentions and to identify themselves to one another — like members of a basketball or football team.

The museum has drawn on its own holdings and borrowed from other important collections in the U.S. and Canada to offer more than 300 examples of clothing and body decorations representative of the original inhabitants of North America during three centuries.

Many examples in the exhibition are displayed on mannequins and mounted in vignettes and other groups.

Happiness Can Be UNP Books for Christmas

118 Lincoln, Neb., Sunday Journal and Star, December 15, 1974

By Valerie Elmore

Sometimes, Christmas gift pleasers are easy to find. For example, at the University of Nebraska Press.

UNP publishes both hardback and paperback books, fiction and nonfiction, on many and varied subjects. For example, state history; pioneer life and Indians; agriculture and economics; U.S., Latin American and European history; literature; drama;

"narrowing the focus of his earlier books to one man, a writer and self-exiled Nebraskan."

Man and Boy (1951) is a sometimes subtle, sometimes satiric look at the relationship of Mr. Ormsby and Mother, two highly original characterizations with a twist.

According to Morris, The Works of Love (1952) was the first fruit of his efforts to recapitulate his past. Like six books in writer. Pictures are by Lucia Woods, text by Bernice Slotte.

Published in 1973 to commemorate the centennial of Miss Cather's birth, the book represents the combined efforts of author, photographer, Willa Cather's family and the Willa Cather Memorial Foundation. It is a biography in words and pictures, with 192 illustrations (38 full color, 82 by Lucia Woods).

Lucia Woods is a New York photographer. Bernice Slotte, noted Cather authority, is editor of Prairie Schooner and professor of English at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

Another Cather book, this one in paperback, is Willa Cather: Her Life and Art by James Woodress, chairman of the English department of the University of California. It begins with her early years in Virginia and Nebraska and devotes one chapter to her Lincoln residency. It also introduces new biographical data and pictures. At the end is a list of her works and their publication dates, posthumous editions and books about her.

The Art of Willa Cather, edited by Bernice Slotte and Virginia Faulkner, is a collection of the main addresses and papers presented at the international seminar on Willa Cather held at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln in October 1973.

At the seminar, such well-known authors as Pulitzer Prize winners Eudora Welty and Leon Edel sought to examine and reexamine Miss Cather's techniques, themes and goals and to focus on a new direction of Cather study.

Virginia Faulkner is an associate editor of Prairie Schooner and editor of the University of Nebraska Press.

History

Roundup: A Nebraska Reader, compiled and edited by Virginia Faulkner, is a collection of book, essay, magazine and newspaper article excerpts aimed at relating the history of Nebraska.

The various pieces were written over many years by several authors of all types for several reasons and on a variety of subjects, but each recounts something of Nebraska history.

According to its preface, History of Nebraska by James C. Olson is a one-volume survey to serve as an introduction to Nebraska history for both the college student and the general reader.

It is a more formal work than Miss Faulkner's Roundup — their approaches are different. It includes maps and pictures of early Nebraska and its leaders and traces the development of the state.

James C. Olson, chancellor of the University of Missouri-Kansas City, was formerly vice chancellor of graduate studies and professor of history at NU.

History in the form of a personal narrative is found in Western Story: The Recollections of Charley O'Kieffe, 1884-1886. A story of boyhood years and growing up on a homestead in northwest Nebraska, it portrays the drama and tragedy of a decade that saw the last great wave of settlers and the last armed encounters between Army and Indians.

The Midwest became the final home of many pioneer Scandinavians, and The Divided Heart by Dorothy Burton Skardal discusses their immigrant experiences. Her book is described as an experiment in the use of literature as a source of social history and is done in much the same way as Roundup.

The Divided Heart includes hundreds of quotations from stories and poems relating the emotions and trials of this ethnic group in America.

Dorothy Burton Skardal, lecturer in American studies at the American Institute, University of Oslo, Norway, is a native Omahan and a granddaughter of Swedish immigrants in Nebraska.

Traveling south, James Rawley discusses the turning points within the major turning point of America — the Civil War. Turning Points of the Civil War asserts those pivotal times included the First Battle of Bull Run, the Emancipation Proclamation and the presidential election of 1864.

James Rawley is professor of history at UNL.

Indians

The Modern Sioux: Social Systems and Reservation Culture, edited by Ethel Nurge, combines 11 essays by several authors and explores such topics as Indian cultural identity, social adaptation and personality formation. Although focusing on a single tribe, it also is applicable to other American Indian groups.

The essays in Modern Sioux include "Cultural Identities Among the Oglala Sioux" by Robert E. Daniels and "Rosebud Reservation Economy," by Ruth Hill Useem and Carl K. Eicher.

On a more general level, The Hoe and the Horse on the Plains by Preston Holder discusses such tasks as hoe farming and hunting from horseback, two native modes of Indian life on the Great Plains. It also discusses some of white cultures effects on the Indians.

Preston Holder is professor emeritus of anthropology and a former UNL department chairman.

Memoirs of a White Crow Indian is the story of Thomas H. Leforge as told by Thomas B. Marquis.

Leforge was born in Ohio, but through his association with the Indians, he became a Crow Wolf, married a Crow woman and served as interpreter, agency employe and chief of the Crow scouts. He died on a reservation.

First published under the title Red Mother (1932) Pretty-shield could be called the first book to relate the woman's side of Indian life. This volume by Frank B. Linderman is the story of a Crow medicine woman who related to Linderman (through an interpreter) the details of Indian life before the white man came.

She told him about childhood, the duties of Indian girls and women, courtship, marriage childbirth, care of the sick and the dangers and joys of Indian womanhood.

Boss Cowman: The Recollections of Ed Lemmon, 1857-1946 is the story of a boy and his early life on the plains, his later encounters with hostile Indians and his adult recollections of life in the "good-old-bad-old days." Edited by Nellie Snyder Yost, Boss Cowman received the Golden Spur award of the Western Writers of America for the best western nonfiction book published in 1969.

Nellie Snyder Yost lives in North Platte and is currently working on a Cook County history to be published in 1976.

First published in 1967, Klaus J. Hansen's Quest for Empire: The Political Kingdom of God and the Council of Fifty in Mormon History reinterprets Mormon history with the idea that a political kingdom of God, directed by the Council of Fifty, is the key to understanding the Mormon past.

Kelly Blue is the story of a teamster, ranch hand, mule-skinner, range rider, sheepherder, logger, bullwacker, debt-ridden farmer and (finally) skillful painter.

Less Midwest-oriented, Adam C. Breckenridge's The Executive Privilege deals with the circumstances and controls on the president's right to control information and Congress's counterbalance to that control.

Adam C. Breckenridge is a professor of political science and acting director of libraries at UNL.

Reading often sends one scurrying after snacks, but hold your appetite and consult The Nebraska Pioneer Cookbook, compiled by Kay Graber. It presents varieties of Nebraska recipes, including pemmican and pickled plums, sauerkraut and kolaches.

Kay Graber is associate editor at the University of Nebraska Press.

political science; philosophy and religion; and more.

So, for those Christmas surprises, consider the following volumes, most of which were written or edited by Nebraskans.

Morris

Wright Morris is a professor of literature at San Francisco State University. He is also a National Book Award winner with 20 volumes to his credit.

And he is a Nebraska native. Born in Central City in 1910, he lived in the Platte River Valley until he was eight, when his family moved to Chicago.

Morris' books span the years. His first, My Uncle Dudley, was published in 1942, and his two most recent works, War Games and Love Story: A Venetian Journal, appeared in 1972.

UNP has reprinted 7 of Morris' works (two of them are part of his Nebraska trilogy) and is either printing or trying to secure rights to the other 13. Listed below are the UNP reprints.

The Home Place (1948) is a combination of words and pictures, a recounting of Morris' return to his home in Lone Tree, a probing, first-person narrative. The 81 black-and-white photographs were made in May and June 1947. This is one of the books of the trilogy.

Another novel in his trilogy is also in print under the UNP colophon. The World in an Attic (1949) has been described as Morris' attempt to come to terms with his past by one, it blends the early life-styles of the plains.

The Huge Season, also published in 1952, deals with the jazz age and its effects on the protagonist and his friends. Called "a picture of a generation," it recalls their exploits in college, in Paris and in love.

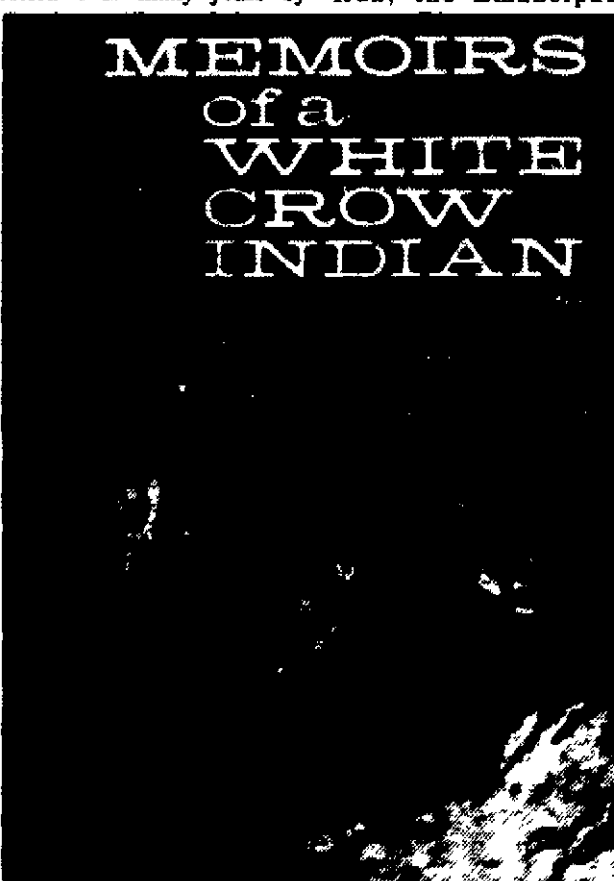

In 1956, Morris won a National Book Award for The Field of Vision, a novel of human condition which follows a group of touring Americans in Mexico and draws a parallel between the drama of the bulking and their own lives.

As in his earlier work, The Home Place, Morris again brings Lone Tree to his writings in one of his longer books, Ceremony in Lone Tree (1960). He skillfully uses themes to connect the scattered events in the lives of a Nebraska family and in so doing presents a view of the history of some peoples in the Western World.

Morris, a graduate of Pomona College, holds honorary degrees from Westminster College and the University of Nebraska. He is an elected member of the National Institute of Arts and Letters and the American Academy of Arts and Sciences.

Cather

Perhaps one of the most widely acclaimed books published by UNP in the last couple of years is Willa Cather: A Pictorial Memoir, a combination of new and old pictures and text on the life of Nebraska's most famous

'Spectrum' Off TV, Cut on Radio

By Les Brown
(c) 1974 New York Times

New York — Spectrum, an opinion feature that has served as a form of op-ed page for CBS News since 1971, has been dropped from the television network, without announcement, and its function largely assumed by newsmen on staff.

The radio version continues but it has been cut back from 18 broadcasts a week to 12. A spokesman for the radio network said the reduction was for economy reasons.

In both its radio and television forms, Spectrum featured a range of opinion by commentators outside the network representing the political left and right and the gradations between. As such, it provided ideological access for viewpoints not normally represented in network news.

Patrick J. Buchanan, one of the staunchest critics of broadcast journalism during his years as speech writer for former President Richard M. Nixon, was among those who had praised Spectrum for giving voice to persons sympathetic to the administration, as well as to those who were not.

The broadcasts began on radio in January, 1971, and on television, in the CBS Morning News, the following October. With the reduction, the radio network is reported to be saving $600 a week in fees to guest commentators.

The Spectrum commentators were largely journalists from newspapers and magazines, and the roster includes such writers as M. Stanton Evans, John K.
Jessup, Stewart Alsop, Murray
Kempton, Ethel Payne,
Nicholas Von Hoffman, John D.
Roche, Shana Alexander and Phyllis Schlafly.

Joseph T. Dembo, who has been executive producer of Morning News since last April, took responsibility for discarding Spectrum as "an experiment that didn't work." He said that the allocation of one minute of air time to persons who were not professional broadcasters generally made for inadequate presentations, but that to have increased the allotment to five minutes would have destroyed the pacing of the Morning News.

'Petrocelli' Continues

By United Press International

NBC's new Petrocelli series on Wednesday nights has been renewed for the second half of the season. The show got off to a slow start in the fall but has built rapidly in recent weeks. Star Barry Newman will begin work after the last episode is completed this spring on a theater movie based on the early army career of Gen. John Pershing titled Black Jack. He will star in and produce the film.

Portions of Tennessee Ernie Ford's visit to the Soviet Union with a cast of Nashville's country music entertainers were filmed on the spot and have been edited into a one-hour NBC special to be telecast Jan. 8.

CBS has a new weekly one-hour detective-adventure series titled Khan! set for a Feb. 7 debut. The star, playing a private detective based in San Francisco's Chinatown, is oriental actor Khig Dhiegh, who has become popular through a number of appearances as the criminal Wo Fat on the Hawaii Five-O series.

NBC has set Jan. 23 for the broadcasting of another Jack Benny variety hour. Jack Benny's Annual Special is the title of the show, which will have several guest stars not yet identified.

Moyers to Cover World

(C) 1974 New York Times

Bill D. Moyers, who gave up his public television series Bill Moyers' Journal last May after it had won three Emmy awards, is mounting a new series for the Public Broadcasting Service that will deal entirely with international affairs. Originating in New York, the series will be scheduled Thursday nights at 8, beginning Jan. 16.

On a budget of $1.1 million, Moyers will present 20 programs under the title of Bill Moyers' Foreign Report.

The former newspaper publisher and press secretary to President Lyndon B. Johnson said his series will alternate filmed documentaries with magazine-style programs and with interviews and conversations with heads of state, historians, economist and journalists.

One million dollars would buy only four or five one-hour programs in commercial television. Last year, Bill Moyers' Journal produced 30 programs on a budget of $1.5 million. Moyers noted that a program such as Sixty Minutes on CBS has 14 producers, in addition to back-up staff, while his series will have a total staff of 10.

Moyers said he plans to do four documentaries: on the developing islands of the Caribbean, economic progress in Mexico, the problems of Japan's economy and what he termed "energy and the capital flow." Helmut Schmidt, the West German chancellor, has agreed to appear on one of the conversation programs.

Moyers also plans to have a monthly world roundup, in which he would lead a discussion of international events with foreign journalists by satellite from London.

Moyers has secured financing from five sources but at midweek was still $200,000 short of the $1.1 million total.

The German Marshall Fund, a private U.S. foundation dedicated to promoting awareness of the common problems of industrial societies, contributed $500,000. The Corp. for Public Broadcasting granted $200,000 and the Ford Foundation and International Business Machines Corp. each contributed $100,000. The Inter-American Foundation, which engages chiefly in 'self-help' grants in Latin America, gave $75,000.

July 4 News, 1776 Version

By Irv Kupcinet
 (c) Chicago Sun-Times

Time's contribution to the American bicentennial celebration will be a special issue next spring covering the news of the week of July 4, 1776, as if the magazine were being published at that historic time. The American Revolution will be the main feature in the magazine, but time also will report an "environmental story" dealing with the waste of farmland, a medical story on the smallpox epidemic sweeping the colonies and a personal item on George Washington's snubbing the John Hancocks. The editors now are determining whether Washington, Thomas Jefferson or Benjamin Franklin should adorn the cover.

Headliners

John (Duke) Wayne and Katharine Hepburn so thoroughly enjoyed working with each other in the movie Rooster Cogburn (contrary to the expected fireworks) that they now are seeking another film in which they can co-star.

Dick Cavett announced he would be seen each Thursday in December on ABC-TV, instead of his usual once-a-month airing. But he didn't explain why. His contract with the network calls for a total of 26 shows. Because of previous pre-emptions, ABC has to use all his pre-taped shows this month, including one on Jan. 1, before Cavett departs for CBS.

Notre Dame coach Ara Parseghian should steer away from "disaster" films for his team prior to its Southern Cal games. Two years ago, the Irish saw Poseidon Adventure and were clobbered by Southern Cal; this year, the team saw Earthquake, and suffered a landslide defeat.

6TV 16 New Shows Enter at Midseason

By Jay Sharbutt, AP

Here is a handy shopping list of 16 new evening series you may want to check out as they check in from now through March.

CBS has four shows, one of which, Tony Orlando and Dawn, began its Wednesday night run on Dec. 4 after first appearing as a summer musical variety series. NBC has five new shows and ABC has seven.

Of the new midseason offerings, four are music-variety programs, six are half-hour situation comedies or dramas, five are cops 'n' robbers sagas and one is a mess of movies.

Here's where and when the new shows will appear:

Monday

ABC, which now starts off with The Rookies, will have three hours of cop shows by the end of February. Caribe, about a Miami gendarme fighting Caribbean crime, arrives Feb. 17. A week later, S.W.A.T., based on the Los Angeles Police Dept.'s elite special weapons and tactical team, joins the ranks of TV crime-stoppers.

At NBC, the Smothers Brothers, whose shows gave CBS censors a pain in the ah, neck a few seasons ago, try again with a regular music-comedy series which starts Jan. 13.

Tuesday

Nothing new afoot.

Wednesday

Only CBS, Tony Orlando and Dawn is new fare.

Thursday

At NBC, The Mac Davis Show, a music-variety summer entry,

Friday

At CBS, Khan, an hour-long gumshoe series set in San Francisco's Chinatown, arrives Feb. 7. ABC has two sitcoms — Hotel Baltimore, about a seedy hotel's inhabitants, and Karen, about a has a brief run, starting Dec. 19, but gives up its hour-long slot in mid-March to make way for two half-hour shows, Sunshine, about a young musician raising an orphan girl, and The Bob Crane Show, about a successful businessman returning to medical school. NBC says the Davis show may be back next fall as a regular series.

Archer, a private eye series based on the Ross MacDonald thrillers, also will check in at NBC on Thursday nights, starting Jan. 30.

The only other Thursday newcomer is Barney Miller, an ABC sitcom about a Manhattan police captain. It starts on Jan. 16.

Washington career girl — arriving on Jan. 24.

On Jan. 17, ABC will start Baretta, a retooled version of last season's Toma detective series. Retooled may mean only a new star, Robert Blake, who has Tony Musante's old role.

Saturday

On Jan. 11, ABC adds another lineup of made-for-TV and theatrical movies to join those it now shows on Sunday, Tuesday and Wednesday nights. At CBS, Jan. 18 will mark the premiere of The Jeffersons, a black family sitcom spun off from All in the Family. It'll appear right after the Bunkers' half hour.

Sunday

On Feb. 16, a Sonny-less Cher Bono kicks off her own music-variety show on CBS, with hopes for far higher ratings than were achieved by ex-husband Sonny in his solo ABC variety show, which has been canceled.

Minicam Extends News Day

(c) 1974 New York Times
New York — Refinements in the technology of hand-held videotape cameras have raised expectations throughout broadcasting of revolutionary changes in electronic newsgathering that would, among other things, extend reporters' deadlines and increase the visual content of newscasts.

More versatile than conventional newsreel cameras and more portable in that they require smaller crews, the new "mini-cams" are spoken of as promising to broaden the scope and variety of television news coverage. In eliminating film processing and permitting the cameras to be used in the field up to airtime, they would also lengthen the newsgathering day by at least an hour.

Competition in news, at both the local and network levels, has spurred the proliferation of the new miniature cameras, which are later generations of the somewhat heavier Norelco PCP-90, the "creepie peepie" familiar to viewers of sporting events and political conventions.

Weighing 14 to 18 pounds and equipped with battery-operated recorders strapped to a cameraman's back, the cameras can relay picture by portable microwave to the studio. If necessary the picture can go directly over the air.

Each of the three networks has spent close to $2 million to purchase the new equipment, to be delivered over the next 18 months. NBC News has purchased 29 Fernseh KCN cameras from Bosch Fernseh of Germany and three of the Japanese-made Ikegami 33. CBS News and ABC News work primarily with the Ikegami.

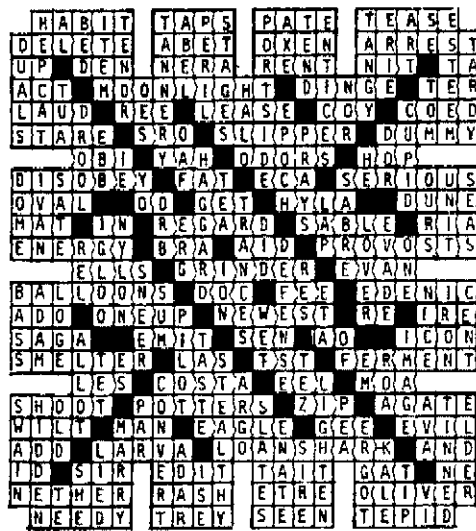

Other companies, such as RCA and Sony, have indicated that they will market new models before long.

President Ford's visit to Japan was covered largely by mini-cam by all three networks.

There is fairly general agreement among network news executives that the picture quality of the best mini-cameras equals that of the 16-millimeter film normally used for newscasts. Some consider it to be superior.

The cost of the new equipment — $50,000 for the cameras used by the networks, $30,000 for the microwave relay system and additional sums for accessories — has dampened the enthusiasm of many broadcasters.

BBC Puts Royal Word On Records

London (UPI) — Now you can hear King Edward VIII surrendering the British throne for "The Woman I Love" on your own hi-fi.

Or King George V speaking to his empire "through one of the marvels of modern science." Or a young girl called Princess Elizabeth turning to her sister and urging, "Come on, Margaret, say 'good night, children'."

For 50 years, since that same King George V opened the British Empire exhibition in 1924, the British Broadcasting Corp., has been recording royal speeches and occasions. Now it has issued a two-record LP album from its royal archives.

Fifty Years of Royal Broadcasts, 1924-1974 contains the voice of every monarch in those five decades, and much else.

Its royal broadcasts are linked by "reminders of related events and situations of national importance as recalled through BBC news bulletins, proclamations, the sounds of war and celebrations of peace," the BBC said.

Included are the voices of Sir Winston Churchill and Adolf Hitler as well as Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain's announcement on Sept. 3, 1939, that "this country is at war with Germany."

Britain's kings and queens have made "both formal and delightfully informal broadcasts," the BBC said, and the records contain a generous helping of both.

On Side one is Queen Mary in a christening speech: "I am happy to name this ship the 'Queen Mary.' I wish success to her and to all who sail in her."

On Side 4 is Queen Elizabeth taking a little dig at herself with a small parody of the words she is forced to parrot in so many formal speeches: "My husband and I, and by that I mean both of us..."

Philip, her husband, is represented by a few light-hearted cracks and Prince Charles, her eventual successor to the throne, by some somber ones:

"I, Charles, Prince of Wales, do become your liegeman of life and limb and of earthly worship, and faith and truth I will bear unto thee to live and die against all manner of folks." This was his oath at his 1969 investiture as Prince of Wales.

The BBC has for years made a lucrative practice of releasing records drawn from its enormous radio and television output. This is by no means a royal "first."

Its most recent royal record was Music for a Royal Wedding, a recording of the Westminster Abbey music when Princess Anne married Capt. Mark Phillips Nov. 14, 1973. Their marriage ceremony is on the new album.

The new double album is patterned most closely on the one two years ago celebrating the BBC's own 50-year anniversary. That one won a gold disc for BBC records.

In NEBRASKA

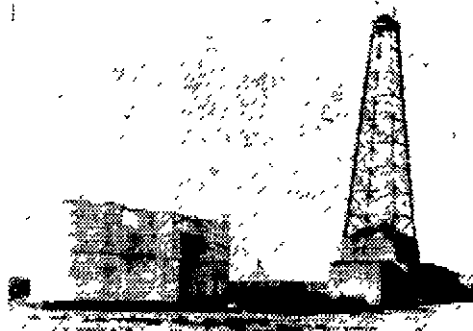

Who? Where?
What? When?

"Cold Soda" was the sign on the sidewalk, apparently a lure for warm weather customers of the era (about ???)

Last Week's Picture

Called Nebraska's first commercial production oil well, this was the Boice No. 1, completed Nov. 2, 1939. About 3½ miles west of Falls City, the well was an enterprise of the Pawnee Royalty Oil Co., owned by Texans B.G. and W.A. Ginn. It was drilled on land owned by R.H. Boice. The No. 1 Boice proved disappointing. It was not until the company had drilled its third well in the area, the Bucholz No. 1, that a well produced enough oil (at least 50 barrels a day for 60 consecutive days) to qualify for a $15,000 bonus offered by the Nebraska Legislature.

107 years ago
this week

old NEBRASKA

1867: There were 30 full-time workmen at the new Capitol site. They were preparing stone and lumber for spring work.

100 1874: A large number of farmers turned out for a meeting of the newly organized Nebraska Grange.

A dollar collection campaign was in progress in New York for the relief of Nebraska grasshopper sufferers.

90 1884: The City Council instructed Supt. James Richardson to make a map showing the location and size of all water pipes and hydrants in the city.

80 1894: The newly completed University School of Music was dedicated at ceremonies attended by several hundred people.

A subject of heated discussion was whether the city should amend the City Charter to allow taking over the electric lighting plant and garbage incinerator.

70 1904: Col. William F. (Buffalo Bill) Cody arrived in Lincoln with his troupe to stage his famous Wild West Show.

The University of Nebraska Board of Regents formally accepted a $66,000 donation from John D. Rockefeller to erect a building to house religious organizations. At the southeast corner of 12th and R, the building came to be known as The Temple.

Rep. A. V. Cunningham said he was going to introduce a bill in the Legislature that would ban football from institutions of higher learning.

60 1914: The County Board passed a resolution requesting Gov. John Morehead to rescind his proclamation for a relief fund for Belgians on the theory that many Nebraskan towns and counties had more poor and needy than usual.

50 1924: Gov. Charles Bryan became custodian of the old and new Capitol buildings when the Capitol Commission released the contractors.

40 1934: Asst. Fire Chief John Lamb notified the Legislature that the State Historical Society's newspaper files in the Capitol basement were a serious fire hazard to the $10 million building.

Federal benefit payments to Nebraska farmers totaled about $20 million, while only $6 million was collected in processing taxes.

30 1944: Gov. Dwight Griswold said he would support a proposed bill bringing state employed stenographers and clerks under the civil service or merit system.

Several educators and military personnel met at the Capitol to discuss education and rehabilitation of returning World War II veterans.

20 1954: Several state agencies agreed to survey Ft. Robinson as a possible state park site.

The Lincoln Board of Education purchased five houses for $45,150 on Knox between 12th and Lewis to use as classrooms because of crowded conditions at Belmont School.

10 1964: Lincoln Attorney Thomas J. McManus, 46, was appointed to the Municipal Court bench to succeed retiring Judge John Jacobson.

The Lancaster County Board of Commissioners and the Lincoln City Council passed similar resolutions calling for separate city and county bond issues, to be voted on at the April 6 city primary election, for a city-county building complex at 10th and J. If one or both of these issues fail, voters would be asked to decide in May on such a complex at 15th and O.

120-Medal Series Ends

By Joe Planas

It came to an end the other day — but not nearly so quickly as the Six-Day War.

History of the Jewish People. Four coin-medals concluded the 120-medal series which began five years ago. The last two medals minted were one entitled "Jerusalem the Eternal" and another in honor of Golda Meir. The latter medal struck in recognition of Mrs. Meir's concern and embodiment of "the moral character of Israel's struggle for survival and peace".

These two issues followed two issued for the month of September, one honoring Levi Eshkol, Israel's prime minister and one of its founding fathers and the other commemorating The Six-Day War.

An art book based on the series (two coins per month for 60 months) will be published soon. The book, The Medallic History of the Jewish People: An Epic in Sculpture contains photos and historical notes about each of the 120 coin-medals.

The Judaic Heritage Society, 866 United Nations Plaza, New York, N.Y. 10017, is publishing the book. The society also issued the coin-medals.

Hollywood (UPI) — Producer Ross Hunter, who left Universal, then Columbia over artistic differences, has signed aboard with Paramount.

Christmas Stamps Researched

The winter edition (Volume IX, No. 4) of the Minkus Stamp Journal features several articles of interest to collectors, especially topical philatelists. One yarn by Kartan C. Johnson, entitled Christmas Around the World, researches Christmas stamp designs and tells how these stamps provided a very special Christmas exhibit for a church in Atlanta.

Other stories include a topical checklist on Children on Stamps with subtopics such as toys, fairy tales, children's art, etc.; 50 Years of Dutch Welfare Stamps, which discusses the origin and development of an idea that now supports many worthy programs for children in the Netherlands, plus features on new U.S. stamps.

The Minkus Stamp Journal is published at 116 W. 32nd St., New York, N.Y. 10001.

Papuan Orchids

"Orchids to You" say the postal officials of Papua-New Guinea, as their latest issue of four stamps depicts the beautiful flowers of the islands. The set is the annual Flora and Fauna Conservation series of stamps by Papua-New Guinea, proudly depicting four of the most beautiful and largest species of orchids to be found anywhere in the world.

The 7-cents shows the coconut orchid, sometimes called the Cinderella orchid. The 10-cents illustrates the rhubarb orchid, so named because the flowers have a rhubarb scent. The 20-cents portrays the jellybean orchid or the bottlebrush orchid since the green lip looks like a jellybean but the flowered head has a bottlebrush appearance. The 30-cents bears a replica of the one day wonder orchid which received its name from the fact that its petals open in the morning and close before dark.

Fungi Dedication

The Republic of China has issued a set of four stamps dedicated to — of all things — edible fungi. The adhesives honor the "9th International Scientific Congress on the Cultivation of Edible Fungi" held in Taipei. These food items may be edible, but who can vouch for their being fungi?

Did You Know That...

"The Sugar Islands" is a nickname for the West Indies? Helvetia on stamps means the country is Switzerland?

A six-pointed star appears on many of the stamps of Israel?

Q. Why is Pabbi Baruch Korff advertising in newspapers for the U.S. public to contribute money to Richard Nixon when Nixon has an $80,000-a-year pension for life, real estate in Key Biscayne and San Clemente worth $1.5 million, and recently signed a contract for his memoirs with Warner Paperback Library for $2 million?—R. L., New Bedford, Mass.

A. Rabbi Korff likes Richard Nixon, believes he was treated unfairly.

Q. Manuel Benitez, El Cordobes, the world's richest bullfighter, refuses to marry the mother of his children although they have been living together for years. How come?—A. Guittierez, Miami, Fla.

A. El Cordobes, 38, has lived with his French girlfriend Martine Rayasse for almost 10 years. They have two children, a daughter, 6, and a son, 2. Now that he's retired from the bullring, the matador says he will finally marry Martine next March.

GETTING MARRIED: EL CORDOBES AND MARTINE, SHOWN WITH DAUGHTER MARIBEL

Q. E. Howard Hunt Jr., the Watergate spy from the CIA—did he ever work at MGM as a scriptwriter during which time he fell in love with actress June Allyson?—T. M., Wallingford, Conn.

A. Hunt worked for MGM in 1947. If he ever fell in love with June Allyson he never told her about it.

Q. What's happened to Esther Williams? She used to be married to Ben Gage. Who is her present husband? How tall?—Mary Rinehart, Avenal, Calif.

A. Esther Williams lives in Los Angeles, no longer is a swimming screen star. She is married to Fernando Lamas, Argentinian actor-turned-TV film director. He is 5 feet 10½.

CHIARA DENEUVE MASTROIANNI

Q. I understand that the daughter of Catherine Deneuve and Marcello Mastroianni is the most beautiful baby in the world. Can you please run a photo of little Chiara?—Mae Fingerhart, Encino, Calif.

A. Above Chiara Deneuve Mastroianni, who will be 3 years old in May.

Q. I notice that Frank Sinatra is playing the Diplomat Hotel, Hollywood, Fla., on New Year's Eve. Why is he making so many appearances? Is he broke? I caught him at Madison Square Garden, and I wonder if he wears a bulletproof vest or is he just getting fat around the middle?—W. T. Holt, New York City.

A. The thing to remember about Frank Sinatra is that he is hitting 60, and his once great voice is just about shot. He wears no bulletproof vest when performing. He makes personal appearances because he is still in demand, but is rapidly approaching his "last hurrah." What he now sells is charismatic nostalgia.

QUEEN ELIZABETH

Q. Is it true that Queen Elizabeth is secretly flying a plastic surgeon from Brazil to reshape her legs? What's wrong with them—too fat or too thin?—R.D., North Miami, Fla.

A. Queen Elizabeth's legs are not as shapely as some, but she is not submitting them to plastic surgery.

Q. Isn't Kaleriya Fedicheva the foremost ballerina in the Soviet Union? Isn't that why the Soviets refuse to let her leave Russia?—Olga Sverdlov, Seattle, Wash.

A. Kaleriya Fedicheva, 37, is one of the top ballerinas of the Kirov Ballet in Leningrad. Over the years she has danced with all three of the leading male Kirov dancers who defected or emigrated to the West—Rudolf Nureyev, Mikhail Baryshnikov, and Valery Panov. Last January, Miss Fedicheva was married in Leningrad to Martin Friedman, an American dancer with the Maryland Ballet. Soviet authorities now insist that the marriage was invalid because Miss Fedicheva's divorce was not final, which doesn't happen to be true. The truth is that the Soviet Union is tired of losing its best dancers to the West.

Q. How old is comedian Milton Berle? Does he have an illegitimate son? Did he really hate his mother?—Manny Wein, New Rochelle, N.Y.

A. Milton Berle was born in 1908. He has an illegitimate son, 40. He has seen his son, but his son does not know Berle is his father. The son is the result of Berle's union with a married woman who is now an alcoholic. As regards Berle's mother, the late Sadie-Sarah-Sandra Berlinger, she "pushed" Berle as a youngster into show business for which he alternately loved and hated her. For an inside view of Berle, read his new autobiography, called simply Milton Berle.

TINA AND ARI ONASSIS AT THEIR 1946 WEDDING PARTY

Q. Friends of mine were present, they say, at the wedding party of Athina Livanos to Aristotle Onassis in New York City in 1946. They say the bride was only 17. How old was Onassis then?—I. M. Platos, Baltimore, Md.

A. At that time, Onassis' age was given as 44.

OPEN TO DISCUSSION:

Are We Treating Our Presidents Too Well?

by Jack Anderson

Ten American Presidents as shown on Parade's cover: (1) Washington, (2) Jefferson, (3) Jackson, (4) Grant, (5) Hoover, (6) Truman, (7) Eisenhower, (8) Johnson, (9) Nixon, and (10) Ford.

WASHINGTON, D.C.

At the close of the Revolutionary War, George Washington's officers offered to make him king. He rejected the throne, but it has been inherited, nonetheless, by his successors. We have adorned our President with many of the trappings of a monarch—kingly estates, sleek limousines, luxurious jets, helicopters to lift him over the heads of the masses.

Trumpeters with banners draped from their elongated trumpets used to herald President Nixon's appearance at state banquets. He started to dress the White House guard in imperial costumes, but they looked so silly in their pointed hats that the people snickered and the President hastily put the new uniforms in mothballs.

The President has become our father figure, our commander in chief, our only royalty. Too many of us have misattributed the grandeur and mission of the United States to the politician who temporarily holds our nation's highest office. Treated like an exalted being, a President begins to think he is exalted.

George Washington set an example by establishing that the President was the servant, not the master, of the people. He "prevented this Revolution," wrote Thomas Jefferson, "from being closed, as most others have been, by a subversion of that liberty it was intended to establish."

A famous boarder

Upon Jefferson's own election to the Presidency, he checked into a rooming house like an ordinary citizen and walked to his inauguration. Dinner was served before he got back to the rooming house, and there was no plate left for him at the table. History records that the new President went up to his room that evening without dinner.

In those days retired Presidents received neither a pension nor an expense allowance, with the result that some of our most revered chief executives were penniless and destitute after leaving office. Jefferson, whose landholdings were mortgaged to the hilt, considered for a time declaring himself bankrupt. Andrew Jackson was kept solvent by generous contributions from personal friends. James Monroe lost his Virginia estate to creditors and after the death of his wife in 1830 moved to New York to live with his daughter. Ulysses S. Grant had to support himself by writing his memoirs while he was suffering from cancer of the throat. Abraham Lincoln's widow had to plead with Congress to obtain a $5000 annual pension.

Going into the 20th century, Woodrow Wilson in retirement lived on his wife's income; Calvin Coolidge wrote a newspaper column and got a retainer as a trustee for a life insurance company.

It wasn't until 1958 that a law was signed granting all former Presidents a $25,000 annual pension, a $50,000 yearly fund to pay for staff assistance, and free office space and mailing privileges.

President Nixon started to dress the White House police in ceremonial uniforms in 1970 but was quickly laughed out of the idea by public reaction.

In addition, widows of former Presidents would receive a $10,000 yearly pension. In 1963 another modest and reasonable law, the Presidential Transition Act, authorized a $900,000 appropriation, evenly divided between the outgoing and incoming executives, to pay necessary costs of passing from one Administration to another.

The first three former Presidents who received government pensions and expense allowances during their retirement—Herbert Hoover, Harry S. Truman and Dwight D. Eisenhower—did not get any benefits from the Presidential Transition Act because the law specifies that ex-Presidents are to receive money only during the first six months after they leave the White House, and each of those three men had been away from Washington for many years by the time the statute was enacted.

I recall Harry Truman driving his car home to Missouri in 1953, being photographed in his shirtsleeves at filling stations, carrying his suitcases up to the attic. That was his transition. But his successors have made of it a multimillion-dollar affair.

Texas-size plans

It was Lyndon B. Johnson, famed for doing virtually everything on a grandiose scale, who really raised the ante. Johnson probably had less need for government assistance during his retirement years than any other President of recent decades because at the time he entered the White House he had amassed a family fortune reliably estimated at between $10 million and $15 million.

The first ex-President to enjoy the benefits of the Presidential Transition

Johnson took the outgoing Administration's share of $450,000, allocated 100 to his Vice President, Hubert H. Phrey, and proceeded to spend all of the remaining $375,000 by himself. Even Johnson couldn't spend the money in the six months specified in the law, so fellow Texans in Congress secured a one-year extension.

First, Johnson invested more than $1,000 worth of taxpayer funds in office equipment, including a $55 special computer-electric typewriter, two smaller models at $7120 each, $5890 worth of dictating and cribbing equipment, a $159 stapling machine, a $245 envelope opener and 45 "Destroyit" wastebasket that mechanically shreds used paper.

Johnson's staff

During that 18-month "transition" period, the government also paid more than $355,000 in salaries and fringe benefits to staff assistants working for Johnson in Texas and Washington. In five years, staff salaries and benefits averaged about $60,000 to $75,000.

During the four years between his departure from the White House and his death, Johnson drew more than $6,000 under provisions of the two laws designed to assist former Presidents. That figure almost equals the amount of benefits paid to Truman during a period of 16 years.

But Richard Nixon's original request for taxpayer support made Johnson seem modest. Sen. Joseph M. Montoya, New Mexico Democrat who is chairman of the Senate subcommittee which had to pass upon Nixon's claim, discovered that no fewer than 71 government employees, whose annual salaries totaled more than $883,000, had been assigned to Nixon's oceanfront estate in San Clemente, Calif., and the adjoining federal office complex. At Nixon's home in Key Biscayne, Fla., an additional five government employees were stationed—including a gardener and a Navy "mess steward"—and their salaries cost an additional $60,000.

A well-furnished home

The office facilities at San Clemente cost the taxpayers almost $526,000 to build and $219,000 to furnish while Nixon was still President. Included in that total was a den in his home furnished at a cost to the government of more than $4800. The full equipment inventory included 186 chairs, 21 davenport, 44 desks and 42 tables, but Nixon asked for an additional $105,000 to purchase still more office furniture and equipment. For example, he wanted 20 new typewriters, although 57 already were on hand in his working quarters.

Nixon's request for $850,000, which would have called for spending at a rate of more than $20,000 a week, was drastically slashed by both the House and Senate to $200,000.

President Ford, on the other hand, has retained an accessible, humble, folksy demeanor. The Presidential plane is again prosaically called "Air Force One" instead of the magisterial "Spirit of '76."

Ford appeared before Congress to answer questions like any earthly being. He goes up to Capitol Hill to attend, with his old Congressional buddies, meetings of the Chowder and Marching Club, where he is treated as an equal.

It would be too bad, however, if the rest of us, lulled by Ford's Trumanesque ways, failed to do our part to de-imperialize the Presidency, because our obsequious attitudes helped bring it on in the first place.

Suggested remedies:

1. Former Presidents should stop taking home public papers and treating them as personal property.

2. Let's also stop building modern pyramids in the form of libraries as shrines to ex-Presidents to enable them to go on playing President. To the extent that these shrines are supported by tax dollars, they ought to be stopped.

3. Let's put an end to tax-supported Presidential mansions across the land. The government already provides the White House, Camp David and access to Naval bases on the seashore. That should be enough.

4. Reduce the White House staff. Aides to past Presidents like Ted Sorensen and George Reedy see a direct relationship between the number of courtiers that insulate a President and his loss of touch with real events.

5. No more "Hail to the Chief." Let us do away with all musical heraldry for the President. He is the people's representative, not some medieval magnifico.

6. Limits should be placed on the ease with which a President can commandeer the television networks any time he pleases. This is an extra-Constitutional power which has been used too often for outright deception. It could be dangerously abused by a demagogue.

7. A President's control of our law enforcement machinery should be limited by a permanent special prosecutor. This would serve as a constant reminder that the President, too, is under the law.

8. The whole multimillion-dollar business of transition costs should be overhauled. Transition used to refer to helping the incoming President get a grasp on his responsibilities. Now it refers to cushioning the outgoing President's shock of becoming an ordinary citizen.

Ultimately, it is a question of the prevailing spirit around the President. Is he to be regarded—does he regard himself—as servant or master?

When an Administration witness recently justified keeping Nixon's valet on the public payroll on the grounds that the time Nixon saved by not shining his shoes could be devoted to the transition, it reminded me of an old Lincoln story.

The English Ambassador, it seems, was appalled upon entering Lincoln's office to find him stooping over a stool, shining his shoes. "Mr. President," blurted the Ambassador, "in my country, we don't shine our own shoes!"

"Oh?" replied Lincoln. "Whose shoes do you shine?"

Maybe it would be too much to expect Nixon to shine his own shoes, but I felt a twinge of loss when I heard that Gerald Ford has stopped making his own breakfast.

THE RISE OF PRESIDENTIAL PAY

The growing grandeur of the Presidency has been accompanied, especially in the second 100 years, by salary increases.

George Washington, who took office in 1789, was paid $25,000 a year, as were his successors until Ulysses S. Grant's second term, beginning in 1873, when the pay was doubled to $50,000.

In 1906, during Theodore Roosevelt's term, the President began to receive an additional $25,000 expense money. Three years later, with William Howard Taft in the White House, the pay scale rose to $75,000 plus the $25,000.

In Harry Truman's Administration the expense money was raised first to $40,000, then to $50,000 where it remains. His pay was increased to $100,000, beginning with his elected term in 1949.

With Richard Nixon's term in 1969, the pay rate jumped to $200,000, where it has stayed together with the $50,000 in expenses.

Citizen Harry Truman enjoys a stroll back in Missouri.

Keeping Up...With Youth

by Pamela Swift

Hottest Young Actress in Europe

A porno or semi-porno flick seems to be the fastest way to screen success these days. Linda Lovelace in Deep Throat, Maria Schneider in Last Tango in Paris, and now Sylvia Kristel, star of Emmanuelle, Europe's erotic-movie record-breaker which is heading for an American release.

Emmanuelle is so hot in Europe that it is showing in 31 cinemas in Paris alone to say nothing of London, Copenhagen, Hamburg and Stockholm. It is the story of a girl who specializes in seduction. Sylvia Kristel is the star of the film. She is a Dutch model of 24 who learned English by watching British TV series which are shown in Amsterdam with Dutch subtitles.

Since making Emmanuelle early this year, Sylvia has starred in three other films. She was scheduled for a fourth but canceled when she became pregnant by the man she's been living with these past two years, the Belgian novelist Hugo Claus, 45.

"I expect the baby in February," she says, "but marriage for Hugo and me is out. Marriage is a contract, and I don't break contracts ever. Some day I might want to break the marriage contract so why get married? Besides, in Holland, illegitimate children are treated just like any others. There is no stigma."

Sylvia claims that she has half a dozen film jobs waiting for her on the basis of her sensational performance in Emmanuelle.

SYLVIA KRISTEL

Rolling Is 'In'

The price of tobacco has become so astronomical overseas that Europe's young smokers are currently rolling their own.

At the moment the cowboy vogue has captured about five percent of German smokers in the 18-35 age bracket. In Holland every fourth smoker, and in Norway every second rolls his own.

Brand Loyalty

Female students are more committed to name brands when shopping for shampoo, perfume, deodorant, toothpaste and cosmetics than are male students, according to a recent study by Yankelovich, Skelly, & White, Inc.

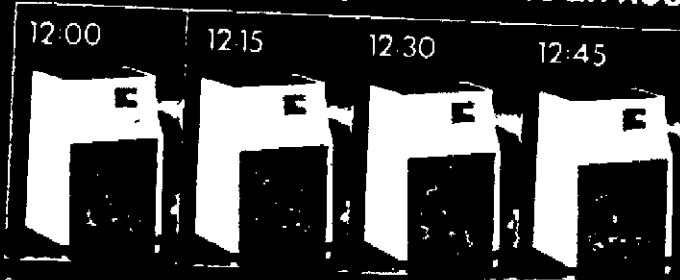

Can it be that young women are less adventuresome, curious, and risk-taking?

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT
ASKS CONGRESS TO DECLARE WAR

This series of major historical importance is limited to 25,000 in .999 fine silver at only $14.95 each.

"Yesterday, December 7, 1941
— a date which will live in infamy — the United States of America was suddenly and deliberately attacked by naval and air forces of the Empire of Japan." ...

Franklin Delano Roosevelt

When the raid was over, at 9:45 a.m., on an otherwise serene Sunday morning, 2,341 Army, Navy and Marine rps personnel were dead. ... But in the hearts of all Americans, still destined to live forever. And, beyond the death and the destruction emerged a new America—an America, united as never before and determined to defend democracy in its darkest hour of peril. Now, on the 33rd anniversary of that day of infamy, it is indeed fitting that we still "Remember Pearl Harbor" and the sacrifices made there for all of us.

A Magnificent Medallion Tribute to the Gallant Americans at Pearl Harbor

With this announcement, you now have the opportunity to acquire the First and Only Edition of Pearl Harbor Commemorative Medals authorized and approved by The Arizona Memorial Museum Foundation and struck in .999 fine silver. You further have a unique opportunity to contribute to ...

A Permanent Memorial to American Heroism

The Hamilton Mint is honored to be able to help build a permanent memorial in Pearl Harbor, Hawaii. Under the direction of The 46th Branch, Fleet Reserve Association, a portion of the sale of each commemorative set will go to the fund for the Development of The Arizona Memorial Museum. By purchasing this commemorative set you join the ranks of those who support this memorial and what it stands for. In addition, you bring into your home a rare and valuable collection in precious pure silver.

The Pearl Harbor Commemorative Collection

This historic collection consists of 28 superbly crafted medals, each medal being 1 1/2" in diameter and struck in .999 fine Silver. Each will contain 480 grains (a full troy ounce) of the finest silver available. And each is a glorious example of the engravers art with the sculptured bas relief portion in a mirror finish against a gleaming mirror finish background. The subject matter of each medal has been carefully selected to tell the whole story of this historic day: from the tragedy of the U.S.S. Arizona and other great ships of the Pacific Fleet to the devastation of Hickam Field, individual acts of bravery and the address of President Roosevelt to Congress asking for a declaration of war. The medals will be issued two per month and in 14 months subscribers will have amassed 2 1/2 troy pounds of .999 silver—more silver than the average person accumulates in a lifetime.

Your Personal Serial Number

Your medals will be minted expressly to your order and each will bear your own matching serial number along with The Hamilton Mint Hallmark. You will also receive a certificate certifying the precious metal content and limited edition status of your collection.

NEW!

TASTES SO GOOD THIS IS THE ONLY WAY TO GET IT

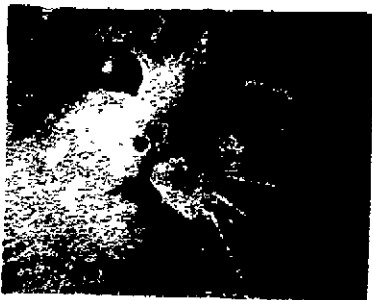

A Tasty Combination of 3 Separate Flavors

100% OIL

INTRODUCING MEOW MIX.

The cat food cats ask for by name.

While man may love his cat, man and cat do not speak the same language. The same can be said for woman and cat.

A situation which has given rise to all sorts of communications problems.

For example, over the years cats have been accused of being finicky eaters.

Well, maybe we've never really understood what they've been asking for. (After all, you'd be finicky too, if you had to put up with just one taste at every meal.)

So we at Purina have come out with a whole new way to feed your cat. Not just a new variety of cat food, but a cat food with real variety in it.

We call it Meow Mix.™

For the first time, a cat can get his three favorite flavors, tuna, liver, and chicken, in one package. They're in separate bite-size morsels.

The tuna is red  the liver is brown  and the chicken is yellow  So they look as different as they taste.

Now, your cat doesn't have to wait till his next meal for a change of taste, he can get it in the next bite.

Which should keep him biting. All day long.

It should also help keep him healthy. Because Meow Mix contains all the proteins, vitamins and minerals cats are known to need.

And Meow Mix even has something for you, convenience. There's nothing to mix. Just pour some Meow Mix into a bowl and the fresh, tasty morsels will stay fresh and tasty all day long.

From now on, when your cat meows, you'll know what he's asking for.

NEW STATUS SYMBOL

Do you have kidnap insurance for yourself and your family? That's the latest "in" status symbol. Lloyd's of London which has been insuring kidnap-ransom risks since 1933 offers the following coverage with a $2500 deductible: On a $100,000 kidnap-ransom policy the annual premium is $142.79; for a $500,000 policy it's $342.70; and for a $1 million policy the premium jumps to $514.06.

The conditions of the policy are that should a kidnap occur, you make every reasonable effort under the circumstances to:

- 1) Determine positively that the kidnapping of an insured person has actually occurred, and
- 2) Notify the FBI or the local law enforcement officers of the extortion demand and to comply with any recommendation and orders which they may give.

Lloyd's, of course, declines to divulge the names of any persons they've covered with kidnap insurance, believing that such clients would become the first targets of kidnapers.

DIVORCE RATE RISING

According to a new Census Bureau report, the U.S. divorce rate is going up and up. In the past four years it has increased as much as it did in the entire decade of the 1960's.

For example, in 1960 there were 35 divorced persons for every 1000 married persons living together. In 1970 there were 47 divorced persons for every 1000 marrieds. This year there are 63 divorced persons per 1000.

Why is the divorce rate booming? Largely because it's easier for married couples to obtain a divorce in this country than it ever was. Moreover, divorce is no longer regarded as a career deterrent. Ronald Reagan, Nelson Rockefeller, Marvin Mandel--countless politicians have proved that the electorate no longer holds divorce against a candidate.

SHOPLIFTING IN WASHINGTON

One of ex-President Nixon's special assistants, earning $36,000 a year, was convicted of shoplifting two shirts. A security director shoplifted $26 worth of cosmetics for a girlfriend, then was fired from his $30,000 a year job. A housewife was convicted of shoplifting a $10 scarf.

The list of these incidents is seemingly endless. They are discussed in a shoplifting study financed by the Metropolitan Board of Trade in Washington, D.C.

The study shows that between August, 1973, and July, 1974, merchants in the nation's capital lost an estimated $345 million to shoplifters, an increase of 46 percent over the previous year.

The study revealed that 55 percent of the thievery is the work of middle-income people; 20 percent is the handiwork of upper-income people, and the primary offenders are teen-agers (45 percent) and housewives (25 percent).

THE DUKE OF WINDSOR AND HIS WIFE, AT HIS RIGHT, WHEN HE WAS GOVERNOR GENERAL OF THE BAHAMAS DURING WORLD WAR II.

THE TRUTH ABOUT EDWARD VIII

Edward VIII, the King of England who gave up the throne for "the woman I love" in 1936, was a bit of a jerk. He was selfish, rude, inconsiderate, a penny-pincher, a pro-German, stubborn, opinionated, and suffered from a "flawed character."

This is the opinion of Lady Frances Donaldson who provides evidence for her charges in "Edward VIII," the newest biography of the late British monarch.

Edward almost never picked up a check in any restaurant. He would wait for someone else to reach for the tab. He cut down on the beer money for the help at Buckingham Palace. He saw to it that the Air Ministry was charged with the upkeep of a plane that "he continued to use... for the benefit of his friends and even for the importation of goods on which duty should have been paid."

Unable to tolerate criticism, he surrounded himself only with people who were friendly to Wallis Warfield Simpson.

Those who objected to her were cut out of his circle.

He was so careless with official papers and so pro-German that the Foreign Office screened various high-level diplomatic documents before sending him the red boxes.

As an administrator the Duke of Windsor was a catastrophe. During World War II he was appointed Governor General of the Bahamas, a nothing job. In a community overwhelmingly populated by blacks, he refused to allow blacks to enter Government House by the front door. When Sir Harry Oakes, the Canadian millionaire, was murdered in the Bahamas, instead of enlisting the help of the FBI or the British Criminal Investigation Department, the Duke requested that two detectives who served as his bodyguards on his vacations to Miami, be assigned to the case. It was never solved.

Pigheaded, spoiled, quick to criticize and reluctant to praise, Edward VIII may have done Great Britain a great service by renouncing his throne for love.

AL TROUBLE One of the major reasons recession is sweeping the Western world is that the nations which comprise it are compelled to spend such large amounts for oil. Money for oil means consumers are spending that much less at home for other products.

The International Monetary Fund (IMF) reports that the 14 nations of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries collected $25 billion last year for their oil and now hold almost 20 percent of the world's monetary reserves.

Saudi Arabia, piling up money at the rate of $2 billion a month, now ranks as the fourth richest nation in the world.

The Saudis at this writing have foreign-exchange reserves of $11.5 billion. West Germany leads with $32.5 billion of such reserves, followed by the U.S.A. with $15.7 billion, and Japan with $13.2 billion.

In another year if they can maintain their exorbitant oil price, the OPEC countries will add a minimum of $100 billion to their coffers. By 1980 this figure should skyrocket to $500 billion.

Some OPEC members, teeming with expanding populations--countries like Iran, Indonesia, Venezuela and Nigeria--can probably absorb their sudden wealth, but Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, and the sheikdoms of Abu Dhabi and Qatar cannot. The result is that they deposit their surplus cash in the banks of stable countries for short terms. The banks try to loan this money out for longer terms, and in some cases they cannot.

The oil-rich Arab countries have enough money to buy all the military weapons the Egyptians, the Syrians, the Palestinians, or the Jordanians need for any future war against the Israelis. They are also capable of enforcing another oil embargo against Western Europe and the U.S.

The Israelis know full well that time is on the side of the Arab nations, which is one reason why they may strike in a pre-emptive war. If the Western world accelerates into a deepening depression or war again breaks out in the Middle East, look to the price of oil as a major cause.

MUTUAL FUNDS Remember all those mutual fund advertisements of a few years ago? "If you invested $10,000 in our fund in 1949, your investment would now (in 1972) be worth $103,898."

What would your $10,000 be worth today if for the last 25 years you had left it in a savings bank or a savings and loan association at a daily compound interest of 5 1/4 percent? The answer is $37,152.23.

Can Your Complexion Survive Another Winter?

No matter how blustery or cold or snowy the weather, your day-to-day life goes on as usual. You still have to take your turn in the car pool. You continue to run in and out of stores doing the family shopping, before going off to a job, paid or volunteer. And how can you resist an invitation from your children, or your husband, to build a snowman, go tobogganing or have a rousing snowball fight?

Your skin is exposed to sudden changes of temperature as you move from the cold, wintry outdoors to the warm, sheltering indoors. Winter weather and its activities all conspire to rob your complexion of a measure of moisture, the moisture needed if you're to look as fresh, radiant and young as only you can. When moisture lessens, your complexion can become dry, and that dryness accents little lines and wrinkles to make you look older than need be.

Why let another day pass without discovering the secret benefits of an unusual beauty fluid, developed by beauty researchers to help women like you look their youngest. Women from Alaska to Sweden and beyond revel in the lovely secret of this blend, known in the United States as Oil of Olay beauty lotion. The remarkable formulation, available at drugstores, is compatible with the skin's own fluids and so cooperates beautifully with nature to soften and silken your complexion.

Your skin all but drinks in Oil of Olay. It quickly penetrates the important surface layer of the skin, carrying an abundance of pure moisture, along with tropical oils and other emollients to help maintain your proper oil-moisture balance, essential if you are to look your best. Oil of Olay also establishes a protective barrier to help retain the skin's own moisture, especially important in this season.

For the most quickly apparent results, dedicated users apply Oil of Olay at least twice each day. In the morning, as a quick-penetrating, non-greasy makeup base that lets cosmetics stay fresh for hours. Again at bedtime to allow the treasured fluid to work its wonders during hours of silent slumber.

Let your skin live in a moist and misty environment. Your complexion needn't know or show the ravages of winter.

Winter Beauty Secrets

When you come in from outdoors, smooth on Oil of Olay wherever winter clothing has rubbed roughly against your skin. Your complexion deserves extra pampering in this weather.

Some of the greatest pleasures of winter can be most distressing to your complexion. Sitting near a roaring fire is heart-warming, but complexion-drying. A little extra Oil of Olay smoothed on your face when the embers have cooled will be warmly welcomed.

my favorite jokes

EDITOR'S NOTE: "Much of my material comes to me spontaneously just like in dreams." Even in casual conversation Ed Bluestone demonstrates the workings of a wild imagination. "I have such weird dreams when I'm on a diet," he told us. "I had this dream that a steak landed on my bed. Tiny cows got out and then they got back in and the steak flew away. I found a plaque on my bed; it said: 'Giant step for livestock'."

Bluestone, five years out of college, has entertained at clubs like the Bijou in Philadelphia, the Possum in Boston, New York's Improvisation, and Catch a Rising Star, and on college campuses.

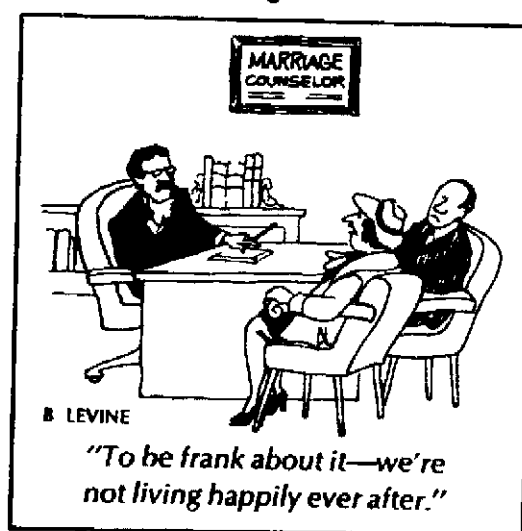

"I remember my college used to try new things to convince us they were academically innovative. One course was Chiropractic Criminology. It's the science of rehabilitating criminals by damaging their backs. Actually I remember best my philosophy course. We learned things like whether knowledge is intuitive or learned—the kind of things that come in handy if you're looking for something to think about in solitary confinement."

Here is some of Ed Bluestone's humor

I live in New York City on the West Side in a very interesting neighborhood. It's deteriorated to the point where you see alley cats wearing blond wigs.

My apartment is in one of the oldest buildings in New York. I find hidden clauses in my lease every week. Stuff like other tenants with Volkswagens can park in my apartment.

I flew to San Francisco recently and I was talking to the woman sitting next to me. She was very nervous because the last time she flew, her poodle froze to death in the baggage compartment. The airline tried to tell her that her dog had defective fur.

I've been to a lot of cities like Cambridge, Mass. Cambridge is super-intellectual. I was in a coffee house that has entertainment. They had a guy tap dancing to Dante's Inferno in Morse code.

And Philadelphia is really strange. They play chess differently there. One guy sets up the pieces and his opponent knocks them over with a basketball.

I'm writing a children's book about a porcupine who loses his needles—has to defend himself by hitting guys with a sewing machine.

There are many new stores on my street. There's one called "Beyond Organic Food." They sell synthetic food made by animals—stuff like saccharine made by bees, chocolate milk made by Swiss cows.

I have a lot of trouble establishing relationships. I'm always afraid people will think I'm going to be dependent on them, especially when they find out they're the only other person I know.

Some things to think about:

A man without principles has everything at his disposal.

Technology has brought meaning to the lives of many technicians.

Competition is a natural thing among plants, and nothing tops the excitement of a photosynthesis tournament.

The best thing about being self-employed is that you can humiliate your employee.

Without political bossism the average citizen would be paying off politicians who couldn't even help them.

Did you ever notice that the moment you become friends with someone is when you admit to each other that both of you dislike a third party?

Ten little losers, standing in a line. One bought our magazine. Then there were nine.

Al's $45 electric frying pan gave him a shock. Then Consumer Reports gave him another—by high-rating a safer pan that was priced at only $32!

Betty paid $30 for a car safety restraint for her child. But they almost had to restrain Betty when she learned the truth. Consumer Reports revealed the car seat she bought offered less protection than it should.

Carol studied the tourist guides. She studied the customs regulations. She even studied French. But if she'd studied Consumer Reports, she could have saved over $100 on her airfare by flying over just one day later.

Dora paid $26 for her steam iron. But she really got steamed when she learned about a Consumer Reports "Best Buy" for only $18!

Ed's new vacuum cleaner was priced at $349. But he felt he'd been sucked in when he read about a Consumer Reports "Best Buy" that listed for only $103 and cleaned carpets better!

Frank was a self-starter. Unfortunately, his new power saw came close to being the same. Consumer Reports could have turned him on to a safer saw that listed for $30 less!

Grace felt let down hard when the chair she'd glued collapsed. Too bad she didn't know Consumer Reports rated her glue OK for aluminum—but a bit weak for wood!

Henry believed in life insurance. So he bought $25,000 worth at an annual premium of $440. Too bad he didn't make it a policy to read Consumer Reports. It would have shown him how to buy the same coverage for only $320.

Irene bought a radio-phonograph console for $530. She never heard that Consumer Reports had turned up another model almost as good in tone quality for only $320!

Jim decided he'd finally had it with cold remedies that didn't cure, insurance policies that paid less than they seemed to promise, frozen shrimp that tasted salt-fishy and putrid, hammers whose heads chipped and flew at his face, and suitcases that couldn't take the gaff of being tossed around by baggage handlers. He subscribed to Consumer Reports.

Why, in a strike-torn world, are industrial strikes virtually unheard of in Sweden? Why do workers live longer here than anywhere else?

Is it because strikes are banned here as they are in South Africa? Not true. Is it because Sweden is a socialistic country in which the government owns all the sources of production? Sweden is ruled by a socialistic government, but 95 percent of Swedish industry is privately owned, 4 percent is government-owned, and 1 percent is owned by consumer cooperatives.

The answer seems to lie in what the Swedes call "industrial democracy"—an industrial revolution of sorts in which workers join with management in improving the quality of their work environment, the productivity of their labor, and the wealth of their nation.

Since April, 1973, for example, all companies in Sweden with more than 100 employees have been required to place two representatives elected by the workers on their boards of directors.

And not only are workers represented in management's major decision-making, they are gaining a greater say in how to make their daily jobs more meaningful, interesting, and emotionally rewarding.

Assembly lines have been redesigned to alleviate monotony. Jobs have been rotated, allowing workers to learn more skills. And workers have been allowed to form teams to increase productivity and foster a spirit of togetherness instead of alienation.

Are Swedes more open to democratizing work and redesigning jobs than are Americans? Is there some essential difference between Swedish managers and American managers?

More than survival

"I don't think so," says Pehr Gyllenhammar, president of Volvo, one of Sweden's largest manufacturers of automobiles, farm machinery, and engines. "It's largely that our young people coming into the labor market will not take jobs which don't provide them with a sense of achievement and personal satisfaction. They are seeking some purpose to their labor beyond mere economic survival. We have an unemployment rate at the moment of only 1.5 percent. In the United States it's a bit different. But eventually American managers will have to face the same situation—that of a highly educated young labor force earnestly seeking job satisfaction.

"Here at Volvo, in fact all over Sweden," Gyllenhammar points out, "we are trying to create small groups of workers who develop into skilled and proud craftsmen, small groups under one large umbrella—craftsmen who set their own work pace, their own coffee breaks. It costs more, but there's evidence that it decreases the rate of absenteeism."

Sweden's Newest Export—Industrial Democracy

By Derek Norcross

Pehr Gyllenhammar, Volvo president, inspects a Swedish auto plant where workers have a voice in management; this plan has cut employee alienation. Experiments in this field are underway in the U.S. and seem likely to spread.

Olof Palme, 47, who became Sweden's Prime Minister in 1969, is a tireless promoter of job democracy. "In this country," he explains, "we are not afraid of new ideas, of industrial planning, of experiments in labor. We want a more egalitarian society but we are not about to nationalize private enterprise. Our people believe in experimenting, in trial and error."

Workplace democracy is the subject of seemingly endless discussion in the Swedish press and on TV and radio. Even schoolchildren, when questioned about career expectations, say that democratic work organization is one of their vital considerations when it comes to jobs. Ordinary workers complain openly about excessive authoritarianism, rigid work hierarchies, and the terrible negation of spirit in performing the same dull job day after day. Many of the more educated workers can even quote from the late Frederick W. Taylor (1856-1915), the American time-study engineer who worked for Bethlehem Steel and espoused the virtues of mass production in these deathless words: "One of the very first requirements for a man who is fit to handle pig iron as a regular occupation is that he shall be so stupid and phlegmatic that he must more nearly resemble an ox than any other type of animal."

One of Sweden's major companies, Granges, which employs more than 25,000 workers in the steel, shipping, glass, plastics, and aluminum businesses, has adopted industrial democracy as official company policy. Johan Akerman, president, explains his corporation's new outlook this way:

"Today, young people don't want a job they can learn in half an hour and just stand there moving their hands according to some fixed schedule. They want to know what it's all about. We've got to give them a chance to be aware of what they are doing and to influence their own situation."

The key to Granges' approach lies in organizing work around small groups of men and women who are afforded maximum responsibility and freedom. At Granges' Oxelosund steelworks just south of here, the editor of the employee newspaper is free to print articles criticizing management, and he does.

A worker's view

"In my 10 years here," says one Granges worker, "the atmosphere has changed a lot. Now you have a real chance to influence things. People come here from other companies with old-fashioned ways, and they sure see the difference. There's a lot more openness. You aren't afraid all the time. You aren't afraid to take something up with management."

In Sweden's financial community,

Granges has on occasion been criticized for having abandoned the pursuit of profit. Akerman responds to that allegation by contending that profitability and industrial democracy are not incompatible. "Actually," he says, "we think it will improve the efficiency of the company and the contentment of the workers, and we see no conflict."

In other factories

Other major Swedish companies in the process of democratizing various work arrangements are Saab, the automobile company which has modified assembly lines at Sodertalje; Asea, manufacturer of electrical equipment which has moved its offices onto the factory floor so that white-collar and blue-collar workers now labor on the shop floor; Hollens Bruk, a paper manufacturer which has enlisted workers to help design and build a new paper mill; Volvo, the car manufacturer which has replaced its assembly line at Kalmar with computer-directed robots, each operated by groups of workers who assemble an entire auto; Scan-Vast, at whose meat-packing plant in Göteborg workers meet several times a month in "contact groups" of three to five people to plan work, analyze results, and troubleshoot problems.

Will these Swedish examples be followed in the United States? "Definitely yes," says Irving Bluestone, vice president of the United Auto Workers. "A society anchored in democratic principles would insure each individual the opportunity for self-expression and participation in the shaping of one's own life. There is every reason why humanizing the workplace should be undertaken as a joint, cooperative, constructive, non-adversary effort by management and the union.

"The initial key to achieving this goal may well be the open, frank, and enlightened discussion between the parties, recognizing that democratizing the workplace and humanizing the job need not be a matter of confrontation but of mutual concern for the worker, the enterprise, and the welfare of society."

Humane democracy

The UAW is participating with management in workplace experiments at several General Motors factories around the country. The union is also cooperating in designing new workplace arrangements at plants owned by Rockwell International in Michigan and Harmon Industries in Tennessee. If these experiments are successful, the UAW hopes they will convince other companies to democratize and humanize their factories.

What is happening in factories and offices in Sweden may foretell our future. America prides itself on its democratic principles. It is appropriate that these principles be extended to the workplace as the country nears its 200th birthday.

ONE OF THE NICEST CHRISTMAS GIFTS you can give is a candle you've made yourself. One of the most unusual and beautiful candles is the sand candle. These are great "natural" appearing candles that go well with today's "rustic" decor. (Wax, wicks, scents and colors are available at hobby stores in larger cities.)

- 1 The first step in making a sand candle is to fill a large bucket or tub with damp sand. The sand should be wet enough to mold easily with your hands.
- 2 Scoop out a bowl-shaped depression in the center. If you wish you can press some pretty rocks around the sides of the depression.
- 3 Tie a piece of wick to the stick and place the stick across the top of the bucket or tub and allow the wick to hang down in the depression.
- 4 Melt wax in a double-boiler arrangement and add scent and coloring. (CAUTION: WAX WILL BURN SO MAKE SURE YOU USE A DOUBLE BOILER AND WEAR GLOVES TO PREVENT SPLASHES FROM HOT WAX.)
- 5 Carefully pour the hot wax into the mold and allow to cool, then gently lift out the candle.
- 6 Gently dust off loose sand and tie a leather thong around the candle to suspend the candle from the ceiling.
